The environment of the young pioneer, however, could not quench her desire for knowledge, and from such few opportunities as fell in her way Miss Shaw educated herself sufficiently to begin teaching at the age of fifteen. Of a deeply religious nature and possessing remarkable ability as a public speaker she was granted a preacher's license while still in her teens by the Methodist conference of her district. A couple of years later she entered the theological department of Boston university, from which she was graduated in 1876. Her first pastorate was at Hingham, Mass., from which she went to East Dennis, where for several years she preached for both the Methodist and Congregational churches. During her pastorate at East Dennis Miss Shaw studied medicine at Boston university and received the degree of doctor of medicine. While pursuing her medical studies she practiced among the poor of Boston. Of this period of her career Miss Shaw once said:

"For three years I worked in the Boston slums, and my friends and I often have a laugh at my medical course. During all the time I practiced medicine I earned 10 cents; it was paid to me by an old dying woman, who would insist on my taking car fare when I went to see her. But though I did not earn money at medicine—and I did not go into it to earn money—I got other rewards that were much better. My time was fully recompensed by what I learned in those slums."

Although a small woman, the Rev. Anna H. Shaw has a commanding stage presence. She is thoroughly womanly in dress and manner, has white hair and dark eyes and possesses a charming personality.

A FIGHTING GOVERNOR.

J. K. Vardaman of Mississippi, Who Saved a Negro From a Mob.

J. K. Vardaman, governor of Mississippi, who at the head of the militia recently rescued a negro from an excited mob which had planned to burn him at the stake, has won the commendation of the entire country. Although elected on a strong antinegro platform,

J. K. VARDAMAN.

Governor Vardaman displayed an aggressiveness to save a colored man quite uncommon in the black belt.

Governor Vardaman is a young man and has only held his present office since Jan. 1. As speaker of the lower house of the legislature, however, he had already earned the reputation of being a wise legislator and was known as one of the most able and fearless newspaper men in the state. Until his inauguration Governor Vardaman had for years been editor of the Greenwood Enterprise. It is estimated that the governor's campaign to save the colored man from the mob will cost the state a very large sum.

Joy and Sorrow.

Joy, they say, is a sensation similar to sorrow. It merely hurts along lines that we enjoy. We go to the theater, weep over a teary play and are delightfully sad. Some people's greatest joy lies in being sad.

What a remarkably interesting study must humanity be to the scientists of the lower kingdom!—San Francisco Bulletin.

Red Pepper For Ants.

A small boy who lived with his aunt and grandma noticed that the regular black pepper shaker was filled with red pepper. This startled him, and, turning to his aunt, who sat next at the table, he said: "You better not eat any of that red pepper, Aunt Harriet. Grandma says that red pepper kills ants."—Christian Intelligencer.

A Soul For Poetry.

"Do you think a man ought to devote a certain amount of time each day to reading poetry?"

"Of course," answered the business man. "There's no excuse for not doing it. The modern advertisements are full of it."—Washington Star.

Lofty Literature.

An editor, in reply to a young writer who wished to know which magazine would give him the highest position quickest, advised "a powder magazine, especially if you contribute a fiery article."—Exchange.

Mommsen's "Roman History."

Some one has well said that but for the "Roman History" Mommsen would be a great man "taken on faith." That is probably true, but we have the "Roman History," perhaps the most remarkable piece of German literature written in the middle of the nineteenth century. It is a wonderful testimony to the power of humanity over humanity that the most human work which Mommsen wrote should be the most popular. The "Roman History" was the expression of the whole man, and if ever it should cease to have value as Roman history it will never cease to be of value as a spiritual document, as a picture of the hopes and ideals of Theodor Mommsen. By a happy chance when the book was brought into the world it appeared in the naked simplicity of its narrative without the swaddling clothes of footnotes and sources. The clear cut style showed forth to its best advantage. The world at large took its statements as faith. Scholars were at liberty to test them in other books of Mommsen himself or of other men.—Professor Jesse B. Carter in Atlantic.

"The Dog Will Have His Day."

In "Hamlet," act 4, scene 1, we read:

Let Hercules himself do what he may,
The cat will mew, the dog will have his day.

The latter line has become a popular saying, but we are naturally inclined to ask what it means. Why should a dog have a day all to himself any more than any other four footed creature? Is not the passage a piece of silly slang, and ought it not to be suppressed, like any other cant phrase that is born in the streets? To harmonize the verse with sense and Shakespeare a friend has suggested that the last word ought to be changed to bay. We should then read, "The cat will mew, the dog will have his bay." I have no doubt that Shakespeare wrote it so and that the word day is a misprint and nonsense. The analogy between the cat's mewing and dog's baying is self evident and intelligible.—Kansas City Independent.

Bismarck's Wonderful Eyes.

No one ever came into the presence of the chancellor without a deep sense of the mind power reflected from those large gray blue orbs. Their flashing brilliancy and the piercing penetration of the glances shot from them were never to be forgotten. They seemed incapable of expressing affection, and their steel-like hardness only inspired awe for the towering intellect, the irresistible will, the defiant courage, the fiery energy of their owner. To watch the lightning changes of expression mirrored in them, reflecting the strong emotions evoked by humbled pride, wounded ambition and thwarted selfishness, and, above all, by the loss of his absolute sway, was indeed an enviable privilege.—Henry Villard in Century.

The Jilt In Italy.

In some countries a betrothal is considered only a degree less sacred than a marriage and therefore a breach of promise, especially on the girl's side, is regarded as very shocking. This is very much the case in Italy, where a girl who after betrothal has changed her mind is known for life as a civetta (owlet) and has rarely another chance of matrimony. The term "owlet" conveys no idea of reproach here, but in Italy it is significant, because owlets are there used for insnaring other birds.

INCONSISTENCY'S HEIGHT.

Attitude of Our Government Toward Half the Population.

Is it not strange that men who look upon suffrage for themselves above all price and the denial of it the most severe punishment think nothing of denying it to women? They even go so far as to make women the butt of ridicule who happen to be brave enough to express a desire for this right of citizenship which is freely given to the most ignorant foreign man who comes to our shores.

If a man serving a term in state prison has a friend outside, that friend will get up a petition begging the governor to commute his sentence, if for not more than forty-eight hours prior to its expiration, so that when he comes out of prison he may not be compelled to suffer the disgrace of disfranchisement.

The penalty inflicted upon those who took up arms against their own country a few years ago was that of disfranchisement, but even that was felt to be too severe to be borne, and our government made haste to remove even from the leader of them all, this humiliation, this degradation, and again restored to them their right of United States citizenship.

How can men delude themselves into believing that what is ignominy unbearable for them is honor and glory for women?

We have become so accustomed to this inconsistency that we think no more of it than the Chinese do of binding the feet of their girl babies.

Here we have an educated, moral, lawabiding, taxpaying class of people who are deeply interested in all that pertains to the welfare of their country and are equally affected with the men by good or bad government denied all voice in its affairs, and all this under a form of government that has for its battle cry, "Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed." Can any one conceive of a greater inconsistency?

ELNORA MONROE BABCOCK.

No Fool.

"A least I am not a fool," he said, "for you know 'a fool and his money are soon parted,' a fact which leads naturally to the inference that the fool must have money, and I never had any."—Chicago Post.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured.

William Shaffer, a brakeman of Denison, Ohio, was confined to his bed for several weeks with inflammatory rheumatism. "I used many remedies," he says. "Finally I sent to McCaw's drug store for a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, at which time I was unable to use hand or foot, and in one week's time was able to go to work as happy as a clam." For sale by H. C. Giesler.

Scents That Affect Breathing.

The perfumes of certain flowers affect the digestion or breathing or cause dizziness and even fainting fits. Vanilla is troublesome to many, so is the white flower of the Ligustrum japonicum and the pitosperum. The tuberose, jasmine and lilac are objectionable to some. The Datura arborescens makes people drowsy. This action of flowers is due to the scent and is distinct from the influence of pollen, which produces hay fever.

A Favorite Remedy for Babies.

Its pleasant taste and prompt cures have made Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a favorite with the mothers of small children. It quickly cures their coughs and colds and prevents any danger of pneumonia or other serious consequences. It not only cures croup, but when given as soon as the croupy cough appears, will prevent the attack. For sale by H. C. Giesler.

Deacon and Elder.

Morrison—What is the matter, Dumley? You look terribly mystified. Dumley—No wonder. I was talking with Jinkins just now. We were speaking of the Joneses, and he said that the elder was the younger and the deacon the elder. I can't get at the rights of the thing to save me.—Boston Transcript.

Proper Treatment of Pneumonia.

Pneumonia is to dangerous a disease for anyone to attempt to doctor himself, although he may have the proper remedies at hand. A physician should always be called. It should be borne in mind, however, that pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of the grip, and by the proper treatment of these diseases a threatened attack of pneumonia may be warded off. There is no question whatever about this, as during the thirty years and more that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been used, we have yet to learn of a single case of a cold or attack of the grip having resulted in pneumonia when this remedy was used. It is also used by physicians in the treatment of pneumonia with the best results. Dr. W. J. Smith, of Sanders, Ala., who is also a Druggist, says of it: "I have been selling Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and prescribing it in my practice for the past six years. I use it in cases of pneumonia and have always gotten the best results." Sold by H. C. Giesler.

Weak Hearts

Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.

Mr. D. Kauble, of Nevada, O., says: I had stomach trouble and was in a bad state as I had heart trouble with it. I took Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for about four months and it cured me.

JOHN TURNER, ANARCHIST.

English "Red" Who Was Recently Released From Jail.

John Turner, the English labor organizer and anarchist who has just been released in $5,000 bail after a confinement of nearly five months on Ellis island, New York harbor, is the general secretary of the Shop Assistants' association (retail clerks) of Great Britain and came here for the purpose of forming an alliance of the labor movement of this country with that of Europe. He was detained at Ellis island under the law which provides for the deportation of anarchists.

Mr. Turner is not the typical wild eyed, shaggy haired anarchist, but on the contrary is of very mild aspect. In fact, the English "red" is a neatly dressed person of good education, pleasing address and easy manners.

But while all this is true Turner is well known to the detectives of Scotland Yard, who keep a pretty close watch on his movements, which implies that they do not regard him as a wholly inoffensive and harmless person. Turner a number of years ago succeeded to the editorship of the Commonweal, an anarchistic publication, when its editors were put in jail for advising the assassination of the chief justice of England. Later he was editor of another periodical of the firebrand order called Freedom.

Mr. Turner admits he is an anarchist in the sense that he believes justice and order and human happiness can best be conserved and increased by voluntary association and the abandonment of physical compulsion and the organized force known as the "state."

Mr. Turner denies that he ever advocated the assassination of any individual, whether private citizen or public official, and declares that he has never advocated physical attack upon the government of the United States.

Dante Rossetti's Practical Jokes.

One day Howell picked up a treasure in the form of a piece of old blue Nankin. He invited a party of friends to come and admire it, and Rossetti surreptitiously carried it home with him and invited the same party to come and view an equally fine piece of china in his own possession. But Howell had his revenge. Guessing what had happened, he found his way to Rossetti's hiding place, took away the china and put another dish in its place. When the party assembled Rossetti was challenged to produce the china.

He returned to the dining room with the package and began to carefully remove the wrappings. As the dish became uncovered a curious puzzled expression came over his face, and when it was entirely exposed to view he stood still in blank astonishment. For a few moments he was silent; then his pent up feelings burst out in a wild cry:

"Confound it! See what the spirits have done!"

Every one rose to look at the dish. A dish it was certainly, but what a dish! Instead of the beautiful piece of Nankin that was expected there was only an old delft thing, cracked, chipped and discolored through the numerous bakings it had undergone.

Seven Bells.

Everybody who knows anything about nautical matters understands the method of keeping time at sea—eight bells every four hours, an additional bell being struck for each half hour.

From 6 to 8 in the evening is the second dog watch, but on British ships seven bells (half past 7) of the second dog watch are never struck. All other ships, even the American, strike these bells.

During the Napoleonic wars there was a great mutiny in the British navy. The crews of the fleets lying at Spithead and the Nore agreed to rise simultaneously against their officers. The signal agreed upon was seven bells of the second dog watch. The mutiny actually began at the arranged time, but failed, the ringleaders being executed. Ever since then seven bells of the second dog watch has never been struck on British ships, naval or mercantile.

Immortelles.

The manufacture of immortelle wreaths in Paris occupies at least 1,500 persons. The immortelles are gathered about the beginning of October and come chiefly from the arid hills in the middle and south of France. They are brought to the markets in their natural condition, and the yellow blossoms are dyed green, red and white and woven into wreaths by special workmen in readiness for All Saints' and All Souls' days, when all good Parisians visit their relatives' graves. On these "fetes des morts" the gates of the cemeteries are beset with crowds of dealers in immortelle wreaths, wire crosses and bead crowns. At Pere la Chaise alone more than 200,000 persons are calculated to visit the cemetery, and the sale of immortelle wreaths varies from 20,000 to 25,000.—Golden Penny.

How the Chinese Beat Time.

A Chinese child is considered a year old at its birth, and its age is reckoned not from its birthdays, but from its New Year's days. If it is fortunate enough to be born on Feb. 1, the day before the Chinese New Year's day, it is said to be two years old when it is two days old. It is one year old when born, and another year is added on its first New Year's day.

THE BELLES OF JAPAN.

Ladies of the Island Empire Are Noted For Grace and Beauty.

The women of Japan, considered to be the most beautiful of the Asiatics, are small and graceful, not exceeding four feet four inches in height, and have beautifully formed hands and feet. The complexions of the young women and girls are clear and healthy, often of a childlike rosy hue, and vary from copper color to almost white. This latter color is considered an evidence of aristocratic descent. Their color is never yellow like that of the Chinese.

A JAPANESE BEAUTY.

The distinguishing feature of the native costume of a Japanese lady is the obi, or girdle. This is several yards in length and is wrapped around the waist and tied in a bow at the back. The holiday obi is very showy and ornate, and is made of beautifully colored silk and adorned with rich embroidery. It is almost the only part of the costume which gives scope for display, with the exception, perhaps, of the headdress.

This is a most elaborate affair and is built on a foundation of cardboard. The hair, well oiled, is drawn smoothly over the foundation, and into it are put flowers, combs, fancy pins and other small ornaments. The result is frequently an artistic triumph.

When the Japanese belle goes abroad her little feet are protected by wooden sandals two inches high. They are fastened with a white cord, which passes between the great toe and its neighbor and then crosses the foot. All who have visited the mikado's dominions agree that the Japanese belle is most charming to behold.

Oddly Marked Tombstone.

In an old graveyard in Maine the monument to the founder of a distinguished family is marked with the outline of a human leg. It is formed by black streaks in the granite running through the stone, for at the back there is another leg, but much smaller in dimensions. Nobody saw this blemish when the stone was set up. Not until years had passed did any one notice it. People concluded that the stonecutters, not wishing to go to the expense of quarrying out another block, so bid the leg with cement and stone dust that the actions of the storms of a dozen winters were necessary to expose the strangely formed disfigurement.

Soulanges Canal.

Soulanges canal, fourteen miles in length, is the largest waterway on the St. Lawrence system of canals and undoubtedly of vast importance to Canadian commerce. Many difficulties had to be overcome in its construction, not the least of which was to avoid upsetting the course of three rivers. This was accomplished by providing pipes, which allowed the rivers to pass under the canal. Needless to say, the canal is not a very deep one.

CURRENT EVENTS CLUB

Educational Unification Law. Mormon Church Polity. New Lines of Cleavage in British Politics--City Police Commended.

The Current Events Club met in regular session at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Tippy, on Monday evening, March 14. Messrs. G. G. Chauncey and C. C. Benedict were to have charge of the program for the evening, but Mr. Benedict was unable to be [illegible]

As a prelude, a resolution was adopted limiting the time of holding the sessions of the club to one hour and a half.

Mr. G. G. Chauncey, in taking the floor, regretted the absence of Mr. Benedict. He assured the members that many important events had transpired during the past two weeks in both Europe and America. The retirement of Lord Roberts from the military branch of the English service, the appointment of the Duke of Marlborough as Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, the adoption of the Educational Unification bill in our own State, and the selection of Andrew S. Draper as Commissioner under the new regime, were matters of supreme importance and were dwelt upon.

Mr. Chauncey asked Prof. Fairgrieve to kindly explain the intricacies of the new Educational Unification law and also give a history of the contention between the Regents and the State Department of Public Instruction.

The progress and final passage of the Unification bill was briefly outlined by Prof. Fairgrieve, who stated that two systems of public education had been maintained by the State—the one for higher and secondary educational interests and the other embracing the elementary schools. He credited the Regents with having developed the best system of education known in this country. The difficulty had arisen over the control of the State funds for educational purposes, amounting to several millions of dollars per annum. The movement was one in the right direction, as the purpose was to take the public school system out of politics, and the change could not fail to be beneficial, especially to the High Schools. He thought that Fulton should be prepared to take care of all the non-resident scholars who should desire to acquire an education in our city.

The Rev. S. D. Robinson and Messrs. Hunter and Duell made inquiries regarding the working out of the system, Mr. Hunter hoped that in the near future a new High School building might be secured and also that cooking and manual training would be included in the curriculum.

The Rev. James Vincent gave a most interesting epitome of the history of the Mormon Church, stating that the question before the United States Senate was not altogether Smoot's eligibility. An effort was being made to ascertain whether the Mormon Church had vitiated a contract made with United States when Utah was admitted to Statehood. A condition exacted was the abolishment of polygamy, but evidence adduced on the trial points to the fact that the officials of the Mormon Church had not only disobeyed the law, but had defied it. The treasonable conduct and utterances of the Mormons were sufficient to deprive them of all rights of citizenship.

The Rev W. L. Sawtelle called attention to the fact that there were two branches of the Mormon Church, viz.: the Latter Day Saints, who did not claim to be polygamists, and the Mormons who adhered to the practice. He had learned that the alleged missionaries of the church were most active in their endeavor to first secure converts to Mormonism. Polygamy was held in abeyance in the teaching, making it a later development.

The Rev. Mr. Richards stated that he had noticed that the confederation of Women's Clubs were desirous of incorporating in the Constitution of the United States an amendment prohibiting polygamy.

Miss Mabel Chesley gave a most comprehensive discourse on the fiscal policy proposed by Joseph Chamberlain and the effect it has had on the British Parliament and public. Mr. Chamberlain seeks to have a protective tariff placed on foreign manufactures; a schedule of duties which would protect British interests from unfair competition, and to encourage commerce within the British Empire, notably the colonies. Politics in England had taken new lines of cleavage, the parties being redivided into Protectionists and Free Traders, and the discussions were becoming most bitter throughout the country. The weakness of the Balfour government, Miss Chesley said, was causing grave apprehension to the party now in control of the administrative affairs of that country.

Mr. George Chauncey, in closing, paid a well-deserved tribute to the efficiency of the police force of the city of Fulton. As commissioner, he explained the difficulties presented in the organization of a force of six men to patrol so large a territory; the intelligence displayed by the men in the execution of orders, and the desire on their part to discharge their duties in a conscientious manner. Fulton had been pretty well cleared of vagrants and lawless characters. The closing of the saloons at the proper time had been readily complied with, and the police force was a credit to the city.

The next meeting of the club will be held at the residence of Mr. Earl S. Brown, on Monday evening, March 28. This change of program has been caused through the illness of Mrs. S. D. Robinson. The leaders will be the Rev. John Richards and Mr. J. H. Howe.

Fruit Growers' Association.

The Oswego County Fruit Growers' Association was reorganized in Oswego last week. There was a large attendance and the following officers were elected: President, D. D. Stone, Scriba; first vice president, E. D. Distin, Volney; second vice president, George Davis, New Haven; secretary and treasurer, A. C. Pease, Oswego Town.

It was the opinion of the majority that the prices of strawberries would be higher this year than any time during the past ten years, because the farmers have not been replenishing their beds. There was also talk of doing away with the present high side boxes and small crates and using the flat boxes and 60-quart crates. The argument in favor of this was that the larger crates stood the travel over the railroads better than the small crates, and that it took but five of the high side boxes to fill six of the flat boxes. It was shown that the farmers have been giving the consumers six quarts of berries when they have been paying for but five. No definite action was taken.

Everyone present spoke of the scarcity of help on farms and L. J. Farmer of Pulaski asked if it would not be for the interest of all concerned if farm owners would adopt the 10-hour system on the farms. He said that he had been thinking of importing about a dozen negroes from the South to work on his farms.

New Laundry Firm.

Messrs. Harry L. Platt and Louis Goman last week purchased the laundry formerly conducted by Mr. John McIntyre and they took possession on Thursday. Fulton Hospital Remembered.

Dr. C. J. Bacon has just received the following letter from Dr. William A Hall of Minneapolis, Minn., a former resident of Fulton:

C. J. Bacon, M. D., Fulton,

Dear Doctor: Although it has been nearly eighteen years since I left Fulton, her people and her institutions are still dear to my heart. I notice by your papers that you are about to open a hospital—an institution that will be of great benefit to your city and to the medical profession as well. I wish that you would write to me, giving what information you can regarding it, its corporate name, location and the date of the formal opening. I should be very glad to do something for it in the line of equipment for the operating room, in commemoration of the ten years I spent in Fulton. I will donate an operating table or a case of instrument, whichever you may prefer.

Hoping to hear from you at your earliest convenience, I remain, sincerely, WILLIAM ASBURY HALL.

HUNTER ARMS TEAM VS. ALL FULTON

Result of a Spirited Rifle Contest Last Wednesday Evening.

There was a spirited contest last Wednesday evening in the basement of the Fulton Fuel & Light Company's building between rifle teams captained respectively by Dr. H. L. Lake, composed of business and professional men, and one captained by Mr. George S. Lewis, embracing the best shots in the employ of the Hunter Arms Company. Dr. Lake's team won, and although the score was close, there was sufficient glory in the event to inspire Mr. Bell, the efficient superintendent of the gas plant and a member of the winning team, to make a diagram of the defeated candidates, placing their names on a board in about the order in which they appear below, but in a most diabolical manner exhibiting their scalps (improvised tufts of hair) in the front window of the gas office. It will be seen from a careful perusal of the schedule that Mr. Bell is possessed of one eminently practical idea, viz.: that the possession of a gas range is essential to a married man's happiness on earth and when he dies his successor, heirs or assigns will rise up and call him blessed. Mr. Bell also possesses a peculiar hypnotic influence over the good housewives of this community—few have been able to escape from the magic spell he weaves when he is discussing the excellent qualities of the gas range, in which he thoroughly believes and in the sale of which he is so deeply interested.

To each scalp of the window exhibit is attached one of the following cards:

SCALP of GEORGE S. LEWIS. Taken at the Massacre of March 16, 1904.
Last Words: "A gas range is the noblest work of man!"

SCALP of ROBERT HUNTER. Taken at the Massacre of March 16, 1904.
Last Words: "Oh that I had lived to own a gas range!"

SCALP of ISAAC CHAPMAN. Taken at the Massacre of March 16, 1904.
Last Words: "You love your wife? Then buy a gas range!"

SCALP of E. P. CLARK. Taken at the Massacre of March 16, 1904.
Last Words: "Every one should buy a gas range!"

SCALP of FRANK J. CASWELL. Taken at the Massacre of March 16, 1904.
Last Words: "Better lose a husband than a gas range."

SCALP of A. P. CURTIS. Taken at the Massacre of March 16, 1904.
Last Words: "Let me 'phone Bell [illegible]

SCALP of FREDERICK FOSTER. Taken at the Massacre of March 16, 1904.
Last Words: "Her second husband will enjoy the gas range!"

[illegible] of J. C. [illegible] Taken at the Massacre of March 16, 1904.
Last Words: "'Dulce est pro patria mori.' Those were the days before the gas range!"

SCALP of JAMES HUNTER, JR. Taken at the Massacre of March 16, 1904.
Last Words: "This is a regular skin game. Go buy a gas range!"

SCALP of HOWARD MORRISON. Taken at the Massacre of March 16, 1904.
Last Words: "Spare me till I buy a gas range!"

The names of the victorious "braves" were Dr. H. L. Lake, C. W. Tippy, W. J. Watson, F. L. Sears, Robert Bell, F. P. Keeler, Elmer Trombley, Bert Smith, C. W. Hobbie and Dr. R. B. Hubbard.

Gilbert F. Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., makes public the following letter from one of the most prominent men in Utica, N.Y., but who does not wish his name used publicly:

My Dear Sir: I received a sample bottle of Dr. Kennedy's new medicine, Cal-cura Solvent, a few months ago. I was greatly pleased with it, and decided to try a large size. I therefore purchased three bottles of Mr. Sheehan, and I am pleased to inform you that I have been greatly benefited by it and consider myself cured. If my kidney trouble ever asserts itself again (and I am sure it will not) I will not hesitate to continue the use of this grand medicine. I wish you would send some samples to the persons on the enclosed list. All are suffering from kidney trouble. Yours very truly, Colds Cause Pneumonia.

One of the most remarkable cases of a cold, deep-seated on the lungs, causing pneumonia, is that of Mrs. Gertrude E. Fenner, Marion, Ind., who was entirely cured by the use of One Minute Cough Cure. She says: "The coughing and straining so weakened me that I ran down in weight from 148 to 92 pounds. I tried a number of remedies to no avail until I used One Minute Cough Cure. Four bottles of this wonderful remedy cured me entirely of the cough, strengthened my lungs and restored me to my normal weight, health and strength." Sold by H. C. Geisler.

The Sanitation of Ant Cities.

Insects are scrupulously clean in their personal toilet and often brush, comb and wash themselves, a service for which they are admirably provided with natural implements. This habit is transferred to communal affairs. The streets within the city bounds and the gates and external plazà and "country roads" leading into the foraging fields, as with agricultural ants, are kept free from filth and obstructions that might gather filth. The constant washings and combings of baby ants by the nurses would satisfy the most fastidious maternal taste. One may not say that sanitation is an exact emmetonian science, but it certainly is an art thoroughly practiced in every department of the formicary and brought to perfection as far as natural conditions will permit. Every insect citizen takes part in this service. All ants unite to keep their civic precincts clean.—H. C. McCook in Harper's Magazine.

Catarrh and Hay Fever.

Liquid Cream Balm is becoming quite as popular in many localities as Ely's Cream Balm solid. It is prepared for use in atomizers, and is highly prized by those who have been accustomed to call upon physicians for such a treatment. Many physicians are using and prescribing it. All the medicinal properties of the celebrated Cream Balm are contained in the Liquid form, which is 75 cents including a spraying tube. All druggists, or by mail. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., New York.

Nature's Distillery.

Chemists at one time believed that petroleum was formed in the depths of the earth by the action of water working on metallic carbons in a state of fusion. Now that statement is challenged by some geologists, who contend that petroleum is the result of putrefaction of animals which ages ago were swallowed in enormous cataclysms, similar to that at Mont Pelee. This upheaval, says Professor Engler, buried millions of prehistoric quadrupeds, lizards, serpents and sea monsters, and during all the cycles of years that have elapsed since then the bodies of these animals have been distilled by Mother Nature in her immense laboratory beneath the earth's surface. The result of this distillation, according to this theory, is petroleum.

Albino Birds and Beasts Sacred.

It is noteworthy that albino animals are regarded by the Japanese in a superstitious light. The appearance of one is considered a good omen for the reigning mikado, and occasionally signalizes a reign. For example, one reign is called "hakuchi nenkan," or period of the white pheasant, another, the "haku boo nenkan," or period of the white phenix.—London Globe.

Do You Want Strength?

If you want to increase your strength you must add to and not take from the physical. In other words, the food that you eat must be digested, assimilated and appropriated by the nerves, blood and tissues, before being expelled from the intestines. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure adds to the physical. It gives strength to and builds up strength in the human system. It is pleasant to the taste and palatable, and the only combination of digestants that will digest the food and enable the system to appropriate all of its health and strength-giving qualities. Sold by H. C. Geisler.

Feast of Fools.

The best authorities agree that the origin of the ancient custom of celebrating a feast of fools is unknown. Some identify it with the Roman feast of fools on March 31. But why did the Romans institute the feast of fools? In India March 31 is "the huli festival," when all manner of pranks are played upon the heedless. But, again, where did the Hindoos get it? The French call the April fool "un poisson d'Avril" (April fish). To the Scotch he is a "gawk" (a cuckoo).

How Aerolites Were Once Regarded.

The phenomena of shooting stars and other luminous appearances in the sky long acted as stimulants to the superstitious fears of the multitude. A red appearance was a fiery sword dipped in blood, a sinuous wavy line a fiery serpent, a number of such lines a fiery dragon, a cluster of diverging lines a rod for the scourging of nations. As shooting stars were common in August, about the time of the festival of St. Lawrence, they were said to be "the tears" of that martyr.—Notes and Queries.

THE WOMEN OF COLORADO

Queer Reasons Given For an Attack on Their Use of the Ballot.

Lyman Abbott has remounted his pet hobby of attacking women by sending one Elizabeth McCracken out to Colorado to hunt up antisuffrage arguments. This, although not very high in purpose, is better than dreaming and theorizing. He publishes her articles, which is largely composed of gossip of railway stations and such like public places, in his own paper, the Outlook. She says she gathered her material during a stay of a few weeks last winter in Colorado.

She makes five points against equal suffrage: (1) The excitement of politics is an undesirable thing for womankind. (2) They do charity work to get votes. (3) They hug babies to get votes. (4) They do not stop strikes, which has discouraged very much a man in Colorado City. (5) They make politics a personal matter, which has so irritated a Denver ticket agent that he can no longer be civil to women traveling.

We might say that the excitement of politics is as healthy as that of bridge, baccarat, flinch, dancing, flirting, gossiping, etc. We might also add that doing charity work and hugging babies to get votes is as safe as kissing men to get votes, which has been done by women who are not voters in England and elsewhere; is as safe as influencing men to secure the passage of favorable laws, and we might conclude by saying that the discouragement of some men over woman's achievements with the ballot as well as the irritability of other men compelled by them to be civil is to be expected.

But Lyman Abbott—that is to say, Elizabeth McCracken — concludes that by ten years of voting the women of Colorado have lowered their ideals and dulled the delicacy of their perception between right and wrong and inflicted a heavy blow on womanhood. This conclusion certainly does not follow from the points she makes. We happened to be in Colorado for some months during this same winter. We saw the women of Colorado in their homes, churches, benevolences, courts of justice, clubs; we saw one woman at work politically; we asked questions of women and men, but we discovered not a hint of lowered ideals or blunted moral senses. In fact, we found the very reverse, but then we were not sent out by Lyman Abbott on an antisuffragist hunt.

But Lyman Abbott—that is to say, Elizabeth McCracken — ought to be ashamed to publish such a mess of anonymous gossip as an argument against equal suffrage. The testimony is given as that of "one woman," "another woman," "a third woman," "more than one woman," "an earnest advocate," "two ardent women," etc. Not once is a name mentioned. It is all general, vague, anonymous, ambiguous. We do not say that E. McCracken is slandering the women of Colorado by her presentation of their case, but we do say that if she wished to slander them this is the very mode by which she could safely proceed to do it. The path of the anonymous is the path of the whisperer and the backbiter. It is considered by all honest men and women as wholly unworthy of attention.

It is but fair to say that Mrs. McCracken recognizes the uncertainty of her position and salves her conscience by remarking at intervals that perhaps ten years is too short a time to enable any just and fixed conclusion to be drawn therefrom. It is also amusing to see that at last the antisuffragist has been compelled to admit that Colorado women do vote, that thereby they have power not possessed by women who are disfranchised, that they have used this power for the good of both state and nation and that the woman of skill is in Colorado possessed "of unquestionable importance in the public affairs of both city, state and nation."

The inference that political liberty may injure woman morally is of a piece with the old argument, now dead, that education would injure woman physically. The former will soon be as dead as the latter.

J. O. STEVENSON.

A Noble Worker For Woman.

Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson has just passed his eightieth birthday. He has achieved fame in literature, in reform work and in war, although, perhaps, he would prefer that the last should be included under "reform," for it was as an abolitionist that he took part in the civil war as head of the first colored regiment. But the greatest distinction of his life, as history will look at it, is that he is one of the very few men that thoroughly identified himself with the woman suffrage cause. He signed the call for the national woman's rights convention in Worcester, Mass., in 1850. In 1855 he officiated at the marriage of Lucy Stone and Henry B. Blackwell, making it thoroughly an equal rights affair. When the Woman's Journal was founded, in 1870, he was one of its editors and remained such for fifteen years. It meant something to the movement that a writer who had the attention of the world should give his best to a paper devoted to woman's cause. To women struggling for their rights it means much that a warrior for freedom should consider their political freedom worthy of his sword of chivalry and justice. And so we all greet and thank Colonel Higginson.—Woman's Tribune.

They were discussing the labor question. "I believe in shorter hours," said Mr. Linger. "So do I," replied Miss Keedick earnestly. "I think an hour and a half is plenty long enough for an evening call." And the young man had been there three hours.

SENATOR DEPEW ON THE NAVY

A Masterful Argument For the Continuance of Its Upbuilding.

Hon. Chauncey M. Depew made a speech in the United States senate on March 5, when the naval appropriation bill was under consideration. His remarks in part are as follows:

Mr. President—I have listened with great pleasure, as I always do, to the speech of my friend, the senator from Georgia [Mr. Clay]. He seeks to separate the distinguished secretary of war from my own state, who recently retired from office, from the Republican party on the question of the retention of the Philippine Islands. My own impression is that if Mr. Root shall, as he doubtless will, during the coming campaign, give a full exposition of his views from the platform and not in the way in which an interview often misstates a man's opinions, it will be found that he does not differ from the line in which the Republican party has acted and, I think, will continue to act. To use a common phrase, the American people are not "quitters." They never yet have given up anything which they deemed it advisable to obtain.

I am not at this time going into a discussion of the reasons why we will find stronger arguments every year for establishing closer relations with the Philippines, but I will say that I believe no one now living will see those relations weakened. I believe that the extraordinary progress which has been made by those people, as testified to by Governor Taft, in education, in civilization and in the industries, will continue with accelerated speed as the schools become more numerous, the education more general and the communication between the United States and the Philippine Islands more constant and rapid. I do not think we yet fully understand two things—first, how much the Philippine Islands are to be advantageous to us in their own development, what they are to grow to when they have absorbed the spirit and are putting in practice the principles of American liberty, American law and American enterprise, and the other, that we cannot yet comprehend until the war clouds in the far east are over and years have passed by the increasing importance to the United States on its commercial and industrial side of the possession of those territories, with their harbors and their depots so near to that market for which all the world is contending.

The senator from Georgia was very vigorous and forceful in demanding that there should be universal investigations of the operations of the government. He was alarmed for fear that in all the departments there is either extravagance or corruption, which, he said, should be disclosed and corrected by an investigating committee on the part of congress. He took the ground that now there is no supervision, no care or attention of the operation of the great departments of the government. But, sir, every penny which is expended by these departments has come here and gone to the other house before appropriated. The appropriation, finance, ways and means, the naval, postoffice and military are all of them investigating committees in perpetual session. Upon every one of them is a minority membership, selected by the minority, of members on their side, who are most competent to serve their party as well as their country upon these great committees.

They have the opportunity for months, as the programme comes in from the postoffice, navy, war and other departments, to look at each one of the proposals for the future and to examine what has been done in the past, and if the committee dared, which it would not, refuse an inquiry as to any item or as to any officer asked for by a minority member, a senator or member can go before the house or senate explaining that he has been denied the privilege as a member of a great committee of receiving information or making an investigation which he wants, and neither house would for a moment stand before the country as obstructing any such inquiry.

But, sir, there has been an inquiry—an inquiry not made by an investigating committee or on the initiative of the Democratic members of any committee, but an inquiry made by the president of the United States, when the disclosures might bring disasters to his party, upon the principle which he has always maintained—of finding rascality if there is any and punishing the rascal when he is caught.

There have been several speeches made in both houses assailing the good faith and the earnest intentions of the president in this regard, but he has moved forward on his motto that no guilty man should escape, regardless of criticisms or complaint.

He set the whole machinery of justice at work, and the result is seen in the indictment of men in high position in the government and out of it, and a few days ago in the illuminating exposition in this District of the conviction of men who had for years under all administrations had the confidence of the department and, as far as they were known, of the country.

But, sir, I intend to make a few remarks upon the broader subject which was so ably discussed this afternoon by my friend the distinguished senator from Georgia [Mr. Clay]. The present naval bill provoked much more debate in the house of representatives than it has done here. The general charge against it has been very much on the line so vigorously portrayed by the senator from Georgia against the size of this appropriation and the dangers of its increase in the future.

Mr. Clay—Mr. President, I spoke entirely in regard to what should be the size of our appropriations in the future. I said I did not believe we should continue at the rapid rate we have been going during the last six or seven years, and I did not speak against the passage of this bill.

Mr. Depew—I accept the correction. I misunderstood the senator. But certainly in the other house the objection was of that character.

Now, I find no fault with rigid economists in public life. I believe in the "watchdog of the treasury." It is a most disagreeable and unpopular position, but it is one which ought to be held by somebody in every deliberative body. No matter how rich we may be, and our wealth is constantly exploited, it is no reason for extravagance or foolish or unwise expenditures.

But, sir, we have been liberal in every direction and especially in those directions about which complaint is made that in order to take care of the navy we are neglecting internal improvements and the construction of public buildings. We have been engaged for years in the most liberal expenditures for rivers, harbors and bays. We have made those expenditures, though they are entirely local, out of the treasury of the whole people and out of taxation of the whole people because we believed that it is the duty of the government to promote navigation and safe carriage of our goods everywhere in the country.

We have gone a step further and made large appropriations for irrigation in territories which are sparsely inhabited, which will never have large populations, which 90 per cent of our people will never see, because we believed that what was for the benefit of one part of the country was the benefit of all and that if we could bring vast regions of desert into productive agriculture we would be accomplishing a good result in the increase of wealth, the opportunities for homes and employment and the good living of our citizens.

We have made like appropriations with great liberality for the construction of public buildings all over the country until the criticism has been made that many of them are beyond what the needs of the localities are or ever can be.

Every great power has found it necessary to provide protection for its commerce, its foreign trade, its ports and its people doing business or traveling in other countries. We have become a great power. It is not an idle expression; it is a fact. We today line up alongside of the five great powers of the world. We have assumed responsibilities by this expansion from which we cannot escape and ought not to if we could.

Therefore it is incumbent upon us to act on the lines of the nations which are our rivals and competitors and whom we hope to keep our friends. We are free from invasion. Nobody supposes for a moment that it would be possible for any nation to send here an army that could secure a foothold upon our land. Our forts in our harbors and our submarines are protection for our coasts, and the volunteer army, which is always ready on call, would annihilate any army which any fleet, if by possibility it reached our coast, could land upon our shores.

But, sir, we are and have become within a few years, in being a world power, subject to perils and conditions which never existed before. We have obligations to the island of Cuba, where we have said to the world, "We will protect her against assault or invasion, against any attack upon her independence or the integrity of her territory or her institutions. We have Porto Rico, which can be defended only from the sea, as Cuba can be defended only from the sea. We have Tutuila, Guam, Hawaii and the Philippines, far from the United States, all of which must be protected from the sea.

But we have assumed another obligation which is much greater, and that is the isthmian canal. We have the longest line of seacoast of any power in the world except one, 7,000 miles, and in addition to that Alaska. Alaska is growing in wealth and in population to an extent which is enlisting attention everywhere, and has to be defended from the sea.

But, sir, the isthmian canal has opened a new era for America and the world. Already the treaty has been signed, the negotiations have ended, the commission has been appointed. We are to establish soon a government upon the tract ceded to us and assume the responsibility for order and law. The spade is on its way. The steam drill and the dredge will be heard within a few months. One of the most inspiring lines of literature is Emerson's, "Here once the embattled farmers stood and fired the shot heard round the world," and the sound of the dredge and the drill on the isthmus will be heard around the world because it is to alter the paths of commerce and to change the relations of nations.

The future of the Monroe doctrine is in the custody of our navy. Its peaceful recognition will be the tribute which other nations pay, not to the doctrine, but to our sea power.

We do not appreciate until we study the subject that the acute commercial jealousies and alarms which now exist in Europe against us will be accentuated by the construction and completion of this canal. Not alone our states on the Pacific, but the whole line of ports on the Atlantic coast, will come into this competition, for the ports on the Atlantic coast will be as near in miles to Japan, China and the orient by the isthmian canal as are the reservoirs that gather for distribution abroad the products of continental Europe or London through the Suez canal.

We all remember that during the Spanish-American war the prime minister of Austria did his best to bring about a holy alliance against us among European powers because of what he termed an industrial invasion which threatened the living of the people of the old world. He failed in forming that combination because of international jealousies, but with the opening of the isthmian canal those jealousies are to increase, for the highly organized industrial nations of Europe are now making so much more than they can consume that they must have either a congestion of population and production, with its result of desperation, poverty and anarchy, or they must find markets. There is only one market which is free, and that is among the dependent peoples of Asia and Africa.

Now, when through the isthmian canal all products of the industrial energies of this country can reach that market just as quickly and cheaply as can the manufactures of the old world, then, sir, will come a competition which will be most acute because of the skill of our artisans and business talent of our people. There will be no difference between it and competition between individuals. We all know what competition means between men, firms or corporations, and in the progress of civilization all great nations have become business concerns, each looking in a materialistic and business way for the production of manufacturing and agricultural products which shall give employment to and support its people and a market for the surplus of those products.

Now, sir, we cannot protect that commerce by an army or treaties alone. We cannot protect our commerce and expand our trade by arbitration at The Hague alone. We can only maintain our commerce by having a sea power adequate for its protection, for the security of our islands and to prevent a hostile fleet from destroying in a week the isthmian canal after it has cost us $200,000,000 to $400,000,000 and ten years to build—a sea power, sir, which will not be aggressive, but will stand for and keep peace. Our peculiar position gives us a stronger place on the ocean than any other country because we are less vulnerable upon the land. If we have a sea power so that our floating fortresses will be second or third in rank, no power, no matter what its industrial or diplomatic jealousies or its aggressive tendencies, no matter what its feelings beneath its professions, will ever incur the peril of a contest when there is so much to lose and so little to gain.

Mr. President, every year by the natural increase in population and the tremendous immigration which is pouring in upon us we are stimulating our industries and our productiveness beyond that of any other nation in the world, and that stimulation increases a surplus for export which will grow larger as the years go by. Unless we can carry out the broad policy of expansion of markets, which has been so successfully pursued up to the present hour, there is danger to our business, employment, wages and peace.

Mr. President, I do not mean that we shall secure more outlying territory. I do not think the occasion will ever arise, so far as at present the situation is visible, where we will need or accept other lands. But I do mean that we shall if possible have a mercantile marine some day or other. I do mean that we shall have a navy adequate to protect our commerce all over the world, our people everywhere and the outlying territories we possess. I do mean that we shall follow continuously, from our executive and state department, the line upon which the notes of Secretary Hay to the foreign powers for the open door and the integrity of China against partition proceeded and that this will continue to be a policy for the benefit of the growing commerce, industries and productiveness of the United States.

We all remember, who were in Europe after the formation of the German empire and who had the opportunity of knowing, what were the views of that greatest statesman of the German race, Bismarck, that at that time he saw infinite peril to the German people because the increase of population and productiveness was so far beyond their home markets that he said he saw a congestion which might lead to a social revolution unless outlets could be found. So he sent his agents all over the world looking for territories which could be acquired or settled in South America or carved out of Africa or Asia for German colonization and for places where the productive German cradle could find homes and happiness.

He was followed by Emperor William, one of the most enlightened and farsighted executives who ever inherited a throne. He saw these conditions, and he improved upon them both in the German mercantile marine and in the German navy. Under the inspiration of his energetic genius, under the inspiration, if you please, of his impulsiveness and strenuosity, the German mercantile marine has received encouragement from the government by which within ten years it has grown from a very small place until now it ranks next to Great Britain. Its mighty steamships have their full share of the carriage of American products, and in every sea and in every port and in every trade in the world is found the subsidized ship of the German mercantile marine.

Coincident with that this enlightened and farsighted emperor has taken up the question of the navy of Germany. Germany is a most economical country, and yet the German navy, under the pressure of the enlightened opinion now shared universally by the intelligent and progressive people of that country, has risen from a low rank within ten years to be third in equipment and power.

I was in England some years since when a wave of pessimism was rolling over Great Britain and pervading parliament. The general opinion was that the expenses of the naval armament were in excess of the needs of the country and a burden which could not be borne by the British taxpayer. That sentiment affected the budget. The admiralty could not get from parliament what it asked and required.

There appeared at the time a book, and I am free to say that no book ever published from a private citizen and an ex-officer produced such an immediate impression upon the naval powers of the world as the "Sea Power" of Captain Mahan. It had the widest circulation and was generally read in Great Britain. Newspapers took it up. It became the talk of the clubs, the drawing rooms and the workshops. The debate was enlivened in parliament. I heard men of the highest distinction, from royalty down, talk with enthusiasm of the revelations and teachings of this book and the wisdom of acting upon its suggestions. Very soon a new programme was adopted by Great Britain, a programme which provided that, no matter what other countries might expend or do, Great Britain would always have a fleet equal to the combined fleets of the two largest naval powers.

We have given our thought and energies mainly during the 117 years of our organized existence to the development of our territory and its settlement, to invention and manufactures, to the building of railroads and canals and to developing and encouraging our internal commerce, and we have paid very little attention to the sea.

Our position upon the sea has been spasmodic and not logical until within the last fourteen years. Whenever we have been forced upon the ocean the record of our navy has been brilliant and glorious. The story of our ships with John Paul Jones in the Revolution; Hull, Decatur, Perry, Lawrence, McDonough, Rogers and their associates in the war of 1812; Farragut, Porter, Foote and others in the civil war, and Dewey and the Santiago heroes in the Spanish war has proved that upon the sea we only need the ships, for we have the officers and the men.

But, sir, after the war of 1812 there was little done for our navy. The old frigates whose names and victories were the inspiration of all of us in our school days and are still war cries on battleships and cruisers went into dry dock and were either broken up or became practice vessels or museums. Then when the civil war came suddenly upon us we bought everything which could float, much of which was only fit for the scrap heap. It is admitted that what that navy did during the civil war was one of the principal means in bringing it to a close, and if we had possessed at that time a navy adequate to out needs it would have ended much sooner, notwithstanding that it was an internecine conflict and mainly upon land and carried on under conditions which could never exist in a war with a foreign power.

After the war we sold most of our fleet and devoted ourselves to recuperation, to repairing the losses and disasters of the strife, and paid little attention to our navy.

Then came the Spanish-American war. We had progressed somewhat in the naval programme then, or I do not know where Dewey would have been or how we could have conducted the Cuban campaign. We had not the proper armament in our forts. We had nothing adequate in our harbors in the way of torpedoes, submarines and the like. If that war, coming up in a night, had been with Germany, Great Britain or France our situation would have been deplorable. Happily for us it was with a nation which could not compare with us as a sea power, and therefore its fleet was quickly destroyed.

Now, sir, the situation is changed. We have a programme which was adopted some fourteen years ago. It has been pursued with reasonable consistency up to the present time. It has given us ships which have raised us from the twentieth in rank to the fifth, and with the ships in course of construction and the programme carried out which is in this bill we will be second in sea power.

One of the most valuable presentations made on this question has been the very able speech of the senator from Maine [Mr. Hale], the chairman of the committee on naval affairs. But I will go for an instant outside of the limits of the official statement into the general character of this question.

The necessity for a navy which will place us third or second in rank I have already in a measure outlined. It takes five years to build a battleship. It takes a proportionate number of years to build armored cruisers, torpedo boats, submarine boats and torpedo boat destroyers. A navy cannot be extemporized or constructed in a day or a year.

I have no doubt, in addition to the tariff walls which have been put up all over Europe against us and which prevent further expansion of our trade on the continent of Europe, that Mr. Chamberlain will succeed in England. I think he will be defeated in the next general election, but the sentiment will grow, and there will be a short life for the party which comes into power on the old free trade programme. Mr. Chamberlain will find himself in five or six years, with an increased majority behind him, coming into power on an entire reversal of the traditional policy of Great Britain.

The example of the United States, the tremendous development of our resources and industries by reason of the protective tariff and our enormous growth in wealth because we have made America for Americans, have already made Germany, France, Russia, Italy and Austria adopt the protective system.

Their tariff walls are raised against us because the enterprise of our manufacturers and the skill of our artisans and cheap transportation are making our competition dangerous. When England reverses her policy, when she ceases to be a dumping ground for our surplus, when her ports are no longer open to our cereals, our fabrics in cotton and wool, our manufactures in wood and steel, when she enacts a tariff which will keep her factories going and her own workmen employed at living wages against foreign producers, then we will find that the American business man, the American factory, the American farm and the American workingman will demand that we enter those markets of the east which will not be opened and kept open for us except by an adequate navy.

I do not know what will result from this war between Russia and Japan. We are taking no part with one side or the other, but we do know that whatever happens is of infinite moment to us.

Ten years ago, from a commercial standpoint, we would not have cared what happened to China. Today what becomes of that ancient empire is vital to American commerce, industry and trade. If Russia should succeed, for instance, and take Manchuria, which is a large portion of Chinese territory, with its millions of people, with what Great Britain, Germany and France have sliced off from that country; if in the general adjustment there should be further division and occupation, it would all mean that other doors were to be closed and other barriers to be raised against American production and its entrance into those markets.

So our policy is and must be to maintain as far as possible the integrity of China and her autonomy. We are going to be consulted when that time comes and this Russian-Japanese war is over, no matter which side is the victor. We are to be consulted because the adjustment is not to be made nor to be permitted by the rest of Europe to be made by those two powers, but by a European congress, the same as it always has been.

My observations on this question are based upon broader lines than the possibilities of our going to war. They are based upon the position which the United States will hold among nations so jealous of one another that our friendship, even in a moral way, will be eagerly sought.

The partition of China is not to be done without immense friction. It is not to be done without tremendous antagonisms among European nations. Why are they now accepting a very unpopular note from Secretary Hay and assenting to it when we have no adequate navy? It is because none of the great powers of the world wants any irritation of any kind with the United States, even with her present equipment, for they recognize our boundless resources.

To return, Mr. President, from the politics of the world to the construction of our navy, we all know that a navy cannot be built in time of war. We all know what supreme folly it is to wait for that. We can raise an emergency army in a month, but it takes five years to build a navy.

I remember being in the executive mansion at one time and in Mr. Lincoln's office when a telegram was handed to him which gave the information that a brigadier general, through foolishness of an extreme sort, had been captured down in Virginia. In his command was a long train of pack wagons and mules. Mr. Lincoln read the dispatch and then took up his pen and said, "With that pen I can make a brigadier general in a minute, but I cannot replace those mules."

Now, some one in the exaggeration of American description has said, while that may be true in the creation of brigadier generals, it takes forty years to make an admiral. We must have, if we are to occupy the position which seems to be admitted on all sides to be ours, the ships on which the future admiral can be trained. Our navy happily differs from every other navy in the world because it has developed a democratic tendency. There is no navy except that of the United States where the sailor has the incentive to work because he can reach a commission. But with us the sailor is trained so completely in every branch of the service that if he has the genius, industry, temperance and ambition he rises through the several grades until he gets his commission.

We all know that during the Spanish-American war when we endeavored to secure additions to our navy there were no ships for sale. One of the most interesting competitions in trade which ever occurred was between the United States and Spain in trying to buy warships. We knocked with a golden fist on the doors of every navy department of every nation, great or small, and the answer of all was, "No matter how much we want your money, it takes us too long to replace a ship, and you cannot have it." Finally we discovered there were two building in the shipyards of England for a South American republic. I happened to be in London at the time, and the amount of diplomatic business and trading ability which was brought to bear, each bidding over the other, surpassed anything I had ever seen before in any trade. Of course the Yankee talent for barter came out ahead, and we got the ships, but the Spaniard ran us a much closer race in trade than he did on the sea.

We know that in the present war bot Russia and Japan tried to buy warships, and in the whole world there was only one available.

I agree with what the senator from Maine has said in regard to our position of neutrality in this war, but the fact cannot be concealed that every man, woman and child in the United States is lined up on one side or the other in this fight, as Americans always are. When there is a fight on, no matter what it is, whether a battle between nations or a strife between parties or a contest between individuals or baseball or football or a horse race, Americans instantly take sides, and they are lined up on one side or the other of this contest. But so far as we as a nation are concerned our position has been expressed by the president of the United States in his proclamation, and we unanimously approve his action. Behind that we individually can say what we like.

Now in this connection, for I had hoped that my friend the senator from Maryland [Mr. Gorman] would enlighten us as the leader of his party in regard to the views of the opposition upon the naval programme this afternoon, I beg to call attention to a speech which he made on Feb. 4, which created a great deal of comment in this country and interest abroad, as the utterances of the distinguished senator always do. He said:

"Mr. President, an overgrown navy, an unnecessary navy, an unnecessary army, mean what? It is inevitable that the officers, the admirals without number and captains too many to be counted in the great fleets which are unnecessary for our protection will find a way to make trouble. It appears to me that the action of the commander in chief, the president of the United States, in the occurrences now upon the orient in moving that unnecessary fleet from the presence and from the very ground where a conflict, if it comes, is likely to occur, was a wise precaution. There was more statesmanship shown in that act than in any other order issued to the navy. It was done so that we might be kept out of what, as everybody thinks, was the desire of the patriotic and brave commander of that fleet to participate.

"We have naval vessels everywhere. Have you not enough now? Everybody will answer 'Yes,' unless it is true, as was floating around in high naval circles, that we are marching around the globe with a chip on our shoulders looking for the one great nation that troubles us more than any other in our trade relations to get up some trouble. Who wants it?"

Mr. President, there is nothing in the history of our new navy, begun by my valued friend, that eminent New Yorker who recently died and whose death is a loss to the country, William C. Whitney—there is nothing in the history of our navy under its expansion by Republican presidents, nothing in that navy as it appears today in all the waters of the globe, which justifies a suggestion that the warships of the United States are cruising about the world with chips on the shoulders of their admirals, their commodores and their commanders seeking trouble. I know of no trouble which we have ever got into by the indiscretion of officers of our navy. They receive a training which is so perfect, an education which is so complete, they pass so many years in the Naval academy and then so many years as subordinate officers before reaching supreme command that they have the age for command and the conservatism of age and experience.

No matter how large our navy, wherever it is it will stand not for war, but for peace. No matter how great our navy, it will stand not for aggressiveness, but for defense. I do not believe that the admiral of the fleet in the eastern waters was seeking for trouble or would have involved us in a war with any nation out there or into taking sides with either of the combatants even if he had not been ordered away. We have twenty-four great ships now in those eastern waters in the neighborhood of the hostilities, and we can absolutely trust their commanders, while preserving the honor, the rights, the trade and the territories of the United States, not to invite trouble with anybody.

There is no better insurance policy than a navy. I am a believer in insurance. In a free country, where institutions rest upon the people and opportunities are alike for all, every schoolhouse, every church, every asylum, every college, every hospital, every influence of every name, nature and description which educates the young or looks after those who are invalided and helpless is an insurance policy of a high kind for the safety, the peace, the good citizenship and the future of the republic. A large navy adequate to the needs of the country, which is strong enough both to protect and defend it, is a minister of peace.

In these days, I would say to my friend the senator from Colorado, with the tremendous results that follow war, no nation is going to seek war unless it is to gain more than it is to lose. We are to be aggressors nowhere. We are to be assailants nowhere. We simply, when we have the power, are to say what our rights are, and we will state them so conservatively that they will not be denied if we have the navy. But if we have not the navy, no matter what we assert, it will be denied.

Wars arise in a minute, and, as I said before, it requires years to build a navy. Our Spanish-American war came on overnight almost. Nobody anticipated it. The Japanese-Russian war, each side complains, came on unexpectedly when they were negotiating. I will tell a little incident, and I do not vouch for its absolute accuracy, though I received it from a distinguished man who was in every way credible, which illustrates how a hair's breadth stands between peace and war.

I was told by this gentleman that when President Cleveland's Venezuelan message arrived in London one of the strongest and most eminent members of the British cabinet said:

"This evinces a disposition and a desire for war. If a war is to occur between Great Britain and the United States and if the feeling of that country is as evidenced in this message, then the time to fight is now. America has no navy that cannot be swept by us off the sea in a few months. Her ports have no forts. They have no guns. Her harbors are unprotected by torpedoes or any other appliances. The war would be a calamity beyond any which has ever occurred in history and would leave both nations harmed to a degree that the imagination can hardly picture. It would set back civilization, but it is the time, if war is inevitable, when Great Britain can fight successfully for a peace with honor, because the Americans will appreciate soon what a sea power is, and when they do the United States will be the most formidable power in the world because of their inaccessibility upon land."

Now, that statement, so I am told, was overruled by the unanimous judgment of his associates and by the unanimous feeling of the British people that they would have good relations with the United States under any circumstances. But the incident shows, if the incident was as narrated by my friend, that there stood just a hair's breadth between peace with honor, as it came in the arbitration which we brought about, and the most disastrous war of modern times, with the United States absolutely unprepared.

My friends the enemy have frequently assailed the president on account of the danger to the country with a great navy in his hands. Through several speeches which have been made there has run that current that it would be dangerous to place in the hands of the president a naval power such as we will have when the ships now under construction are completed and this programme is carried out.

Mr. President, I want to say that, with all the wonderful accumulation of epithet with which this phrase of unsafety has been sent over the country and repeated in the two houses of congress over and over again, there is nothing in the utterances or in the acts of President Roosevelt which justifies the charge. He had the opportunity, with the whole country behind him, to make trouble at the time of the Canadian arbitration if he had chosen. Suddenly there had been discovered within the disputed territory untold wealth in the mines, and thousands upon thousands of American citizens had rushed up there and accumulated great interests and made large investments.

The whole country stood by the president in maintaining the line we claimed, which brought these rich mines and this valuable territory under our flag. It would have taken but little to have stood firmly for our rights and to have said, "We yield not at all," and a less wise and more impulsive and impetuous president would have seen there the opportunity of arousing the enthusiasm of the country for his course. But the president laid that aside. He suggested and secured arbitration.

When the Alaska boundary commission, upon which were the very able secretary of war, the very able senator from Massachusetts and the very able ex-senator from Washington on the one side and the equally able and distinguished commissioners on the other, with that great lawyer and judge the chief justice of England, met in London the whole country looked on at this mighty contest of testimony and of law.

We have sent abroad at different times in our history several commissions who discharged their duties with distinction, but none displayed higher judicial temperament and judgment or won more important results for our country than this one on the Alaskan boundary.

When the trial was over and the judgment rendered, nothing in modern history so excited in all countries among right thinking people greater gratification than that event and its example. The country will and the country does owe to President Roosevelt a debt of gratitude for the wisdom and the patriotism with which he initiated and carried to a successful conclusion that arbitration.

Mr. President, nations change rapidly. There is no telling what may occur in the realignment after the closing of the Russian-Japanese war. There is no telling what may be the position of Japan. Thirty-eight years ago I was appointed minister to Japan. You would not think it to look at me. [Laughter.] I did not go, happily for me, but I was confirmed by the senate and studied the question for months. It took then, thirty-eight years ago, six months to get there. It now takes six weeks. Japan at that time was in the feudal condition of Europe in the twelfth century. She had no navy except junks. Her army was equipped with spears and bows and arrows and clad in armor. Thirty-eight years have passed by since the opening of Japan at that time, and she has been studying the methods of western civilization so completely that she has advanced as far in thirty-eight years as Europe did in 600 years.

Now she has a representative government, a constitution, a parliament, universal suffrage, colleges and schools and a free press and railroads, telegraphs, telephones and electric lights, and an army built upon the plan of and quite as efficient as that of Germany and a navy built upon the plan of and quite as efficient, as far as it goes, as that of Great Britain. She advanced because her people saw if they were to keep up with the rest of the world, now that they had become part of its activities, they must follow the example of the successful nations and get abreast of the best. She saw that while in her isolation she might live in her old way, if she became a power of the world she must have its tools and weapons, intellectual and physical. She saw the necessity of a naval power, and she began ten years ago to develop both her mercantile marine and her navy.

In doing that she secured for herself commerce and markets for her products and a naval power which has enabled her to arouse the wonder of the world for the last few weeks. In the alignment of nations a government with a possibility of 300,000 troops against a government with 3,000,000 seems to be nowhere and would be nowhere if the contest was on land. But the command of the sea illustrates what Captain Mahan has said—that it is the sea which will govern the world for the future—and if the command of the sea proves complete then this war is to result in conditions which will be the surprise of everybody.

Now, as to our ability, we are a nation of 80,000,000 people. According to Mulhall, we have $127,000,000,000 of wealth. Great Britain has 42,000,000 people and $65,000,000,000 of wealth. France has 39,000,000 people and $54,000,000,000 of wealth. Germany has 56,000,000 people and $45,000,000,000 of wealth.

The commerce exports and imports of the United States last year were $2,4[illegible]000,000, of Great Britain $4,000,000,000, of France $1,669,000,000 and of Germany $[illegible]453,000,000. Germany is under us by $[illegible]000,000, and France is under us by nearly one-half.

And yet the cost of the navies now on the sea and in course of construction are $629,000,000 for Great Britain, with one-half of our population and less than one-half of our accumulated wealth; $327,000,000 for France, with less than one-half of our population and less than one-half of our accumulated wealth, and $182,000,000 for Germany, with less than three-quarters of our population and less than one-half of our accumulated wealth.

The actual cost of the vessels in commission and those that will be when the present construction is carried out for the United States against the figures for these other countries will be $182,000,000. The United States now occupies the fifth place, with 294,405 tons as against 387,874 for Germany, 416,158 for Russia, 576,108 for France and 1,516,040 for Great Britain. When the vessels of all nations now building are completed, then Great Britain will have 1,867,250 tonnage, France 755,757 and the United States 616,275, and, while the United States will be in the third rank, Russia and Germany will be very close to us. There are 723 battleships, armored cruisers and other cruisers and scouts above 1,000 tons built and building belonging to all the nations of the world. Of this number the United States has ninety-three.

It has been one of the claims of all writers on the monarchical side that republics, where the people govern, will not have that high appreciation of international relations which maintains the national honor. I have read repeatedly in nearly all English newspapers when there has been the election of a workingman or an extreme radical a prediction that if his party got in power Great Britain would lose her place among the nations by cheeseparing policies and legislation on finance and industry which would result in the loss of her prestige and power and the decline of that commerce upon which she depends. But, sir, the United States stands as a living refutation of all those charges. Our appropriations are upon a scale of liberality unequaled in history, but justified by our resources.

We have spent $450,000,000 for the improvement of our rivers and harbors, $150,000,000 of it in the last seven years. We have appropriated more in the last ten years for the improvement of our rivers and harbors than the entire cost of our navy, both that already afloat and that which will come out in the next five years from our shipyards.

Republics are not ungrateful. We are paying $140,000,000 a year in pensions to the soldiers and their widows of a war which ended forty years ago. We are paying it cheerfully and gratefully. The time is not distant when there will be added $30,000,000 or $40,000,000 for a service pension, and then we will be paying to these heroes who saved the country and to their widows a sum greater than the cost of the active army of any great nation in the world and a sum equal to the present cost of the American navy, with that added which is now in the shipyards. The cost of the active French army is about $14[illegible]000,000 and of Germany $129,000,000.

At the same time we have, with great liberality, built public buildings everywhere. We have established and are establishing forest reservations for the preservation of our magnificent domain of the woods and for the protection of farms from the floods which come from denuded hills. We have wisely appropriated some twenty odd millions of dollars for expositions which were purely local in their immediate administration upon the ground, and the wise ground, that by bringing anywhere the products of other countries for the study of our skilled artisans and the exhibition of our skill for other countries we were promoting the best interests of the trade, commerce, employment and happiness of our people.

Mr. President, I have talked longer than I intended, but I have been helped by so many to extend the time that I think I may be excused. But I trust that I may be permitted to offer a fervent aspiration that after this programme of naval equipment is completed, this programme of naval equipment which, in my judgment, receives the almost unanimous approval of the American people, then we shall enter into some enlightened system, I care not much what it may be, by which we can have a mercantile marine that will save us from paying $200,000,000 a year to foreign ships to carry the products and the merchandise of America, while we are paying $100,000,000 a year for a navy which could be happily employed in conjunction with our mercantile marine.

The American flag is seldom seen in any port or on any sea or navigable water of the world except upon a fighting ship. We are in every sense a peaceful and a producing people. We are not a fighting nation except under necessity and provocation and for defense. Our clipper[illegible] over fifty years ago were the fast[illegible] sels afloat, models for other [illegible] carried 60 per cent of our [illegible] Now only 8 per cent goes under [illegible] ican flag and 92 per cent in [illegible] sels. Those who have watched the trend of events in city matters, have only the highest praise to accord City Attorney W. S. Hillick, for the able manner in which he has conducted the law affairs of the city since his appointment. Mr. Hillick has been conscientious in the extreme in the discharge of his professional duties and he has proven to be a conservative, wise and faithful counsellor.

OHIO has broken off her bad habit of holding Spring elections when everybody else is thinking about other things and will henceforth join in the vociferous jubilee of November.

HEARST'S capture of the Rhode Island delegates has caused consternation in the ranks of all the "regular" candidates. Meanwhile Hearst is complacently marching on.

SECRETARY TAFT says that five million of the Filipinos are Catholics and it should be our ambition to make them good Catholics. We should not treat them as a conquered people, but encourage them to read the Declaration of Independence and help to become enlightened.

THE telegrapher at Springfield, Ohio, tells us that "the best and most respectable people took part in the lynching." It would be interesting to know what the worst and least respectable people of Springfield look like. And this is the "Champion City"—champion of brutality and barbarism.

THE path of the Republican party from this day till the day after election is straight and smooth. The effervescence in Ohio, New York, and some other states is only a sign of popular interest, rather than discontent. Differences of opinion concerning non essentials bring out the vote on election day.

A CURIOUS coalition is proposed between the Prohibitionists and their natural foes, the Democrats. The Prohibition leaders are booming Gen. Nelson A. Miles to be nominated at their Indianapolis convention on June 30th. Then they want the Democrats to nominate him and think the way to election will be clear.

THE contest is on in Alabama between Merrimac Hobson and Congressman Bankhead, and the welkin rings whenever Hobson opens his mouth. He is for a twenty-billion-dollar navy and he doesn't begrudge a single dollar of it. Bankhead lies low and stays in Washington and trusts his people. The race is nip and tuck.

A WITNESS named Harmer was before the Senate Committee on Mormonism; said he was a bishop for five years, but was sent to the penitentiary in 1899 upon conviction for adultery, and lost his good standing. The conviction was based on his having two wives and he was prosecuted by Senator Smoot, who sent the sheriff to arrest him.

SOME of the freshmen who were branded by the sophomores at Cornell will wear their scars for life, and blood-poisoning is feared in some cases. The college bulletin says "a number of the second-year men will undoubtedly be compelled to leave the university as a punishment for their offense." Indeed! This is a terrible retribution. We assume that it is resorted to because the idiot asylums and penitentiaries of that vicinity are full.

On Thursday night snow fell to the depth of four inches. The weather records show that a year ago on that date the thermometer stood in the 70's with no snow in sight. Spring must be here, as the robins and blue birds sure harbingers of that welcome season have arrived in numbers, but the six-foot snow banks on every side lead one to think that perhaps we will step from Winter into Summer without any season when "the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love". Perhaps this is a wise provision, as it is leap year.

Russians, Japanese and Koreans

The Soldiers of the Land of the Morning Calm — Dragomiroff and Stoessel, Two Celebrated Russian Generals—Interesting Phases of Torpedo Warfare. Consul General Uchida and His $5,000,000 War Fund

If it be true that Korea is to aid Japan in fighting Russia, her assistance is likely to be of little value to the mikado. Korea has a population estimated at about 11,000,000 and on paper has a standing army of 25,000 men, a part of which has recently been reorganized and equipped and drilled in European style. This body numbers several thousand men, and they are armed with the Gras (obsolete pattern), Murata, Martini and a variety of muzzle loading rifles and smoothbores. Their shooting powers are indifferent, and they lack, besides, the qualities of courage and discipline.

A KOREAN SOLDIER.

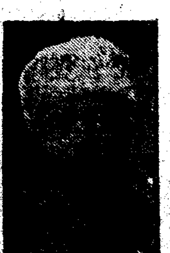
There is no artillery, and the cavalry arm is confined to a few hundred men with no knowledge of horsemanship and as little idea of weapons or their duties. The army has numerous general officers, of whom General Prince Min Yun Huan is the commander in chief. He has had no opportunity to display his soldierly qualities, if he possess any, and even if he has ability can do little with his troops. In the illustration the soldier is shown wearing a new uniform recently adopted by the emperor's bodyguard.

Lieutenant General A. Stoessel, commandant of Port Arthur, is a German officer who has spent many years in the military service of the czar. He was born near Magdeburg, Germany, and lived there for some time. Later he went to Russia and entered the Russian army as a volunteer in the engineer corps. He distinguished himself in the war with Turkey and rose rapidly in the service. During the military operations in 1900 resulting in the relief of the foreign legations in Peking General Stoessel planned a very important movement, the success of which materially assisted in the capture of Tientsin. His command crossed the Lutai canal on a pontoon bridge under fire and captured a number of batteries after losing 150 men. He was conspicuous in the remainder of the campaign, and his men fought side by side with the Japanese. Not long ago General Stoessel in a proclamation to the troops at Port Arthur said, "We must fight to the finish, as I, the commandant, will never give an order to surrender."

GEN. STOESSEL.

General M. J. Dragomiroff, the most distinguished military authority in Russia, who recently insisted that both the fleet and army evacuate Port Arthur, was for years the most conspicuous commander in the army of the czar and at the time of his retirement the most popular soldier in the empire.

Dragomiroff's fall from favor was due to the harshness of his criticisms. He never wearied of denouncing the weakness of generals who think of loss of life in battle. The soldier must be made familiar with death, he said; must always be prepared to die. His favorite observation was that the Russian soldier is an automaton, standing fire like a hypnotised person and awaiting orders like a slave.



GEN. DRAGOMIROFF

The brutality of Dragomiroff offended many of the highest officers, and it is said that they intrigued against him when he was chief of the Kiev district. He offered opportunities for revenge when in his cups, for he was a hard drinker and when intoxicated abused the highest and lowest. In 1892 the czar ordered the minister of war to reprimand him for a breach of etiquette. The reprimand arrived at Kiev while Dragomiroff was drunk, and in the presence of several officers he cursed and ridiculed the minister of war. His retirement followed. He was afterward restored to favor and is a member of the military staff of the present czar.

The Japanese sailors lead the world as torpedo fighters, and naval experts agree that the daring and skill they exhibited in the handling of their torpedo fleet at Port Arthur will mark every naval engagement of the present conflict. Even should they meet the Russians in the open sea, they are expected to use their torpedo boats.

In France and England the importance of torpedo boats in modern warfare has been recognized by the expenditure of huge sums on them, and they lead the world in this class of craft and torpedo boat destroyers. The torpedo boat destroyer primarily is what its name indicates. Its mission is to hunt the torpedo boat and put it out of action.

Torpedo boat destroyers are provided with torpedo tubes, so that they can do the work of the torpedo boat as well as exterminate it. England counts her torpedo boat destroyers equal to if not more important than the torpedo boats.

Japan at present has seventeen torpedo boat destroyers, most of them built in England during the past five years. They have a length of from 210 to 220 feet and a displacement of 285 to 380 tons. They have a speed of thirty to thirty-one knots and are armed with one twelve-pounder and five six-pounder quick firers. She also has a fleet of fifteen destroyers now in course of construction.

M. Sadazuchi Uchida, Japanese consul general at New York city, who is at the head of the movement of the Japanese colony to raise a $5,000,000 war fund, was appointed to his present post six years ago and, next to the Japanese minister at Washington, is the ranking diplomatic official of the mikado in this country. Both he and Mme. Uchida speak English fluently, and their only son, Isao, eight years old, goes to an American school.

S. UCHIDA.

Mme. Uchida is very fond of America, prefers American clothes to her native dress and has adopted the customs and ways of this country. She paid a visit to her native land two years ago, but says she was glad to get back to New York again.

Isao, although the smallest boy in school, stands at the head of his class. He was born in Korea and named Isao, which means "a man of credit," because his father received distinction in connection with the war with China, in which he took part.

One of the most powerful instruments of destruction used in modern naval warfare is the Whitehead torpedo. The most heavily armored battleship is not proof against it, vigilance being the only safeguard.

A Whitehead torpedo, the kind used by the Japs at Port Arthur, is cigar shaped, made of steel or bronze, and is from fourteen to eighteen feet long and from fourteen to eighteen inches in diameter at the head, its thickest part. The charge of 200 pounds of dynamite is in the head and is exploded by means of a rod driven against a detonator by impact against a ship or other solid object.

Just behind the explosive is a strong steel chamber containing air compressed to 1,500 pounds per square inch, and this escaping under control furnishes the motive power for the propellers, which drive the machine through the water at a speed of nearly thirty miles an hour. The most wonderfully ingenious thing about it is the gyroscopic controlling device for the rudder, which not only accurately keeps the torpedo pointed at the target, but promptly corrects any accidental deviation.

The torpedo is fired from the bow, stern or side of a vessel, either from a submerged tube or from a tube on deck. It is ejected by compressed air or powder, the driving mechanism being set in motion at the moment of launching. Its effective range at present is about 1,500 yards. After the torpedo is once started there is no known defense which an attacked vessel can interpose. Nets have long been obsolete.

COLORADO'S JUSTICE

A STATE WHERE WOMEN ARE NOT CONSIDERED A CALAMITY.

Ex-Governor Alva Adams Declares That the Centennial State Does Not Regret Granting Equal Suffrage to Women.

The following is taken from the address of the Hon. Alva Adams, ex-governor of Colorado, before the National Woman Suffrage convention, recently held in Washington:

I hold no office and am seeking none and at my own expense have traveled 2,000 miles to be here today. These facts should be valid vouchers of my sincerity and good faith.

Colorado does not go into mourning when a girl is born.

Equal suffrage has not taken Colorado out of the Union. She stands an example of what a sovereign state should be—a model to those self righteous states that preach equal rights in press, pulpit and forum and deny it in the law.

In Colorado the statue of Justice that crowns city hall, courthouse and capitol is not a lie. For the capitol in Washington and in forty-one states of the Union the figure of St. Paul would be more fitting than that of the Goddess of Liberty. Unfettered by tradition and prejudice, Colorado has dared to do right. She has given to woman what Solomon gave to Sheba—"whatsoever she asked"—and she has no regrets and no desire to recall the gift. After ten years of experience equal suffrage in Colorado needs neither apology nor defense. No harm has come to either woman, man or the state. Justice never harmed any one.

Woman has not yet conquered iniquity in Colorado, nor has it conquered her. Suffrage is not a revolution; it is but a step and not the end of the journey. The ballot has not changed her nature. She still recognizes that raising bread and babies is a part of the divine command, but these duties are not the whole of life. She uses the ballot to protect her property, her home, her children. It has broadened, not impaired, the woman. It has not taken the flavor from the lips of a Colorado sweetheart; it has not darkened the glory of the Colorado mother, who is as sweet and gentle and refined as any woman who ever sang a lullaby over a cradle or blessed a fireside with her love and devotion. They have made no effort to upset the universe. They are cleaning one room at a time, not trying to right the wrongs of a hundred years in a day. Women may not have suffered, but there is a moral uplift, an inspiration, in the recognition of her equality. To the free the world is different; the sky is clearer, the air more exhilarating. She is a partner in the government; her home is a full and equal partnership affair, not a corporation where the man holds all the stock and does all the voting. She is a part of things, an individual and independent. This is everything. Our homes are the "Home, Sweet Home," of other days, with the added interest and inspiration that a free, self respecting, equal womanhood can give.

Women have not mired in the pool of politics. She is purifying it. She has raised the atmosphere of the polls without lowering herself at the polls. Women are as free from insult as in the vestibule of a church. Genuine respect and deference for woman is a western trait. In the wildest and most lawless mining camp of the Rocky mountains the coroner's jury would return a verdict of suicide over the remains of a man that had insulted an honest, virtuous woman. Now and then a woman may take a man's view of politics and use a ballot corruptly, but for every corrupt woman in politics you can find 100 men equally as foolish and with more power for wrongdoing. Last year one poor, deluded woman was caught repeating, and among the antis there was more rejoicing over the one that went astray than over the ninety and nine that were true.

The professional politician says that the woman vote is uncertain. No greater tribute could be paid. In its uncertainty the gangster can read his doom. In three or four of the largest cities women have made but little headway against the intrenched machine. The failure here is due to the so called respectable Christian men who will not ally themselves with the women to form an invincible army of civic righteousness. The women are ready, but the men are chained to partisanship.

It is human nature to question success, but it never doubts failure. The only battle cry of the mob is to "crucify him." Ugly charges are remembered and repeated. Praise and words of honor are forgotten. Few kind words are printed regarding equal suffrage, but sarcasm and falsehood are given wide circulation. Two years ago twenty-five colored ministers of all denominations replied to the question of equal suffrage results. One said it worked badly; three said it worked fairly well; twenty-one said it worked well.

It was a tourist reporter who stated that Colorado women used charity and philanthropy as a political lever; that the highest and sweetest sentiments of the human heart were used by women as trading coin with which to purchase votes. What a shameless libel on her sex! One wonders with whom she associated when there. Certainly no true woman ever gave utterance to such revolting sentiment, for they are not true. If uttered at all, the words but expressed the individual distorted and deformed methods and ideals of one woman and in no way represented the 100,000 self respecting, honest woman voters of Colorado any more than John L. Sullivan represents the culture and refinement of his native city of Boston.

Eating at Night.

Every living bird and beast strives its utmost to cram itself with food before retiring for the night, and this food is digested as the night progresses. The evening feed is the feed of the day with the brute creation, and yet doctors tell us to refrain from eating heartily at night and even advise us to retire to rest with a more or less empty stomach. Are we following nature when following this advice?—Country Gentleman.

MUCH SMOKE; LITTLE FIRE.

Colorado Charges Against Woman Suffrage Have Slight Foundation.

It would be most encouraging to witness the horror depicted in the writings of some of our men over the fraud reported to have been committed by a small handful of women in the Denver election were it not for the fact that they fail to even mention the frauds committed by men at the same election, which were a hundred times greater than those committed by the women.

I happened to be in Washington at the time Hon. John Shafroth resigned his seat in congress. Mr. Shafroth, together with some half dozen other prominent citizens of Denver, was interviewed regarding these reports, and they were all unanimous in pronouncing them "outrageous lies." Mr. Shafroth said that very few of the persons implicated were women, and those were at the instigation of men. There were some 5,000 fraudulent votes cast, and not over 100 were cast by women, and yet from reading the papers one would suppose that women were the only transgressors.

A prominent lawyer of Denver who was in Washington said of "exhibit 64," which has caused all these newspaper scare heads: "That exhibit was not competent evidence and would have been thrown out by any court. The woman who accused herself and other women of cheating simply made her affidavit and 'skipped.' She did not stay to be cross examined, as any one making such an accusation is bound to do. Everything points to the belief that she was in the employ of the opposite party."

When Mr. Shafroth, who is the one affected by these frauds and whose honorable conduct in resigning his seat is praised by both friends and enemies, pronounces these charges against the women "outrageous" and still insists that the influence of women in political life has been uplifting in spite of the occasional dishonorable woman, what can be said of those who, ignorant of the facts, devote columns in trying to bring the women into ridicule?

The whole thing bears the earmarks of another well planned scheme of the antisuffragists to bring woman suffrage into disrepute. No one has ever claimed that all women are honest or that all women would vote honestly, but when any writer devotes columns, as some of them have, to picturing the fraudulent schemes of at the most a handful of women they must be hard up for material.

Women have been voting in Wyoming for thirty-five years, in Colorado for ten years and in Idaho and Utah for eight years, and this is the first instance where women have been found repeating at the polls. You may rest assured that the opposition would have discovered it if any woman had ever before done such a thing.

Perhaps it would be an act of kindness to let the opposition gloat to their hearts' content over this, their first discovery of fraud by women after waiting all these long weary years for the opportunity.

ELNORA M. BABCOCK.

Moral Cowardice.

The antisuffrage movement is an exhibition of selfishness in that the movers are trying to prevent what is for the good of others and of moral cowardice because they shrink from doing what they might feel to be a duty. The suffrage cause based on justice and right is strengthened by the contrast.—Sarah Bradstreet.

Weak Hearts

Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.

Mr. D. Kauble, of Nevada, O., says: I had stomach trouble and was in a bad state as I had heart trouble with it. I took Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for about four months and it cured me.

Kodol Digests What You Eat and relieves the stomach of all nervous strain and the heart of all pressure.

DO WOMEN WANT TO VOTE?

Conclusive Evidence That a Large Majority Desire the Ballot.

I have before me six editorials bearing upon woman suffrage that have just arrived through the mail, and every one of them assumes as an excuse for denying women their citizen's right to the ballot that women do not want to vote. Even editors who claim to believe in the justice of it make this excuse.

Pray what would you have we women do to prove that we wanted the ballot? You will not let us vote in order to prove it except in four states, and in those states the women have certainly shown that they want to vote by actually doing so year after year in as great a proportion and sometimes greater than the men. If you do not believe these women care for the ballot, just try to take it from them and see what will be the result.

We have presented more petitions to our legislative bodies asking for the ballot than have ever been presented upon any other subject in the history of our nation.

At the time of the last constitutional convention in New York state the women secured petitions from 600,000 citizens twenty-one years of age and over asking that a woman suffrage amendment be submitted to the voters, but the convention refused to submit it. This was the only amendment asked for by any large number of citizens.

Before the women obtained this mammoth petition the editor of the New York Sun said, "If the women secure 100,000 names the convention will be obliged to submit the amendment." Still they refused to submit it after the women had secured six times that number of names.

Last year almost every organization of women in the state of Illinois united on a suffrage bill and sent their delegates to the legislature to prove that the women did want to vote, but it was lost just the same. The same is true of nearly every state where women have made the attempt to secure some form of suffrage.

In view of all these facts I think it about time that "women do not want to vote" is relegated to the past to keep company with all the other false prophecies about women that have done duty in the past.

We know it is about all there is left for the opposition, and they will cling to it as a drowning man does to his last and only hope.

We all know this is not the true reason why men do not give woman the ballot, and we also know that those who control the votes are ashamed to give the true reason.

ELNORA MONROE-BABCOCK.

ARE MEN FAIR TO WOMEN?

Not Unless Fairness Means Keeping Everything For Themselves.

To begin with, are men fair to women? The laws, which are made by men; the usages—everything is calculated to cause men to reduce to a minimum the qualities, the intelligence and the influence of women.

For instance, let a woman make a reputation in art or literature, and men begin to smile and shrug their shoulders. They dispute her talent.

I maintain, without much fear of contradiction, that a woman, in order to succeed in a profession, must have ten times more talent than a man, inasmuch as a man will have friends and comrades to help him and a woman only difficulties put in her way by man to surmount.

Man receives encouragement from all sides.

Why should not women get all this? Why? Simply because man, being both "verdict" and "execution," has kept everything for himself.

Women, perhaps unfortunately, cannot all be mothers or spend their lives mending socks and attending to spring housecleaning. Such women who have received a high education may not feel inclined to be shopgirls, lady's maids or cooks. If they feel that they have talent and can paint or write successfully every man ought to give them a helping hand.—Max O'Rell in New York American.

THE GOOD OF THE SCHOOLS

How Woman Suffrage Has Benefited Them In the Centennial State.

Mrs. Helen Loring Grenfell, who is now serving her third term as superintendent of public instruction in Colorado, has recently been in Washington attending the national woman suffrage convention. She claims that woman suffrage has resulted in greatly benefiting the educational system in Colorado. More money is spent per capita upon the education of the children in Colorado than in any other state. The schools are entirely out of politics, no schoolteacher is ever elected or teacher hired on account of his or her political affiliations.

In thirty-three counties of Colorado women are county superintendents and most of them in counties with the largest population. The men and women teachers receive equal pay for the same grade work, and women are eligible to any and all positions. All their state institutions, including their state university, have women on the faculty.

If there was nothing more to be gained than the receiving of equal pay for equal work, it would be sufficient reason for every woman demanding the ballot.

In Wyoming almost the first law that was passed after women were enfranchised was one giving all women in governmental employ equal pay with men for the same work, including public schoolteachers.

TAXED, BUT MAY NOT VOTE.

Aliens Admitted to the Suffrage, While Native Women Are Barred.

"The longer I am in public office the more I am impressed with the fact that women should be extended the right of suffrage," said Assessor Washington Dodge the other day. "It is really an injustice that women who pay taxes on property should be denied the right of saying how and by whom the same should be appraised, taxed and the public funds collected. In sending out letters to those who own realty each year I receive scores of answers, always written logically and in the best English. The answers are almost invariably along the lines I have just spoken of—that women, while compelled to pay taxes, have no right to say how the government shall handle their property.

"I do not hold that the right of suffrage should be extended to all alike. Educational and property restrictions should be demanded of them. This is a sufficient exaction in a country that allows aliens the right to cast a ballot, while intelligent women, many of whose ancestors fought and died in the great wars of the United States, are denied the right to say who shall be given the reins of government. To give women the right to vote indiscriminately would be to allow as many unworthy of the privilege the right to go to the polls as there are now men. It is for this reason that I would have them possess certain qualifications in this regard."—San Francisco Evening Bulletin.

Governor Bates For Equal Rights.

Governor John L. Bates of Massachusetts in his latest annual address to the legislature recommends the extension of municipal suffrage to women. He says in part:

"Notwithstanding the continuous and various efforts of public spirited men to solve the problems of government which are constantly being presented, there is much that is unsatisfactory, and new evils from time to time become only too apparent in our system. Perfection is not to be expected, but we should not relax any efforts to that end. It has seemed to some that prejudice, or at least a too rigid conservatism, inherited from prior and admittedly less advanced generations, causes us to persist in a one sided form of government, administered only to the extent of man's wisdom and deliberately refusing to avail ourselves of the benefits to be derived from the fine intuition, the sensitive conscience and the different but brilliant intellect of woman. Many of my predecessors, including in recent years Governors Claflin, Washburn, Long, Butler, Ames and Greenhalge, have directed the attention of the general court to this subject and earnestly advocated the granting of the suffrage to women.

"They receive the benefits of our educational system. They outnumber the young men in all our schools, colleges and universities. Equally with men do they pay their taxes, and they are held equally accountable for infractions of the law. They are equally interested in the economic and efficient management of civic affairs. They should have the same right as men, if they so desire, to vote for those who are to represent them in that management, and that, too, irrespective of the question whether other women similarly situated desire to exercise that right."

WEEDS

Consumption is a human weed flourishing best in weak lungs. Like other weeds it's easily destroyed while young; when old, sometimes impossible.

Strengthen the lungs as you would weak land and the weeds will disappear.

The best lung fertilizer is Scott's Emulsion. Salt pork is good too, but it is very hard to digest.

The time to treat consumption is when you begin trying to hide it from yourself. Others see it, you won't.

Don't wait until you can't deceive yourself any longer. Begin with the first thought to take Scott's Emulsion. If it isn't really consumption so much the better; you will soon forget it and be better for the treatment. If it is consumption you can't expect to be cured at once, but if you will begin in time and will be rigidly regular in your treatment you will win.

Scott's Emulsion, fresh air, rest all you can, eat all you can, that's the treatment and that's the best treatment.

We will send you a little of the Emulsion free.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

WOMEN AS TOILERS.

They Should Co-operate With Men, Not Compete With Them.

The presence of women in the world's market of labor rouses antagonism on the part of those only who, forgetting that women were the original industrial factors, assume that they are appropriating to themselves the activities which belong alone to men. Not that the world has ever objected to women working—they have been its burden bearers from the beginning—but it does object to compensating them for their toil.

Woman is in the world's market today as a factor in its industrial life. What the economic value of her work will be can be settled only by the removal of all barriers which prevent her from giving her best service and doing the best work. There ought to be work enough in this great republic for all of its willing people, and the only injury which the presence of women can inflict upon the world's industrial progress is to continue to be cheap paid laborers. In this way they are wronged equally with men and are brought into competition rather than into co-operation with men in the labor of life. The remedy is not to be found by creating a prejudice against women toilers, which only cheapens their labor, but by a continuous and universal demand for equal pay for equal quantity and quality of work. This demand can be made not by women nor by men alone, but by the combined effort of all laborers in every field of human activity. The time is ripe for making the demand, for there never was an hour when men and women so well understood each other and sympathized with each other more than they do today. Co-education and co-service in the world's field of labor has taught men to respect women's intellectual and business ability, and women who have always known that the men of their immediate family were interested in their success have learned that they have no better friends anywhere than the men toilers by their side.

REV. ANNA H. SHAW,
President National Woman Suffrage Association.

Experience With Woman Suffrage.

I want to say a word in behalf of woman suffrage because we think we have solved the question in Colorado.

There is no use in rehearsing the arguments in favor or against the question of woman suffrage; you are all familiar with them. But in Colorado we have practical experience. We have had what we think is a demonstration that woman suffrage is a success and a complete refutation of the arguments that are made that woman suffrage will have a tendency to degrade or lower the standard of woman. It is often claimed by those who are against woman suffrage that as quick as you give the power to vote to woman immediately she will be contaminated by having to go to the polls. Now I want to say in Colorado the direct opposite has been the experience. Instead of the caucuses for the primary being held in questionable places they are held in the parlors of the most fashionable people in Denver. Instead of those caucuses being attended by a few persons they are public and attended by many.

As a rule, a greater per cent of ladies vote than men, and instead of their being contaminated by anything of a bad nature at the polls the effect has been that there are no loafers, there are no drunkards, there are no persons of questionable character standing around the polls.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured.

William Shaffer, a brakeman of Denison, Ohio, was confined to his bed for several weeks with inflammatory rheumatism. "I used many remedies," he says. "Finally I sent to McCaw's drug store for a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, at which time I was unable to use hand or foot, and in one week's time was able to go to work as happy as a clam." For sale by H. C. Giesler.

Melody and Music.

Melody was the beginning and ever will be the essence of music through all ages. The Greeks based their melody on the tetrachord system, which they may have copied from the natural melody in human speech. Gregorian chants, Protestant hymn tunes, many national melodies and other musical themes are based on natural melody in human speech.

A Favorite Remedy for Babies.

Its pleasant taste and prompt cures have made Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a favorite with the mothers of small children. It quickly cures their coughs and colds and prevents any danger of pneumonia or other serious consequences. It not only cures croup, but when given as soon as the croupy cough appears, will prevent the attack. For sale by H. C. Giesler.

Pilgrims and Puritans.

The pilgrims were a body of English nonconformists who emigrated from Holland and settled Plymouth colony in 1620. The Puritans were a body of nonseparatist religious reformers from England who in 1629-30 founded and settled the Massachusetts Bay colony. The two bodies united in 1692 under the name of Massachusetts.

CASTORIA For Infants and Children. The Kind You Have Always Bought Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

MRS. HOWE'S VIEWS.

Author of the "Battle Hymn" Tells Why Women Should Get the Ballot.

We shall not obtain suffrage simply because we want it, nor shall we fail to do so because others don't want it. We shall get it because it is right that we should.

The government of our country formed itself upon the axiom that intelligence shall govern. Now, intelligence has no sex nor policy either. The elements of good judgment are equally balanced between men and women, and in women the interests of good government are more deep and intense, because parentage in woman is a fact more vital and intimate than with men.

We are custodians of the future, the guardians of its first public breath, the trainers of its earliest thought and impulse. Through untold labors and privations we bring the men to men's estate. Who shall say that our duty to the body politic ends there?

In the ages in which fighting was esteemed man's noblest pursuit the necessities of the race required that we should abide within the stronghold and beside the hearth. And now that the war worship has passed away and the things that make for peace are uppermost in men's minds and in the objects and ideals of society who shall say that the hand which guided the early years of every human being shall be paralyzed when it would touch the bloodless weapon of the ballot? Who shall say that the voice which sets the tune for the music of the household shall be dumb when the great interests of humanity are at stake and when the humanity of individuals makes no account? You men who were once little helpless creatures, nourished and guided by our affection, does it become you to say, "You have taught what it concerned us most to know, and now we will teach you your place?"

JULIA WARD HOWE.

How Woman Suffrage Works.

Ellis Meredith of Denver at the national suffrage convention conducted a "Colorado Question Box" and answered questions in regard to woman suffrage in that state. In reply to the query, "Has woman suffrage cured the corruption of politics?" she told this story: A man far gone in delirium tremens was brought to the hospital. The doctor examined him carefully. The man asked, "Can you cure me?" "No," answered the doctor, "but I can reduce the size of the snakes." Equal suffrage has not cured the corruption of politics, but it has distinctly reduced the size of the snakes.

Genius In the Hat.

You seldom will find a brainy man with a round head. The head that contains lots of brains either is very long from front to back or else irregular. You can learn something of a man's mental ability by the hat he wears. If his head is so bumpy that it seems as if he never could get a hat to fit him he probably is a genius or an eccentric in some particular line. If his head is long from front to back he is a clear thinker and keen as a razor. So if your hat costs more money than your friend's hat does and you are harder to fit be consoled by considering that your brain is worth more.—Chicago Journal.

Queer Anatomy.

Curious ideas about anatomy prevail in the press. It was stated the other day that a man was "shot in the ticket office." Another paper says a man was "shot in the suburbs." "He kissed her passionately upon her reappearance," "She whipped him upon his return," "He kissed her back," "Mr. Jones walked in upon her invitation," "She seated herself upon his entering," "We thought she sat down upon her being asked," "She fainted upon his departure."

Proper Treatment of Pneumonia.

Pneumonia is to dangerous a disease for anyone to attempt to doctor himself, although he may have the proper remedies at hand. A physician should always be called. It should be borne in mind, however, that pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of the grip, and by the proper treatment of these diseases a threatened attack of pneumonia may be warded off. There is no question whatever about this, as during the thirty years and more that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been used, we have yet to learn of a single case of a cold or attack of the grip having resulted in pneumonia when this remedy was used. It is also used by physicians in the treatment of pneumonia with the best results. Dr. W. J. Smith, of Sanders, Ala., who is also a Druggist, says of it: "I have been selling Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and prescribing it in my practice for the past six years. I use it in cases of pneumonia and have always gotten the best results." Sold by H. C. Giesler.

CITY CHARTER AMENDMENT

City Attorney Hillick Interviewed Regarding Proposed Change--Amendment Published in Full.

Desiring our readers to be fully informed regarding the amendment to the city charter, in the matter of the Fire Department, City Attorney Hillick was interviewed by a Times representative yesterday and asked to kindly state his reasons for the proposed changes.

In addition, it has been deemed advisable to publish the amendments, because of an invidious attempt on the part of some to misrepresent and discredit the entire proceeding.

"In making this amendment," Mr. Hillick stated, "we have considered two things:

"First—Whether the city of Fulton desired a paid fire department or a volunteer fire department.

"Second—What amendment would be necessary in order to secure an efficient volunteer fire department. The first question needs very little discussion, and we believe it to be settled beyond reasonable contention.

"It was considered that in order to obtain the services of a volunteer organization, and to gain the enthusiasm in that organization necessary for efficient services, that there must be a separate organization having control of its own internal affairs.

"And, further, in order to do away with some of the errors which have been found to exist in the past, the control of the city funds and the appointing of most of the officers of the department should be placed in the hands of the Fire and Police Commissioners.

"There is very little question but that it is impossible to organize an efficient fire department under the present city charter, and it is very doubtful whether the younger men who have served so efficiently and unselfishly in the past will consent to serve, and the city must pay the cost of maintaining a paid fire department unless they are permitted to maintain their own organization.

"Considering these things, we have drafted an amendment doing away with the paid fire department as prescribed in the present charter, but giving to the Fire and Police Commissioners the power to employ such aid as they shall see fit, operating and caring for the apparatus and property. It is intended that these men will be at the engine house both night and day, will take care of the property and keep the same ready for instant use in case of a fire, and will assist materially in the quick response to alarms.

"We have provided for the incorporation of a reorganized volunteer fire department and the appointing of the employes and the chiefs and assistant chiefs by the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners; the fire department having the right to nominate and suggest candidates for the offices of chief and assistant chiefs; and to appoint the foremen and wardens, subject to the approval of the Board of Fire and Commissioners.

"We believe that under this amendment it is possible to organize a fire department more efficient than can be organized in any other way, and at a cost not to be compared with the paid department; and it seems as though the measure should meet with the general approval, covering as it does all objections to the former volunteer organization, and also the present provisions for a paid department."

Proposed Amendment.

AN ACT

To Amend the Charter of the City of Fulton Relating to the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners and Fire Department.

[Explanation — Matter underscored is new; matter in brackets is the old law to be omitted.]

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Section 1. Sections 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, and 118 of Chapter 63 of the Laws of 1902 entitled, "An Act To Incorporate the City of Fulton,"are hereby amended to read as follows:

§110. Control of Fire and Police Departments Vested in Board.—The Mayor first elected under the provisions of this act shall on or before the first day of May, nineteen hundred and two, appoint three fire and police commissioners, who shall constitute the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners and who shall hold office until the first day of January, nineteen hundred and four. Thereafter the incoming Mayor, on or ten days prior to the first day of January succeeding his election, shall appoint their successors who shall hold office for two years from the said first day of January.

The powers and duties connected with and incident to the control, government and discipline of the fire and police department of the City of Fulton shall be vested in, and exercised by the said board [appointed as provided in this section] as provided in this article.

§111. President of Board. The members of said Board of Fire and Police Commissioners shall elect one of their number to act as president of said Board, who shall preside at the meeting when present, but who shall not at any time lose his vote as Commissioner by reason of his acting as such presiding officer.

§112. Meeting of Board. Said Board of Fire and Police Commissioners shall hold meetings at least once in each month, and special meetings may be held on the call of any two members of the Board. The attendance of two commissioners shall be necessary to constitute a quorum. §113. Powers and Duties of the Board—The Board of Fire and Police Commissioners is charged with the care and custody of all of the property of the city connected with or appertaining to the fire and police departments, and it shall have power:

1. To purchase or hire all supplies, engines, hose, hook and ladder carts, and carriages, horses or teams, that may be necessary for the use of the fire department.

2. To appoint the chief and assistant [chief,] chiefs of the fire department, the officers of the different engine, hose and hook and ladder companies, [paid] [firemen and call-men] as prescribed in this article, and to employ such persons as it shall deem necessary to care for and operate the property and apparatus pertaining to the fire department, and to appoint the chief of police and patrol-men, and to prescribe rules and regulations, not inconsistent with this act or the general laws, for the government and dicipline of the fire and police departments and officers and members thereof.

3. To audit and allow the pay [of the call firemen] of such employees, and all claims against the fire and police departments, other than fixed salaries, and draw orders on the chamberlain for the payment thereof from the proper fund, but no claim shall be so audited, allowed or paid, unless the liability therefor shall have been incurred by said Board or by its express direction.

4. To lease such buildings as may be necessary for the use of the fire department, and to remodel the buildings owned by the City and used for fire purposes; and if authorized by a proposition adopted at a general or special City election, to buy lands and construct new buildings for the use of said department.

§114. Custody and Sale of Property—The said Board of Fire and Police Commissioners shall have charge of all the property now in use, or hereafter to be acquired by the City of Fulton for the purpose of extinguishing fires including all the rooms for storing the same. The said Board shall also have power [by and with the approval of the Common Council of said city] to sell [the same or any part thereof, except real estate] or dispose of such property or any part thereof; the proceeds of such sale to be forthwith paid over to the city chamberlain, and by him credited to the Fire Fund.

§115. [Organization of Fire Department—The fire department will consist of a chief, an assistant chief, eight paid firemen, and as many [illegible] the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners, from time to time, may determine to be necessary.]

3. Secretary to Report such Election of Wardens—The secretary of each company shall immediately after such annual meeting, certify to the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners the names of the foremen and wardens so elected at such meeting, and no person shall act as such foreman or warden until his election shall have been approved by the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners, nor until he shall have taken and filed his oath of office with the City Clerk.

SPECIAL NOTICE
With Reference to GAS RANGES

We wish to say to all who have been thinking of putting in Gas Ranges that NOW is the time to make a choice and to make arrangements as to when they are to be put in.

WHY? For the reason that all who order ranges NOW, before the season opens, may avail themselves of last year's offer, viz.: a gas range at cost and free piping to connect it with street mains.

We can supply only a limited number of customers on these terms out of so limited a stock as our present one, and it has not yet been decided what our offer will be later in the season; possibly higher factory prices may render it necessary for us to charge more for ranges this Summer than we did last. They certainly will not be cheaper.

DON'T DELAY. If you want all the comfort that is to be derived from the use of a gas range, have it in and be ready to begin using it as soon as the very first hot spell is experienced, instead of waiting until the heated term has set in and we are so busy as to be unable to give you prompt attention.

The Gas Range supplies the modern apparatus for cooking and baking. Nothing compares with it in cheapness of operation, in perfection of work, in convenience, in speed or in cleanliness. No fuel to split or carry. No poking or shaking down to do. No dust. No ashes. No unnecessary heat; besides all this you ALWAYS find a cool kitchen wherever there's a gas range.

Your Wife Deserves a Few of This World's Comforts. Your Wife Should Have a Gas Range.

Twenty-fifth Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Morton invited about fifty friends to their home in Academy street on Monday to assist them in celebrating in a fitting manner their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. The fact that it was an anniversary was not told but a few friends were aware of it, and many gifts appropriate to the occasion were received by the bride and groom of twenty-five years ago. "Hearts" was played. An elaborate collation was served.

Our Easter neckwear is deserving of the name, "Spring Beauties". They are right as to style, variety and price. Harry A. Allen, 109-111 Cauyga street.

A Successful [illegible]

The opening sale of the [illegible] Brokerage Company, at No. 448 [illegible] Salina street, Syracuse, N. Y., was [illegible] to date in every respect. This is the company that makes a business of buying wholesale stocks from Clothing Manufacturers who are in need of cash and are willing to sell at less than manufacturers cost. They have several branch retail stores throughout this State. Their coming to Syracuse at this season of the year is a God send to the poor of that city and surrounding country, as this has been a severe Winter, and Spring finds the pocket-book very much flattened as it were. The Brokerage company are selling clothing at about one-half the regular price usually asked by the regular dealer. This company will remain in Syracuse for a couple of weeks yet, and we would advise all in need of clothing from the "tuff boy to the head of the house," to give them a call. They are selling good wool suits of clothes as low as $2.98 per suit, this means coat, pants and vest. Of course they have others at different prices. Their very fine English Clay and black Tibbits and all the latest designs and fabrics in wearing apparel appeal to the eye and the surprisingly low price appeals to the pocket-book.

This sale is going on at No 448 South Salina street, Syracuse, N. Y.

The Odd Fellows.

The District Committee, composed of the Odd Fellows' lodges of Oswego county, met in annual convention at Odd Fellows' Hall at Richland station on Wednesday, March 9. The redistricting of the county, which has been agitated for more than a year, thus forming two districts, was debated at some length.

A committee to arrange and recommend a division was appointed. It is composed of Eugene B. Walker, Pulaski; Frederick M. Moore, Richland; Tad W. Harding, Lacona; Almon J. Rose, Mexico; N. E. Smith, New Haven; Russell Quonce, Lycoming, Past Grand Burr, Oswego, and Otis Fuller, Central Square. The committee reported the proposed district as follows:

First district—Oswego city, Oswego Town, Hannibal, Granby, Scriba, New Haven, Volney, Phoenix, Schroeppel and Boylston.

Second district—Pulaski, Richland, Orwell, Redfield, Sandy Creek, Lacona, Boylston, Mexico, Parish, Hastings, Palermo, Amboy, West Monroe, Williamstown, Albion and Constantia.

The report of the committee was adopted and the Grand Lodge at its session at Utica in August will be petitioned to divide the district in accordance with the recommendation of the committee.

The recommendation to the Grand Master of the order for the appointment of N. E. Smith of New Haven as District Deputy, and William M. Barker, of the same place, as Secretary of the First district, was made. For the Second district, Frederick M. Moore and Albert W. Wright, both of Richland, were recommended for District Deputy and Secretary.

A Committee on Appeals for the district was named, consisting of Past Grand Burr, Oswego, and Past Grand Frederick W. Jones, Pulaski.

Gorillas In Battle.

"The prevailing belief that gorillas use clubs when they attack each other or their enemies is an entirely erroneous one," writes a traveler. "They do nothing of the sort, and how such an impression ever came to exist or how old time African explorers ever came to formulate such a theory is beyond my comprehension. During a long sojourn in that country I had ample opportunities to learn the truth about them, and what I discovered there was subsequently confirmed during a protracted hunting trip in Borneo.

"The fact is that in fighting each other or in attacking or defending themselves from other enemies they depend entirely upon their teeth, which are abnormally strong and sharp and cut like a razor. They are clumsy on their feet, but the enormous strength of their powerful arms more than makes up for this deficiency. In fighting they almost invariably attack the faces or the limbs of their adversaries.

"In the case of human beings or members of the monkey tribe the gorilla's favorite point of attack is the hand and especially the finger."

A Unanimous Election.

There was a character out in what was then known as the toughest part of creation who went by the name of Big John. I doubt if he ever had any other name. We had a little settlement we were going to make a town out of and concluded that the first thing to do was to choose a marshal, which we proceeded to do. There were several candidates, Big John among them, and when the pieces of paper dropped into a wide brimmed hat Big John walked up, coolly took the votes and put them into his pocket and said: "This is the quickest way. All them as votes for me come to this side." Not a man hesitated. It was the most unanimous election ever held. He made a good officer, though, and we kept him in till we pulled up the town and moved on to the next terminus of the railroad.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Juvenile Gems.

Here are some instances of curious mistakes made by school children in examinations:

Oxygen is a thing that has eight sides. The cuckoo never lays its own eggs. A mosquito is a child of black and white parents. A blizzard is the inside of a hen. A meridian is the name of the place where they keep time. "Parasite" is the slang name given to an inhabitant of Paris; it ought to be written "Parisian." The following has an odd ring about it and ought to be true: "Izaak Walton was such a good fisher that men called him 'Judicious Hooker!'" In this next instance phonetics is certainly to blame: "The equator is a menagerie lion running round the earth through Africa."—Liverpool Post.

Teapots With Quaint Instructions.

The following poetic directions for tea making are painted on many of the teapots used in the Celestial empire: "On a slow fire set a tripod; fill it with clear rain water. Boil it as long as it would be needed to turn fish white and lobster red; throw this upon the delicate leaves of choice tea; let it remain as long as the vapor rises in a cloud. At your ease drink the pure liquor, which will chase away the five causes of trouble."

Stopping an Artery.

The prompt application of the tourniquet or even of the finger to stop the bleeding of an artery before the doctor comes will often save life. A wound anywhere below the middle of the upper arm or below the middle of the thigh may be easily stopped by a tourniquet. The simplest improvised form of this implement, which may be always found ready to hand, is a linen handkerchief and a strong stick. The best place to apply the tourniquet for a wound of the arm is above the elbow, where the pulsations of an artery may be felt by any one.

The handkerchief should be tied around the arm rather loosely; the stick is thrust in and turned to tighten it until the blood ceases to flow. Of course this is only a temporary relief till the coming of the doctor, who, in case of serious bleeding, must be summoned as soon as possible. When you have nothing at hand in a case of sudden accident even the pressure of the forefinger and the thumb over the wound may arrest the flow of blood for the time.

When the flood came Noah had to live in the ark. There was no food or anything else. What did he live on? Water.

The People Next Door.

The reason why the people next door are invariably regarded as most worthy of our javelins is plain to me. They have a piano. I do not know of any race that is quite so unpleasant as the people next door. They are not like any ordinary people who live elsewhere. They obtain their music on the hire system, as it were, and it is generally of the type we most detest. Are we worldly minded? They chasten us obtrusively with hymns—or Mendelssohn, who is for some obscure reason regarded as a moral force in the suburbs. Are we of the elect? They hurl at us with defiant persistency the latest blood curdler from the "halls." The thing that passes with them for a piano is called upon to do the work of three, and the wall dividing our respective houses, be it borne in mind, is a beautiful conductor of sound.—Outlook.

A Story of an Easter Offering
By WALTON WILLIAMS

IT was Palm Sunday. The first balmy spring day had come, and the lilac buds were bursting, displaying their tiny leaves. The flowers in the open air had not as yet shown any signs of life, but thousands were budding under glass preparatory to filling the churches on Easter Sunday. A young man and a girl were walking on a country road toward a spire that loomed in the distance above a clump of trees and from which a silver toned bell was summoning the people to the morning service.

"So you think, Ned," said the girl, "that you must give up your studies at the seminary and your plan of becoming a clergyman."

"What can I do, Agnes? I have still two years of study before graduation and haven't a dollar in my pocket. I could make enough to keep me, for I can teach in vacation, tutor in term time and am quite sure of the Wilson scholarship. But mother needs every cent I can possibly earn, even giving all my time to money making. She not only needs her living, but, in the poor state of her health, the care of a doctor, comforts and delicacies."

The girl walked on without response. She knew what her friend said was true. They had been schoolmates. She had watched the development of his brain, and when he decided to turn his talents to the ministry she had rejoiced. At that time his father was living and ready to help him. All assistance had been suddenly cut off by the death of that father a few weeks before.

"Oh, how I wish I were rich!" exclaimed the girl, with a sigh. "How much good I could do with my money!"

"You don't suppose, Agnes, that I would accept assistance from a girl."

She turned and looked at him with a pair of honest, expressive eyes that told him he had hurt her.

"That is, any girl except you," he added to heal the wound. "Of course if you were very rich I would let you lend me what is needed and would pay you when I received a call."

By this time they had reached the church and joined the throng that was entering. After service the minister caught young Edward Granger's eye and beckoned him into his study.

"What's this I hear, Edward, about your giving up your studies for the ministry?"

"I am obliged to give them up," replied the young man, and he gave his reasons.

The clergyman knit his brows. "I am obliged to admit," he said, "that you are right, but I cannot be reconciled to the church losing your services. Were it not that we are so loaded with necessities just at this time I would make an attempt to raise what you need."

"You are very kind"—

"Not to you," interrupted the clergyman. "While I should be glad to serve you personally, I would not attempt to help you by levying contributions for you, and I know you too well to think that you would accept them. We need good men, fitted for our work, and I had set my heart on the church securing you. Have you come to a decision as to what you will do?"

"No. We are not expected at the seminary till after Easter Sunday, and I shall decide on that day. The Lord will direct me."

"He will surely."

The young man left the church and joined Agnes Keith, who was waiting for him at the door. As they walked homeward Edward gave her the substance of his conversation with their minister. Birds were chirping in the trees lining the road, and an army of insects was crawling out into the sunlight. Youth, under the influence of the pleasant surroundings, stimulated both the young people to hopefulness. When they parted at the gate of Agnes Keith's home, she said:

"I am not sure but something may come of your interview with Dr. Wainright. He always does more than he promises. At any rate, wait."

"And trust in the Lord."

"Yes."

"I will do both for a week and one forever. Nevertheless I am sure I shall not go back to the seminary."

Easter Sunday came, with the same beautiful weather. Edward called at Agnes Keith's on his way to morning service, and they walked to the church together. They avoided the subject nearest their hearts, Edward entertaining his friend with some facts of interest about the transformation of certain creatures, typifying immortality. They found the church, as usual, crowded with flowers and rejoiced in the exultant Easter anthems. The burden of Dr. Wainright's discourse was "sacrifice," dwelling especially on what the Christian owed to his church, mentioning among other duties that of helping young men to prepare themselves for the ministry. At this point Agnes turned and looked at her companion.

The services over, they were leaving the church when one of the deacons spoke to Edward, telling him that Dr. Wainright wished to see him a moment in the vestry. There was a happy look in Agnes' eyes as she told Edward that she would wait for him outside.

"An Easter offering," said the clergyman, "has been made through me to the church, which concerns you. A Christian giver has consented to supply the funds which will be necessary to save you to the ministry. They will be paid not to you, but your mother, whose support is your first duty, thus leaving you free to devote yourself to the work of supplying your own needs and preparing yourself for your life work."

"And who is this Christian giver to whom I owe so much?"

"The giver prefers to obey the injunction, 'Let not your right hand know what your left hand doeth.' I am not permitted to give the name."

When Edward joined Agnes he could not repress an expression of inward pleasure. She listened to what he told her and gave him in reply only a pressure of the hand, indicating that her heart was too full to express her joy in words.

Five years passed. Edward Granger had sprung into prominence immediately after his graduation and was already the pastor of a large congregation. He had repeatedly requested Dr. Wainright to give him the name of the person who had supplied the funds that had enabled him to reach his heart's desire, but the doctor invariably replied that the money had been given as an Easter offering and could not be returned. Agnes Keith had become independent through her musical attainments, she, too, having left the country to take a position in a choir of a city church. The two had corresponded at intervals, but, their duties lying in different directions, had drifted apart.

Edward Granger was a target for all the unmarried women of his congregation. Some of his intimate friends conspired to make a match between him and one of their number, an excellent young woman, somewhat fashionable and with a fortune. Edward, who was more interested in his work than in matrimony, at first resisted, but at last gave way under pressure and concluded to ask the lady to be his wife. He was leaving his study one afternoon to visit her for the purpose when the postman called and handed him a letter from his old friend, Dr. Wainright.

"I have often doubted," it read, "whether I have been doing right in withholding the name of the person who enabled you to enter the ministry. I have at last concluded to tell you, it being understood, as I have always said, that the gift was an Easter offering and cannot be returned. The donor was a woman who earned the money by teaching music and afterward by singing in church. Her name is Agnes Keith."

The Rev. Edward Granger started as if he had been shot. Rising from his chair, he looked at his watch, then started for a train for a neighboring city. When he arrived there in the early evening he drove to the house where Agnes Keith lived and was soon in her presence.

"Your Easter offering," he said, "has doubtless been acceptable to God, but the knowledge of it which came to me today has revealed my blindness and stupidity in so long letting slip a treasure. You made your offering to the Lord; give your heart to me."

"It has always been yours."

Edward Granger's congregation was shortly after surprised at the announcement of his engagement to a lady without their circle, living in a different city and making her own living.

"TO THY CROSS I CLING."

The Blessed Fire

Jerusalem's Strangest Easter Spectacle
By EVANGELINE BEN-OLIEL

[Copyright, 1904, by American Press Association.]

MANY services are held during holy week in Jerusalem by different sects, but that of the holy fire is the most peculiar of all and attracts the greatest number of spectators. The Saturday preceding Easter is the day chosen for this extraordinary performance. The writer, having lived in Palestine, witnessed the ceremony several years ago. To be able to secure seats our party started for the Church of the Holy Sepulcher early in the morning.

The building was already crowded with worshipers kneeling or sitting on the floor of the church in great masses. Soldiers were to be seen on all sides, some standing leaning on their loaded guns and others walking about trying to keep order. At times they treated the pilgrims roughly.

We were directed to a gallery halfway up the dome, reserved for spectators. Here were American and English tourists, some Latin visitors and a few Turkish officials, who looked on with satirical amusement. Jews are not allowed in this building. Below our gallery was another, occupied by Greek and Armenian women. They as well as the thousands of pilgrims in the body of the church held tapers.

As we looked down from our high balcony the church seemed to be one dense mass of human beings jostling each other in an excited manner in their endeavor to get as close as possible to the Chapel of the Sepulcher, where heaven was to manifest its power. On each side of this chapel there are openings for the fire to issue forth, on the right hand for the Greeks and on the left for the Armenians. Toward these openings all arms were eagerly outstretched. The pilgrims waited breathlessly for the fire to appear so as to light their tapers from it and thus receive the sacred fire first hand. They consider that there is special merit in securing the fire direct from the interior of the sepulcher. For the privilege of standing close to the apertures high sums are paid.

All the windows and even the small balconies round the cupola were filled. Murmurs and shouts re-echoed through the building. We could hardly realize that we were in a place of worship. The people before us seemed more like those preparing for an insurrection than for a religious ceremony. The vast crowd of pilgrims which surrounded the chapel was divided by an open space formed by two circles of soldiers. About noon an excited group of Arabs broke through this passage and rushed wildly round the sepulcher several times, crying to the fire to descend from heaven and save them. For two hours they kept up this performance. Group succeeded group in this mad race. Some were dressed in sheepskins and others in their ordinary plain white shirts. Most of them were bare armed and barelegged. A bugleman went ahead of this strange procession, clapping his hands, to which they all responded in wild cries in Arabic, the chief words of which seemed to be: "This is the tomb of Jesus Christ! God save the sultan!"

At last the "bishop of the fire" gave the signal for the service to begin. A chant was heard in the distance. Out of the Greek chapel a long procession of bishops and archbishops dressed in silken robes and of priests carrying lights and embroidered banners was to be seen slowly marching round the sepulcher. The solemn chants of the priests were strangely intermingled with the loud yells of the excited pilgrims.

The "bishop of the fire" now took off his cap and miter and entered the chapel. The great miracle was about to take place. A bright flame suddenly appeared inside the sepulcher. The man standing nearest the opening inserted his taper and drew it out alight. Cries of joy arose on all sides. With frantic eagerness the pilgrims pressed closer and closer to light their tapers, stumbling over each other in their excitement. They were nearly beside themselves for joy. From hand to hand, from taper to taper, the light was spreading in a marvelously rapid manner till very soon the whole building was one blaze of light.

Thick clouds of fragrant incense gave a misty appearance to the surroundings, and through this mist thousands of tiny lights appeared. Shouts of rejoicing continued to resound throughout the church. The bishop came out of the chapel. Immediately four stout priests lifted him in triumph and carried him to his own sanctuary.

Three wealthy Armenians who had bought the privilege of standing close to the opening were the first to rush out of the church with ten lighted lamps. An avenue through the crowd had been kept clear for them to pass out quickly and carry these lights to their own churches. Mounted horsemen also galloped off with the sacred fire to light the lamps in all the Greek churches round Jerusalem. Others ran barefooted for long distances in the country to do the same thing in the monasteries and convents.

When Eastertide Comes

OUR word "Easter" is but the Anglicized form of the name of the British goddess of spring, and all our regard for Easter, aside from that based on religion, rests on the fact that in our northern hemisphere it ushers in the spring.

So comes Easter to stand for the rejuvenation of man's soul and body and the brown old earth as well as for the highest religious hope.

Possibly from the same grand original cause the blood of man runs warmer when the sap begins to flow in the tree and he breathes in a new vigor from the springtime breeze.

A good poet tells us that when man is young his fancy at that season turns to thoughts of love, perhaps in obedience to the same tacit command heeded by the wanton lapwing and the red breasted robin.

Be he old or young, the season inspires him with new hope. It must. He sees all that was dead live again, and, whether he knows it or not, it is this sight that inspires him with new courage. That nothing is lost, that no effort of his can come to naught, is the message taught him and the sermon preached by every oat blade sprouting by the wayside, by the flower blooming in the crevice of the rocks.

No matter how desperate his circumstances in the bleakness of a few weeks before, he cannot deny himself the cheer that comes of full reliance on the power which is working the sublime miracle of putting a single shrub in bud.

"Truth crushed to earth will rise again." In that is the comfort of the zealot, the reformer, even though the Easter see him go to his grave for his principles. He sees the divine assurance in the resurrection of every buried seed that—

> Ever the right comes uppermost,
> And ever is justice done.

The Jews' Wailing Place.

To Mohammedans and Jews the most sacred spot in Jerusalem is the temple, a vast inclosure nearly a mile in circumference. The principal building is the Dome of the Rock—often, though erroneously, termed the Mosque of Omar—which stands in the very center of the temple and covers the sacred rock whence, according to Moslem tradition, Mohammed ascended into heaven. The point where the Jews gather is beneath the western and outer wall, known as the Jew's wailing place. Here every afternoon numbers of Jews may be found swaying their bodies to and fro or pressing their foreheads against the stones, while with tears running down their cheeks they murmur Jeremiah's words of lamentation.

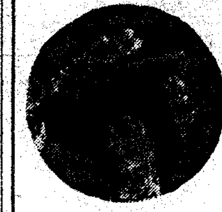
An Irish Easter Custom.

A queer custom, probably descended through the coming of Christianity from the Roman custom of [illegible] gifts, exists in Ireland. When [illegible] meet on Easter Sunday morning [illegible] says:

"Me Aisther eggs on ye?"

The answer is, "That ye [illegible]" But no meaning whatever is [illegible] to the words nowadays. [illegible] ancient times the one who [illegible] for the eggs had to get them [illegible]

AN EASTER FANTASY.



An Easter Forecast

By EDWIN L. SABIN

Copyright 1904, by Edwin L. Sabin

SATURDAY morn, of hopes galore.
The date for its arriving!
'Twould surely come, the milliner swore,
Though she be nonsurviving.
Into the past the moments glide:
True more and more is nettled;
Alas, near the crest of Eastertide
The weather looks unsettled!

SATURDAY noon. It has not come!
(As might have been expected.)
And voice is wrathful and face is glum
And figure all dejected.
Horizonward is a bank of cloud
Steadily onward crawling.
Nervous the house, and anxious browed.
Barometer is falling.

SATURDAY eve—and still no hat!
Heavy the apprehension.
Milliners all are frauds, 'tis flat;
Prone, all, to mean invention.
Fly the signals of import plain
To those who read a warning.
Floods and lightning and hurricane
Are due for Easter morning!

SATURDAY night. A step—a ring!
Rustle of tissue paper!
Cries: "How darling!" "The sweet, sweet thing!"
Somebody cuts a caper.
Skies are suddenly smoothed, betimes;
The storm signs disappear, oh;
Up the mercury swiftly climbs:
For Easter: Bright and clear, oh!

Narrow Escape.

While en route from Albany to Fulton on the Empire State Express last Friday, the Hon. T. D. Lewis had a narrow escape from serious injury. As it was, he received several cuts about the head and face and suffered a severe shock to his nerves. He was in the lavatory when a terrific explosion took place, shattering the plate glass in the door and windows and driving pieces into Mr. Lewis's face. The supposition is that the gas in the Pintsch cylinder under the lavatory ignited in some way, causing the explosion.

HUNTER ARMS VS. FULTON

Former Team Victorious By Two Points at Rifle Shoot Last Wednesday Evening.

The rival teams met in combat in the gas office basement on Wednesday evening, and the shooting was fast but bloodless The L. C. Smith guns did not leave any scalps on the Ideal gas ranges, and when victory was perched upon their banners, they joined hands and circled around the luckless vanquished, with their pocket knives in their hands. The victims to the better shots proved magnanimous in defeat, and with the generosity for which the Ideal gas ranges are noted in the matter of perfection, offered the Smith guns the loan of their front window in which their own scalps might be displayed. Indeed they even offered the loan of a scalp to each gunmaker who would sign a red tape document agreeing to purchase an Ideal gas range. The following hymn of triumph appeared on Thursday afternoon in the window whichha d so proudly for a week, displayed the scalps taken by the gas men at the previous shoot.

Chief Close-Shave Trombley's scalp fell as easily as down before his sharp edged tools.

Chief Toolmaker Wellwood was scalped on March 23, 1904, at the Gas office. The uptown shooters would like his scalp returned after being thoroughly dried by one of those beautiful "Ideal ranges."

Chief Woodman Sears died game, saying, "Well, I can burn up a bull's eye large enough to hit, any way."

Chief Bald Eagle Watson's scalp was hard to obtain, due largely to the scarcity of hair.

Chief Cement Smith was scalped by a band of gun-maker Indians. One Ideal gas range will be gladly given as a reward for conviction of any of these parties.

Chief Tippercanoe Tippy was easy scalped while overpowered by a bad case of Buck Fever.

Chief Big Calibre Lake's scalp was asily taken, owing to the fact that he had neglected to put a little cocaine in his twitching right eye.

Chief No-Talk Keeler was overwhelmed by better scores and peacefully submitted to the hair-raising ordeal.

Chief No-Hair Bell rang a bull's eye occasionally, but lost his scalp mumbling, "Those Ideal gas ranges hit the bull's eye every time."

The following is credited to Mr. Robert Hunter the "bard" of the Hunter Arms Company:

Chief Critic Hobbie's scalp was thought bullet proof,
And the uptown shooters threw their hats to the roof,
When Scorer Lake cried, "115 straight,"
But the gunworks' boys said, "Wait for Lewis,
For when he's in form, who can do us?
The scorer called those "twelves" so fast,
It fairly made poor Hobbie gasp.
In a minute more the deed was done,
Chief Critic's scalp hung in the sun.
"Lewis, 117," the scorer said,
We were glad to hear our captain led.

Chorus.

Now, remember boys, as we come together,
That Ideal rages are used in all kinds of weather
The "rubber" will not be shot.

All Ready.

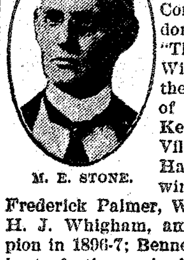
How the War News Comes

Some Famous Correspondents Who Are in the Far East. Handicapped by Strict Censorship—Cablegrams That Cost Over Four Dollars a Word. How Melville E. Stone Secured the Czar's Aid

THUS far in the Russo-Japanese struggle the war correspondent has not been much in evidence. The newspapers of America and Europe and the Associated Press are spending enormous sums; scores of correspondents are in Japan, Russia, China and Korea, and yet, as the New York Herald pathetically remarks, "the returns have been totally inadequate to the expenditures."

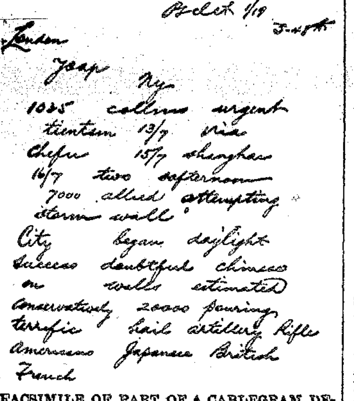
Among the famous correspondents now in the far east endeavoring to enlighten the American reader as to the course of events are John Fox, Jr., author of "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come;" Jack London, whose novel, "The Call of the Wild," was one of the great successes of last year; George Kennan, Frederic Villiers, Richard Harding Davis, Edwin Emerson, Jr.; Frederick Palmer, William Dinwiddie, H. J. Whigham, amateur golf champion in 1896-7; Bennett Burleigh and a host of others who have won fame in literature and as newspaper writers.



M. E. STONE.

But while trained men have been stationed at every strategic point throughout the war zone they have not been able to break through the rigid censorship established by the belligerents. Practically the only information that has been given to the world has come through the Associated Press.

The success of the Associated Press was made possible by the foresight of Mr. Melville E. Stone, general manager of the organization. Recognizing that perhaps St. Petersburg would be the most important point for news during the war, Mr. Stone early in the present year visited Russia and while there had a personal audience with the czar. At that time he succeeded in assuring the czar that the Associated Press would be impartial in its reports in the event of war and in return received the czar's assurance that the St. Petersburg bureau would be made the medium of transmitting official news of the progress of the war from the Russian capital to America.



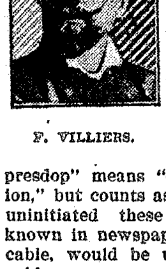
FACSIMILE OF PART OF A CABLEGRAM DESCRIBING ATTACK ON TIENTSIN.

Contrary to the popular idea, the war between Russia and Japan is not welcomed by the newspapers. More copies are sold, but the cost of making the newspaper is vastly increased. A newspaper to keep pace with its contemporaries and give all the news to its readers must maintain a corps of high priced correspondents in the field, as well as keep in touch with the headquarters of the contending armies. In some cases syndicates are formed, but most of the big newspapers of this country have anywhere from three to a dozen skilled writers on their payrolls in eastern Asia.

The cost of cablegrams is a still heavier item of expense. For instance, from Chefu to New York the cable rate for press dispatches is 42 cents a word, and the same rate is charged from Tientsin and Shanghai. From Port Arthur via the Pacific cable the rate is $1.02 a word, and from Tokyo it costs 54 cents a word to transmit a press message. From Vladivostok and Chemulpo no press rates are made, and messages must be paid for in advance at the full rate, which is about three times higher. The following incident illustrates the expense of cabling war news:

In the American newspapers on Monday, July 16, 1900, was a dispatch from Tientsin, China, which recounted the fact that the allied forces were fighting the Chinese troops in that city and, what was of the gravest human interest in the United States, the further fact that the Ninth regiment of United States regulars was in action and that its gallant colonel, Emerson H. Liscum, had been killed. The readers of the newspapers accepted this information in the ordinary way, very few possibly giving thought as to how the news had been procured or how it had circled three-fourths of the globe to be given out to the newspapers throughout this country. A correspondent of the Associated Press, Robert M. Collins, had witnessed the fighting, had noted the death of the colonel and secured the names of the wounded, had given the dispatch to a courier to proceed by steamer to Chefu, there to be started on the telegraph to Shanghai and there on the cable through the Indian ocean, up through the Red sea to London, finally to New York. The press rate from China was 55 cents a word, and as press messages had to take their turn after important government and commercial messages this might mean delay of two or three days. The cable companies have what is known as the "urgent" message rate, which was $4.15 a word from Shanghai to New York city. Collins' message of 130 words was at the "urgent" rate, which means that after it succeeded in reaching Shanghai it was pushed over the cable ahead of all other reports.

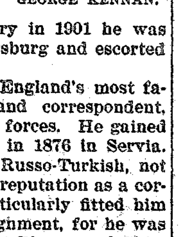
W. DINWIDDIE.



F. VILLIERS.

When cablegrams cost anywhere from 40 cents to $4 per word, the correspondent is expected to abbreviate to the last degree and at the same time make his cablegram intelligible. Not only does he omit all obvious and unessential words, but he also abbreviates and compounds several words into one. For instance, "expresdop" means "expressed the opinion," but counts as one word. To the uninitiated these cable dispatches, known in newspaper offices as "skin" cable, would be unreadable, but the cable news expert reads them with ease and fills in the omitted words.

The regulations of the Japanese government in regard to messages are a source of great annoyance to correspondents and seriously interfere with their work. In Japan all dispatches for points beyond Tokyo must be filed with the censor, properly translated into Japanese. This necessitates that each correspondent be attended by a Japanese translator.



GEORGE KENNAN.

Among the best known of the correspondents now in the east is George Kennan, who will be with the Japanese. Since the publication of his book, "The Siberian Exile System," about fifteen years ago, he has been persona non grata in Russia. While traveling through that country in 1901 he was stopped at St. Petersburg and escorted to the frontier.

Frederic Villiers, England's most famous war artist and correspondent, is with the Russian forces. He gained his first experience in 1876 in Servia. His next war, the Russo-Turkish, not only established his reputation as a correspondent, but particularly fitted him for his present assignment, for he was with the Russians at Plevna and Shipka pass. Later he was at the bombardment of Alexandria and at Tel-el-Kebir. Since then he has not missed a campaign of any consequence.

John Fox, Jr., is a native of Kentucky and is one of the most conspicuous of the younger American story writers of the present time. Previous to his latest success, "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," he had written several stories of Kentucky life that attracted much attention. Among them are "A Mountain Europa," "A Cumberland Vendetta" and "Hell-fer-Sartain." The strength of his literary work lies in his character sketching. Mr. Fox gained his first experience in war as correspondent in Cuba.

R. H. DAVIS.

In America no correspondent is better known than Richard Harding Davis, whose vivid pen pictures of stirring scenes, written in his picturesque style, long ago made him famous. While immensely popular as a novelist, Davis is a war correspondent of high standing. He followed the operations of the Greco-Turkish, the Spanish-American and the Boer-British wars and covered besides a revolution in Venezuela. Last year he was in Bulgaria during the uprising against the sultan.

Not so well known to the general public is William Dinwiddie, governor of Lepanto-Bontoc province, in the Philippines, who is with the Japanese army in Korea. Mr. Dinwiddie has obtained leave of absence from his post in the Philippines. Governor Dinwiddie went to Cuba at the beginning of the Spanish war, subsequently going to the Philippines. When the Boer war broke out he went to South Africa as a correspondent and photographer for one of the big New York weeklies, remaining there to the end of the war. In 1902 he established a paper in Manila, subsequently leaving it to become the governor of Lepanto-Bontoc.

Effacing Tattoo Marks.

Many persons who desire to get rid of india ink marks on the skin will be interested in the method recommended by a correspondent in a contemporary. He says: "After making the site of operation aseptic retattoo the part with needles (secundum artem), using the following solution: Chloride of zinc, thirty grams; sterilized water, forty grams. At the time of operation the tattooing becomes rather pale, and the needle pricks appear surrounded with white. At the border of the tattooed surface a raised white edge forms, caused by the raising of the epidermis, and the neighboring parts become slightly reddened. This, however, soon disappears, and with proper attention to cleanliness there is no intense reaction. In a day or two after the operation the tattooing becomes darker, the white areola becomes yellowish, and a crusty, superficial eschar forms, which separates on the fifth to the tenth day. It is not in any way painful, and the results, remote as well as immediate, are excellent."

Proposing In Holland.

In many of the provinces of Holland there is a marriage custom in vogue which is as curious as any to be found in a year's search through South Africa.

When a Dutch swain falls so deeply in love that he feels it imperative to breathe the story of his affections into the ears of his loved one, he starts out for her home, bearing in one hand a sweet seed cake wrapped in paper. Arrived at the family residence, he enters the living room, and without addressing the girl he places the cake upon a table near her. If she opens the paper and begins to eat, it is a sign that the love suit is acceptable to all.

But if the cake is left upon the table untouched then the lover must look somewhere else for a sweetheart. Sometimes the girl teases her lover by dallying with the cake before eating. In case she refuses him the whole affair is kept entirely secret, and no one outside the family is ever the wiser.

Concerning Drowning.

It was stated recently by a gentleman well known in the world of natation that accidents to swimmers are seldom due to cramp, but to apoplexy resulting from sudden cooling. The sinking three times is a curious error, as some persons swallow water and strangle on first immersion, sinking but once, while others may sink and rise fifty times. A man who has saved sixty-five lives has found that the drowning person cannot be stunned by a blow in the face, but that he can be handled by pressing the thumb under the ears and ducking his head until manageable, this being done from behind. The loss of presence of mind constitutes the greatest danger while persons are in the water.

An Odd Escape.

Perhaps the strangest escape from death after being swallowed up by an earthquake is that which is recorded on a Jamaican gravestone. "Here lieth the body of Lewis Galdy, Esq., who died on the 22d of September, 1737, aged eighty. He was born at Montpellier, in France, which place he left for his religion, and settled on this island, where, in the great earthquake, 1672, he was swallowed up and, by the wonderful providence of God, by a second shock was thrown out into the sea, where he continued swimming until he was taken up by a boat and thus miraculously preserved."

Peculiar Highland Remedies.

A popular highland remedy for both consumption and general debility was what is known as sudh nan cabar ("the juice of deer's horns"). These were gathered in the hills when the animals cast them in the springtime. They were boiled for some hours and the juice thus obtained bottled, after being strained. Candy sugar and whisky are usually added to it nowadays. Crabs' shells pulverized and eaten on bread and butter were used for consumption, asthma and whooping cough in the Hebrides.—Caledonian Medical Journal.

THE MORMON CHURCH.

How It Is Governed—The President an Absolute Dictator.

Andrew Jensen, assistant historian of the Mormon church, who recently testified before the senate committee on privileges and elections in the Reed Smoot case, gave an elaborate explanation of the machinery of the church and the distribution of authority among its officers. At the same time he made it clear that the president of the church is the absolute dictator of its affairs, both temporal and spiritual.

As at present organized the Mormon church comprises fifty-three stakes and 700 wards, the stakes being governed by presidents and the wards by bishops. As three men constitute the first presidency over the whole church, so each stake has a presidency of three persons. The president of a stake is named by the head of the church, and he in turn selects his own two counselors. The bishops of the wards are also named by the president of the church. The people of the wards send up a name or names, and he selects one as bishop. There are also officers called teachers, who are selected by the bishops. Thus all the officers are selected by the president of the church or by the men he has himself put into office.

A stake usually comprises a county, but because of the increase in population there have been made as many as three stakes in one county. In each stake there are from five to thirty wards.

According to Mr. Jensen, the organization of the church extends to all parts of Utah, and, aside from Salt Lake, Weaver and Summit counties, the Mormons were in a majority in all the counties of the state. High officers of the church, who are supposed to devote all of their time to its affairs, are under obligations to get the consent of the president if they desire to enter other business or politics.

In regard to punishments for breaking rules of the church, any member, the president not excepted, is amenable to the bishop of his ward. A member's moral conduct is treated as a local affair in the ward in which he resides. Mr. Jensen said that if a Mormon should turn informer against a polygamist who had continued to live with plural wives since 1890 such informer would be odious in the sight of most members of the church.

Weak Hearts

Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.

Mr. D. Kauble, of Nevada, O., says: I had stomach trouble and was in a bad state as I had heart trouble with it. I took Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for about four months and it cured me.

Kodol Digests What You Eat

RED CROSS IN JAPAN

TREMENDOUS GROWTH OF THE SOCIETY ORGANIZED IN 1877.

How Popular Interest In the Work Is Stimulated—Empress Haruko a Liberal Patron—Russia's Society the Richest In the World.

The Red Cross societies of both Japan and Russia are not surpassed by those of any other nation, that of the latter country being the richest in the world, having at the present time several million dollars in its treasure. While the Japanese society has not so large a bank account, it is amply supplied with funds and in point of membership and enthusiasm in the work easily stands first.

The Red Cross Society of Japan is the noblest of the many charitable institutions that have sprung up in the land of the mikado since it burst its bonds of exclusiveness and opened its doors to the outer world, and in no other country have efforts to minimize the horrors of war met with such unparalleled success as among the Japanese.

During the insurrection of the southwest provinces in 1877 a society having for its object the relieving of the wounded and sick on the field of battle came into being. It adopted the name Hakuaisha (Society of Benevolence). After the rebellion was crushed the society decided to form a permanent organization and prepare for similar emergencies. When the imperial government recognized the articles of the Geneva convention the society decided to place itself in connection with the international committee of the Red Cross at Geneva and to enter into fraternal relations with similar societies throughout the world. Having done this, the name of the organization was changed to the Red Cross Society of Japan.

Since then, fostered and promoted by imperial favor, the society has grown to tremendous proportions, the membership now being above 800,000. This is no doubt due in a great degree to the example set by the mikado and the empress of Japan. The reigning family takes a deep interest in Red Cross work and contributes liberally to the funds of the society. An imperial prince is always its honorary president, and the empress takes an active part in its work. She is a frequent visitor to the headquarters of the society and to the Red Cross hospital.

Popular interest is further stimulated by annual gatherings of the members from every part of the empire. These meetings are usually held in one of the public parks of Tokyo, and the attendance is seldom less than 200,000. Lectures illustrated by magic lantern pictures are given by medical men and attract much attention.

The headquarters of the society are in Tokyo and consist of a number of buildings containing the administrative offices, storerooms and various other departments. The amount of hospital supplies kept at headquarters is enormous. Within a day or two the Japanese Red Cross society can load a hospital ship or railroad train without the least confusion. Surgeons and nurses are ready at all times, and the arrangement of the hospital stores is so systematic that they can be moved at an hour's notice. The surgeons and nurses are under military rule and work with military precision. Two hospital ships owned by the society, the Hakuai Maru and Kosai Maru, were especially constructed for the care of the sick and wounded.

The Red Cross hospital in Tokyo is the finest in the city. It is in this hospital that the Red Cross female nurses receive their training. It has a capacity of 250 beds, and its staff is composed of the best physicians and surgeons in Tokyo. The nurses receive the most practical kind of instruction through lectures and demonstrations given by members of the staff. They serve an apprenticeship of three years and on passing a rigorous examination receive credentials which permit them to enter private practice and in the case of war to enter the field service under military rule.

Haruko, empress of Japan and special patron of the Red Cross society, was a princess of the house of Ichijo, one of the five ancient families descended from the Fujiwara clan, from which the emperors always selected their wives. She was married to the emperor in 1867, the year after his coronation. The five children of the emperor, one son and four daughters, have all been brought up according to western ideas.

He was a graduate of West Point and entered the Confederate army as a captain of artillery at the very outbreak of the war. He took part in the General Lee is a native of South Carolina, but has lived in Mississippi since 1865. After the war he labored to dispel sectional bitterness, and a "reunited country" is due as much to his efforts as to those of any individual. Since 1899 General Lee, who is seventy-one years old, has been commissioner of the Vicksburg National Military park.

Antwerp Milk Women.

There is no more picturesque figure in quaint old Antwerp than the milk women. For many years the milk of the city has been served to the houses by these women, whose customs and even costumes have remained unchanged. The milk women wear a simple dress, almost completely covered with a voluminous white apron. A quaint white headdress completes the uniform. Scores of these picturesque figures are to be seen throughout Antwerp in the morning hours. The milk is either carried in two large buckets, hung from a yoke running across the shoulders, or in little carts drawn by dogs.

Calendars of the Aztecs.

Calendars are probably the oldest form of literature in the world. The cards which appear by the millions in all civilized countries nowadays have their counterpart among the most ancient known races. The Aztecs, for example, were well supplied with calendars, and several of them have been preserved to this day. They were published in stone and set up in public places.

Sick Blood

Feed pale girls on Scott's Emulsion.

We do not need to give all the reasons why Scott's Emulsion restores the strength and flesh and color of good health to those who suffer from sick blood.

The fact that it is the best preparation of Cod Liver Oil, rich in nutrition, full of healthy stimulation is a suggestion as to why it does what it does.

Scott's Emulsion presents Cod Liver Oil at its best, fullest in strength, least in taste.

Young women in their "teens" are permanently cured of the peculiar disease of the blood which shows itself in paleness, weakness and nervousness, by regular treatment with Scott's Emulsion.

It is a true blood food and is naturally adapted to the cure of the blood sickness from which so many young women suffer.

We will be glad to send a sample to any sufferer.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

The Origin of Dunce.

A dunce is named after Duns Scotus, the chief and leader of the schoolmen who were in opposition to what was called "the new learning" in the sixteenth century. It is easy to see how readily convertible the term would be. Any opponent of the new learning would be apt to be referred to as a Dunsman, or, more briefly, as a Duns, to indicate that he held the views of which Duns Scotus was the most eminent representative. But, as the time went on and the new learning triumphed, to call any one a Dunsman or a dunce would be equivalent to describing him not merely as opposed to a certain set of doctrines, but as incapable of learning and enlightenment. It is certainly hard upon Duns Scotus, as Archbishop Trench has remarked, that he, "the subtle doctor" by preeminence, the "wittiest of the school divines," as Hooker terms him, should have his name handed down to future ages as a synonym for invincible stupidity.

Routine of a Chinese School.

Each Chinese schoolboy must furnish his own stool and table for school work and the "four precious articles," which are the ink slab, a cake of india ink, a brush for writing and paper. With these he begins his weary task of learning to write and read the thousands of Chinese characters. These are to open the way to the Chinese classics, and a knowledge of this ancient literature and wisdom means education to the Chinese. At the opening of a Chinese school a paper on which is written the name of Confucius is pasted on the wall. Before this honored name the pupils and teachers burn paper money and joss sticks and bow their heads three times to the floor. The teacher then tells Confucius the day, the month and the year and begs for his favor.—Everybody's Magazine.

Snakeskin In a Bird's Nest.

The great crested flycatcher chooses for its nesting place a sheltered hollow bough or the abandoned excavation made by the golden winged woodpecker. His architecture is peculiar on account of the unusual materials he uses. In every nest you will find a bit of dry snakeskin and shreds of soft inner bark of trees. Among hundreds of nests examined not one has lacked these peculiar substances. Naturalists have tried in vain to discover why the bit of dry snakeskin is chosen. It does not seem to be of any use in the structure of the nest, and quite often it lies loosely on the outer rim or carelessly set into the extreme bottom. Possibly the flycatcher regards it as a choice bit of ornamentation.

Grim Relics.

A prison sale is held annually in Paris. The articles offered for sale are the clothes of murdered people, the instruments with which the crimes have been committed and the effects which have belonged to the deceased prisoners. Articles which have been taken to the prefecture of police and have not been claimed are also sold. The proceeds go to the Paris almshouse. Unclaimed jewelry is usually bought by ordinary brokers, but the articles which have belonged to criminals, especially those who are notorious, are bought at high prices.

To Mothers in This Town.

Children who are delicate, feverish and cross will get immediate relief from Mother Gray's Sweet Powders for children. They cleanse the stomach, act on the liver, making a sickly child strong and healthy. A certain cure for worms. Sold by all druggists, 25 cents. Sample free. Address Allen S. Olmsted, LeRoy, N. Y.

A Beautiful Art.

Without disparagement of any of the other arts, to attain proficiency in which people make such long and valiant struggles, it may be truly said that the one art of smiling warms more hearts than all others together. Most children—in fact, all happy children—have an unconscious mastery of this beautiful art, but unfortunately they often lose it as they grow older. Children are the best judges of smiles in the world. "Her lips smile," said a child, speaking of a hard faced woman, "but she doesn't." A widening of the mouth in a vain endeavor to look pleasant is not a smile. It deceives nobody. A smile, to be worthy of the name, must come from the heart. It is the result of an honest willingness and readiness to be pleased with little as well as great things.

Happy, Healthy Children.

Any child can take Little Early Risers with perfect safety. They are harmless, never gripe or sicken, and they are so certain in results that robust constitutions requiring drastic means are never disappointed. They cannot fail to perform their mission and every one who uses DeWitt's Little Early Risers prefer them to all other pills. They cure biliousness. Sold by H. C. Geisler.

A Plan Handicapped.

"This paper says massage reduces the chin."

"Yes; perhaps so," replied Henpeck—"perhaps so, but she's never let me try it."—Houston Post.

Scotty and the Cabby.

It was about 1:30 when Archibald McAllister arrived at Euston station, and he found that the train he was to catch for Portsmouth did not leave London till 4 o'clock. To see as many of the "sights" of the great city as possible in the limited time was his earnest desire, but the hair raising stories he had heard in Tumtochy about London cabmen's charges had not been lost upon him. After a moment's thought, however, he hailed a hansom.

"I'm a stranger here, ye ken," he said to the driver, "but can ye drive me to Waterloo station in time to catch the 4 o'clock train?"

With a little reflection cabby said he thought he might manage it, and by driving by devious ways he managed to make that twenty minutes' journey last two hours and a half. Arrived at Waterloo, Archibald fastened upon a railway policeman.

"Can ye tell me the fare from Euston?"

"One and six," said the company's guardian.

"Vurry well," said Archie. "Here's a bawbee fer yerself, ma mon, and wull ye kindly settle wi' the cabman while a body teks his ticket?"—London Chronicle.

A Snuff Story.

Mrs. Margaret Thompson of London, who died many years ago, by her will directed that in her coffin should be buried all her handkerchiefs and sufficient of the best Scotch snuff to cover her body. This she preferred to flowers, as "nothing could be more fragrant and so refreshing to me as that precious powder." Further, the six greatest snuff takers in the parish of St. James, Westminster, were to be her bearers. Six old maids, each bearing in her hand a box filled with the best Scotch snuff to take for their refreshment as they walked, were to carry the pall. Before the corpse the minister was to walk, carrying and partaking of a pound of snuff. At every twenty yards a large handful of snuff was to be delivered to the bystanders, while at the door of the testator's house were to be placed for gratuitous distribution two bushels of the same quality of snuff.

Earthquakes and Pestilence.

From early times pestilence has been regarded as one of the accompaniments of earthquakes. Nor is this perhaps a mere figment of superstition. Many instances of epidemics following upon earthquakes are on record, says the Lancet. Thus in 557-60 A. D., earthquake years, Constantinople was visited by a pestilence, and in 615 A. D., after more than a decade of seismic disturbances which extended from Japan to the Mediterranean, the whole of Italy was visited, according to Sigonius, by a fearful epidemic, of which the nature is not recorded. Old writers, such as Von Plenciz, an authority on the Lisbon earthquake of 1755, were wont to attribute the proneness to disease exhibited by whole populations during earthquake season to shaken nerves begotten of prolonged suspense and broken rest at night.

A Clever Special Pleader.

Sir John Byles was a clever special pleader as a lawyer. In his young days he appeared in a breach of promise case to defend a man who had married another woman. Sir John cross examined the plaintiff thus: "Did he not promise to marry you when his father was dead?" "Yes." "Is his father dead?" "No." "Then that is my case. The defendant's wife may die before his father or afterward, and he may outlive them both, when it will be time for him to fulfill his promise."

It is also recorded that Sir John rode a horse called Business so that his clerk might conscientiously tell any callers that his master was out on business.—London Standard.

A French Episode.

A Frenchwoman took a seat in a railway car in Paris the other day when a man entered and sat down on the edge of her dress. She called his attention to the fact and asked him, first pleasantly, then angrily, to get up. He paid no attention to her, whereupon she boxed his ears repeatedly. He retaliated by pushing her from her seat, whereupon she screamed and he was arrested. It turned out that he had not heard a word of what she had said, being deaf, and he was naturally indignant at her action; but he apologized all the same.

The Moon and Thunder.

It has been said that thunderstorms are influenced by the moon. Nearly 12,000 observations collected by the United States weather bureau show a preponderance of 33 per cent in the first half of the lunar month. The greatest number of thunderstorms come between the new moon and the first quarter and the least number between the full moon and the last quarter. This is perhaps the only satisfactory evidence that the weather is at all influenced by the moon.

AMADOR OF PANAMA.

FIRST PRESIDENT OF THE NEW ISTHMIAN REPUBLIC.

Boldest Leader of the Movement That Resulted in Independence—How He Forced Matters at a Critical Moment.

The inauguration of Dr. Manuel Amador as president of the republic of Panama a few weeks ago marked the climax of the "business" revolution which cost Colombia her richest province and added a new state to the family of nations.

Dr. Manuel Amador, the first president of the new republic, is seventy years old, a physician by profession and a native of Cartagena, Colombia. He was one of the leaders in the revolutionary movement which led to the independence of Panama last November, and in fact to him more than to any of his associates was due the success of the undertaking. The story of his part in the revolution is as follows:

When on Oct. 31 of last year the Colombian congress adjourned without ratifying the treaty with the United States affairs had already progressed rapidly on the isthmus. Seven men, all interested for business reasons in the construction of the canal, had about finished the work of organizing a business revolution. They were Tomas Arias, Arango, Arosemena, Dr. Amador, Ricardo Arias, F. Boyd and Obarrio. All had something of a pecuniary interest at stake in the issue and for the most part belonged to the Conservative party, which is at present in control of Colombian affairs.

Feeling assured that they had the sympathy of the people of the isthmus in their undertaking, the committee went ahead with its plans. There was a battalion of Colombian troops at Panama, commanded by General Huertas, who had long been stationed at Panama. Huertas was won over by the revolutionists.

It had been planned to have the revolution on the day following that on which it actually occurred. The scheme was to be sprung on Nov. 4 at Panama. But on Nov. 3 the Cartagena steamed into Colon with Generals Tovar and Amaya and 450 Colombian troops on board. The news was telegraphed to Panama and created general consternation. Dr. Amador largely deserves credit for putting the revolution through in spite of the hesitation of some of the other leaders. When the Colombian generals arrived they came without their troops, the Panama railroad having refused to transport them.

The generals were arrested by Huertas' soldiers and the republic proclaimed. The next day the declaration of independence was read in the Cathedral park and was signed by the leaders in the movement and by all present who wished. Three men, Frederic Boyd, Constantin Arosemena and Tomas Arias, were appointed consuls. They assumed authority over the republic as members of the supreme junta, the junta at once organizing a government and constituting the supreme legislative and executive power until the inauguration of Dr. Amador on Feb. 20.

The honor that has come to Dr. Amador was unsought and is all the greater because of the fact that he is not a native of Panama. He has lived on the isthmus since 1860, and, although he has figured for many years in the political life of Panama, he steadfastly refused many high offices under the Colombian government.

Dr. Amador was the leader of the Conservative party, and in 1869, much against his will, he was nominated and elected by his party to the presidency of the state of Panama. He never took office, however, for a Liberal revolution was started and succeeded before his inauguration.

As a young man Dr. Amader engaged in commercial pursuits with his brother in Santiago de Veraguas, in the state of Panama. He went to the city of Panama in [illegible], becoming one of the eminent physicians of the country. For [illegible] he has occupied the place of physician for the Panama [illegible] company and the Pacific Mail Steamship company. Dr. Amador has [illegible] Raoul A. Amador, consul [illegible] Panama in New York, [illegible] Amador, who was minister [illegible] under the provisional [illegible] Panama.

Rufus Story, a peculiar man and a New York merchant, daringly manipulated the coffee and spice markets in the middle of the nineteenth century. On one occasion when he owned a large quantity of coffee the market rapidly declined. His ruin was predicted. "What are you going to do?" I asked him.

"Why," he said, with a shrewd wink, "I shall buy several thousand bags more and steady the market."

He came out of this speculation and almost every other in which he embarked with success. He commenced business in butter and eggs and became the master of the spice market of the world. Once he imported an entire cargo of pepper. He had only a dim idea of where coffee and spice came from, and usually spoke of the places as "way off." His books were kept by single entry, as he refused to understand any other system. A small paper memorandum carried in the lining of his high hat was his chief reliance in regard to his business affairs. He was one of the founders of the National Broadway bank.—Town Topics.

Wanted—Two Good Murderers.

Some curious letters passed between Garrick and a man named Stone. The latter was employed to get recruits for the low parts of the drama, and one night he wrote to Garrick, "Sir, the bishop of Winchester is getting drunk at the Bear and swears he will not play tonight."

At first sight this seems peculiar conduct for a bishop, but it should be explained that the communication only refers to the man engaged to take that character in the play of "Henry VIII."

On another occasion Garrick wrote to Stone: "If you can get me two good murderers I will pay you handsomely, particularly the spouting fellow who keeps the apple stall on Tower hill. The cut in his face is just the thing. Pick me up an alderman or two for 'Richard' if you can, and I have no objection to treat with you for a comely mayor."—Chambers' Journal.

A Wise Provision.

Did you ever notice when a man smites his thumb with a hammer while putting down a carpet under his wife's supervision how quickly he thrusts the bruised and throbbing member into his mouth? People think it is because the application is soothing. But the movement is purely involuntary, like winking. The man cannot help it.

The fact is that nature knows what a man is apt to say under such circumstances and so has provided him with an automatic stopper. Whenever he hits his thumb hard enough to hurt—and it doesn't take a very hard blow almost to kill a man when he is doing something he doesn't like to do—by a sort of interlocking system his thumb flies into his mouth, and for the critical moment speech is cut off.

An Odd Korean Custom.

Everybody knows the fondness of the adult Chinese for kiteflying. The Korean, however, puts this pastime to a use altogether novel. When the time of good resolutions comes around at the new year the Korean writes on a kite all his faults, "evil disposition, impatience, bad words, street fights," etc. "It was so dark," says one American residing in Korea, relating such an instance, "that no kite could be seen, but when the Korean had run the string out to its full length he cut it and let it go, imagining that so he had rid himself of his enemies and could begin the new year with new courage."

Crocodiles and Alligators.

The true crocodiles are distinct from the alligators. Among the points of distinction the following are the most noticeable: In the crocodiles the so called canine tooth, the fourth counting from the front, fits into a notch in the side of the upper jaw and is therefore visible when the mouth is closed, while in the alligator it is received in a pit in the upper jaw and is therefore invisible or nearly so. Again, in the crocodile the hind legs have a fringe of fattened scales which is wanting in the alligators, whose legs are round.—London Saturday Review.

Fish Delusions.

There are two popular delusions about fish—one that they cannot live out of water and the other that they can live in any pure water, the food supply taking care of itself. As a matter of fact, there are fish in Africa which, having to exist in absolutely dry rivers for a portion of the year, have developed lungs, while in many an amateur's aquarium fish cannot live in the water provided owing to lack of food.

Then It Was Tommy's Bedtime.

Tommy Figgjam—Paw, what the Bible says is true, ain't it? Paw Figgjam—Sure thing, my son. Tommy Figgjam—Don't it say "All flesh is grass?" Paw Figgjam—Yes, Tommy. Tommy Figgjam—Then ain't dried beef hay?—Baltimore American.

Passive Christianity.

"Little boy," inquired the minister who had called to see the man of the house, "is your father a Christian?"

"Yes," replied the boy; "I think he is, but I don't believe he is working at it these days."—Lippincott's.

Too Literal.

Boarder (tackling a tough steak, to boarding house keeper)—When you undertook to provide me with board, madam, I was unaware that you meant to do so literally.

His Feebleness.

Johnnie—I told Uncle Simon that he was getting too old and feeble to attend to business. Mamma—Did he take it kindly? Johnnie—He threw me out of his office.

SMITH OF MICHIGAN.

William A., Who Nominated Joe Cannon For the Presidency.

William Alden Smith, who recently created considerable excitement in the house by nominating Speaker Joe Cannon for the presidency, is one of two Smiths, both Republicans, who are members of the Michigan delegation to congress. He is a self made man, and the story of his rise from poverty is of more than usual interest. When a boy he peddled a paper on the streets of Grand Rapids, whereas he is now the chief owner of that paper, the Herald, and the president of the company that publishes it.

Congressman Smith is a native of Michigan and received a common school education, to which was added a course in law. In 1883 he was admitted to the bar and in a few years had become one of the leading corporation lawyers in the state. From 1886 to 1901 he was the general counsel for two of the most important railroads in the state.

His first political job was that of page in the Michigan house of representatives, and it is related that he stole a ride to Lansing on one of the railroads of which he was afterward general counsel. He first went to Washington as member of the Fifty-fourth congress and has since been four times re-elected. Mr. Smith has had a good deal of experience in statecraft and in business, and his point of view on politics as well as on general topics is usually breezy and interesting.

"Mr. President," said Speaker Cannon to Colonel Roosevelt the day after Smith's speech, "I am in a fix. Here I am nominated for president by William Alden Smith of Michigan, and yesterday my county convention out in Illinois declared for Theodore Roosevelt first, last and all the time, and today my congressional convention is going to do the same thing."

"All this talk about my having another barrel to fire," said William Alden Smith, "is foolish. I have nothing more to say. My position reminds me of the story of Henry Clay. He went to a shooting match in Kentucky one time. They pressed a gun into his hands and told him he must take a crack at the target. He had never fired a gun in his life, but he blazed away and hit a bullseye, and until the day of his death he would never fire another gun."

STARTLED CONGRESS.

Hay of Virginia, Who Called Out the Bristow Postal Report.

James Hay, the member of congress from Virginia who introduced the resolution calling from committee the special postal report which caused such a commotion in the house, until now has been practically unknown outside of his own state.

The Virginia statesman could hardly have foreseen that the report would impugn the fair fame of so many members, some of his own political creed, and doubtless he was as surprised as any man in the house. Innocent or not, Mr. Hay, it may be assumed, has not increased his popularity in congress.

The effect of the publication of the report promises to be far reaching, and it is asserted that unless the matter is cleared up at least two-thirds of the 151 members involved will lose their seats.

She Knew the Reason.

At the dinner table one evening some one remarked that a certain lady had a thin falsetto voice. Little Maisie was acquainted with the person referred to, and she cried out abruptly:

"Oh, I know why! Because she's got a false set o' teeth!"—New York Press.

Novelists and Poisons.

We read very frequently how the hero or heroine had a chloroform soaked handkerchief pressed over the nose and became at once insensible. Chloroform does not act in that way. It causes excitement before anything approaching to loss of sensibility, and when insensibility has been reached the patient begins to kick and throw his arms about.

We are also told how he or she swallowed the drugged wine, gave a gasp and fell back senseless. The only senseless person in the business is the novelist. An absolutely poisonous dose of laudanum would not cause loss of consciousness until several minutes had elapsed after its being taken.

But the prize must be awarded to the writer who says that "the victim raised the glass containing strychnine, drank its contents and fell down dead." The victim would probably lie down sooner or later. Then he would writhe and twist, groan and cry aloud, for the strychnine would seem to be tying his inside and his muscles into knots. Death by strychnine poisoning is agonizing.

To the Grave In Spectacles.

At a recent funeral it was noticed that the face of the dead was adorned with glasses. Naturally the queer decoration occasioned surprise. Even the undertaker seemed hardly to know what to make of it.

"However," he said, "this is not the first time I have buried a man with glasses on. But the instances have been so few that I haven't got used to the idea. Certainly I never add that finishing touch of my own accord. It is always done at the request of the family. In every case I find that the deceased and his glasses were inseparable in life, and in order to preserve the likeness they are to be still undivided in death. Personally, I think the notion inartistic, but art is not my business. When anybody wants to be buried in glasses that's the way I bury him."—New York Times.

Compass Plants.

Several different countries—America, Asia Minor, Tartary, Madagascar and Australia—have shrubs and flowers which are, locally at least, known as "compass plants." The compass plant of the United States is the common rosin weed of our western prairies, which has the long leaves near the ground set in a vertical position in such a way as to always present the edges to the north and south. This peculiar propensity of the rosin weed is attributed to the fact that both the upper and lower surfaces of the leaves demand an equal share of light, something which can be said of but few known plants, the upper surfaces usually being much more sensitive to both light and heat than the lower. This demand for a share of Old Sol's attention causes the leaves to stand in the manner mentioned above.

Animals That Lay Eggs.

There are two animals in Australia that lay eggs after the manner of birds and reptiles. They are those quaint creatures the ornithorhynchus, or duck billed platypus, and the echidna, or porcupine ant eater. The former lays its eggs in burrows, which it scratches out on the banks of rivers. The latter carries them until hatched in a pouch somewhat like the kangaroo's.

In many respects these animals have an anatomical affinity to reptiles, but their mouths are toothless and beaklike, resembling those of birds, while the feet of the platypus are webbed. The platypus is a semiaquatic animal, and the porcupine ant eater is much like the ground hog in appearance.

Dead Men's Teeth.

Before artificial teeth were created deficiencies had to be made good by the real article, so body snatchers ravaged the cemeteries at night, breaking up the jaws of the dead to extract their teeth to sell to dentists for insertion in live men's mouths. An army of these ghouls followed Wellington's army. They were licensed as sutlers, but once night fell out came their nippers, and they prowled over the battlefield extracting the teeth of the dead or dying.

"Orang Outang" Incorrect.

The large anthropoids of Borneo and Sumatra are usually called orang outangs. This form, it seems, is not correct. Orang signifies man and outang, or utang, debt, something owing; so that orang outang would simply mean a man in debt. The correct Malay name is orang utan, or outan. This signifies the forest man in distinction to orang dusun, or village (civilized) man.

Not the Same Meaning.

Nervous Old Lady (in saloon of steamer)—Oh, steward, where do I sleep? Steward—What is the number of your berth, ma'am? Nervous Old Lady—I don't see what that has to do with it, but if you must know it is third. There were a sister and a brother born before me.

A Very Dear Spot.

"After all," remarked the sentimental wife, "home is the dearest spot on earth."

"Yes, verily," rejoined the head of the matrimonial trust as he finished auditing last month's grocery bill.

A Gentle Hint.

Riley—So Casey was killed by th' blasht? Who broke th' news to his widdy? Rooney—Big Tim Houlihan. Riley—Did he do it gintly? Rooney—He did. He began be askin' her to marry him.—Judge.

ENDURED IN A GOOD CAUSE.

How Two Women Suffered For Devotion to Woman Suffrage.

A pleasant incident in connection with the recent national suffrage convention at Washington was the presentation to Miss Susan B. Anthony on her birthday of a basket of raisins from Mrs. Elizabeth Russell of Minneapolis. It was in memory of a noteworthy adventure that befell Miss Anthony and Rev. Anna H. Shaw a few years ago when they were campaigning for a pending woman suffrage amendment in South Dakota. They had to ride thirty miles in a sleigh in very cold weather to reach one of their appointments and then to ride forty miles more by night over extremely rough roads to the railroad where they were to take the train for their next meeting. The little station, which they reached at 4 a. m., consisted of one small bare room without even a bench. The train was five hours late. Miss Anthony, who was then nearly eighty years of age, sat down on the floor in a corner and managed to get some sleep resting her head on her knees. Miss Shaw walked up and down till the belated train arrived. The two ladies had nothing to eat but a handful of raisins, which they divided between them, half a dozen raisins for each.

Colonel T. W. Higginson was once told by a young opponent of equal rights that the majority of women did not wish to vote. Colonel Higginson said to him: "You dwell only on the quantity of the desire for equal suffrage. I want you now to learn something about quality. Go and talk with Lucy Stone." The women who wish to vote are not yet a majority, but the intensity with which they wish it and the hardships which many of them are ready to undergo in working for it are worthy of note. Still more significant is the quality of brain and heart in those who have been for half a century the most active in this movement. As Colonel Higginson said on another occasion, "What the ablest women believe today is what the average women will believe tomorrow."

ALICE STONE BLACKWELL.

A Hindoo Belief About Owls.

The Hindoos declare that the flesh and blood of an owl will make a person insane who eats or drinks it. On this account men who are devoured by jealousy of a rival or hatred of an enemy come furtively to the market and purchase an owl. In silence they carry it home and secretly prepare a decoction, which an accomplice will put into the food of the object of their malignant designs.

We measure minds by their stature. It would be better to estimate them by their beauty.—Joubert.

A Modest Colonel.

According to the Canadian Military Gazette, the new adjutant of a volunteer regiment was asking the colonel a few things about the corps and eventually got on to the subject of marksmanship. "Is the battalion a fairly good shooting one?" he asked. "Oh, yes; it is quite," answered the colonel grandiloquently. "You'll find a large percentage of good shots in my regiment. And some very fine shots, too—very fine shots. I myself,"—here he dropped his voice to a lower and more oily pitch—"am the best shot. Lieutenant Pullthrough, who is the next best shot to myself, is a magnificent shot."

Insect Temperatures.

The temperature of the human body is essentially the same in the tropics and in the polar zones. Insects at rest have a temperature practically the same as that of the surrounding air in ordinary conditions of heat and of humidity. Under usual conditions the temperature of an insect rises with that of the surrounding air, only more slowly. When the air is very moist the insect's temperature may rise more rapidly than that of the air. When the insect begins to move, its temperature rises and continues to rise until the motion ceases.

Ten Ways to Say "Ough."

A correspondent of the London Chronicle points out nine ways of pronouncing the letters "ough." These are, written phonetically, as in coff, cauf (each is allowable), enuff, thaut, tho, throo, hiccup, the Irish lough and the Scot's pronunciation of sough, "such," the two final consonants in the last two words representing the corresponding gutturals in German. The editor in comment adds, "There is one other—'bough.'"

Keeping Up Appearances.

Mrs. Catterson—Mrs. Wilter is a woman with a great deal of pride, isn't she? Mrs. Hatterson—Intense. She told me she had ordered as many clothes this season as she would if her husband hadn't been in debt.—Brooklyn Life.

The Better Plan.

Sabina—Do you quote Shakespeare and Dante when that college professor calls? Sabrilla—Not much. I whirl in and make him a rousing old Welsh rabbit.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

A Standing Invitation.

"Pa, what is a standing invitation?"

To the energetic man who has a purpose in life failures are but stepping stones to real success.—Maxwell's Talisman.

Wars and Births.

Statistics of population seem to show that after long and severe wars in which many men are killed and the male part of a country's population is greatly decreased there is for several years a preponderating birth of male children until the normal proportion between the sexes is restored. This seems to have been noted after the Thirty Years' war in Germany, after the Napoleonic war in France and even in more recent times after the siege of Paris.

Johnny's Prize Example.

Johnny—Papa, I got the prize for arithmetic today. I did an example on the blackboard out of my own head. Papa—What was it, Johnny? Johnny—Why, I did—our baby weighs eleven and three-quarter pounds. She gains one ounce a day. When she is twenty she will weigh 466 pounds.—Chicago Post.

Dimensions of Noah's Ark.

"Within recent years," says the editor of the Syren and Shipping, "the general dimensions of the ark have been closely followed by cargo steamship builders for deep sea and the American great lakes service. According to the Bible, the ark was 480 feet long, 80 feet wide and 48 feet deep. Her tonnage was 11,413, and she had plenty of room for pairs of all the distinct species of animals that are classed by Buffon—244—and she could have accommodated a thousand persons and then have plenty of room for the storage of supplies. In the seventeenth century Peter Jansen, a Hollander, built a vessel of the exact proportions of the ark, and she was successful, as records of the times show, in making money for her owners. Noah, 'the father of naval architecture,' is held in profound respect by naval architects of today, who know how immeasurably the Phœnicians, Greeks and Romans and all other shipbuilders fell short of the excellence of the type of the ark as a commodious, safe and economical vessel."

Heels Half a Yard High.

The streets of the old city of Venice were often extremely thick in mud, in spite of the great sewers which dated from the tenth century. Even now the thoroughfares between the Piazza and Rialto are sometimes sufficiently bad. We are writing of the time when the population was nearly five times what it now is, and when Venetian trade was at its zenith. Well, to combat this mud the ladies took to high heeled shoes.

As the mud grew worse the heels became taller and taller until at length they were half a yard high and as difficult to control as a pair of stilts without handles. The consequence was that a lady in full dress, obliged to walk but a few yards, had to be supported on both sides. This was a task for the black pages or for the lovers, who had at that time become a very conventional part of Venetian society.

Some Misnamed Drugs.

Some misnomers of the drug store: Oil of vitrol is not an oil. Copperas is an iron salt and contains no copper. Salts of lemon has nothing to do with a lemon, but it is a salt of the extremely poisonous oxalic acid. Soda water contains no soda. Sulphuric ether contains no sulphur. Sugar of lead has nothing to do with lead, nor has cream of tartar anything to do with cream. Oxygen means the "acid generator," but hydrogen is really the essential element, and many acids contain oxygen. German silver contains no silver, and blacklead contains no lead. Berberine is usually made from hodrastis canadensis. Wormseed is unexpanded flower buds. Milk of lime has no milk. Quicksilver is purely mercury. Oil of origanum is made from thyme and not from origanum.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

First Assembly District Selects Delegates to Congressional and State Conventions. Hon. P. J. Cullinan for National Convention.

The First Assembly Republican convention was held in the City Hall, Oswego, on Friday afternoon. Dinner was served the delegates at the Deep Rock hotel prior to the convention, which was called for 1 o'clock. [illegible] At 1:15 o'clock, Col. John T. Mott called the convention to order, and in the unavoidable absence of Mr. E. R. Redhead of this city, ex-Mayor Baker of Oswego was made chairman. Upon accepting the honor, Mr. Baker eulogized President Roosevelt and other Republicans in official life in State and County, and then asked the further pleasure of the convention. Messrs. Harry R. Carrier of Oswego and Merle Dougal of Schroeppel were appointed secretaries and were sworn in by Mr. L. W. Baker. Hon. T. D. Lewis moved that the deliberations of the convention be governed by the rules of the Assembly.

Mr. W. E. Hughes of this city moved the appointment of a committee on resolutions. Messrs. Hughes and Edward Waugh of Fulton and George Simons of West Monroe were appointed a committee by Chairman Baker. Upon motion of Mr. Stephen King the organization was make permanent.

On motion of Attorney S. B. Mead, of this city, the following State delegates were elected: Colonel John T. Mott, P. W. Cullinan, Oswego; T. D. Lewis, Fulton; C. B. Benson, Minetto; T. C. Sweet, Phoenix; George W. Brooker, Fulton.

Alternates—John W. Distin, Volney; Fred J. Palmer, Granby; John S. Parsons, Oswego; Charles Bennett, Fulton; Benjamin Baker, Oswego; W. H. Brackett, Hannibal; J. W. Rigley, Granby.

Attorney Mead moved that the delegates be instructed to use all honorable means to secure the re-election of the Hon. John T. Mott for State Committeeman. The resolution was greeted with applause. The following Congressional delegates were named by Attorney Merry of Phoenix; George Coville, Hastings; George C. Webb, Fulton; A. S. Guthrie, Hannibal; M. F. Tooley, Palermo; M. C. Worts, Oswego; E. M. Wightman, West Monroe.

Alternates—George B. Elliott, Hastings; W. J. King, Schroeppel; J. W. Burt, Hannibal; Byron Worden, Oswego Town; Fred A. Glynn and C. A. Cooper, Oswego.

Mr. Merry also moved that the delegates be instructed to support the Hon. P. W. Cullinan for delegate to the National convention and the resolution was carried with enthusiasm.

The following resolutions were presented by Mr. Hughes and were unanimously adopted:

The Republicans of the First Assembly District of Oswego County, reaffirming the principles upheld by our party through the many years of the largest growth and prosperity due to the masterly efforts of its great men, Lincoln, Grant, Garfield, McKinley, do resolve, that we will use our best endeavors to continue and even exceed the successful achievements of our party.

The Republican party enters this campaign fortified with the confidence that the policies that have given our nation its high standing among world powers have been fully maintained in the last four years. It puts forth its declaration of principles in the firm confidence that the people are in accord with them as they have been in the past. It stands for sound money, protection to American industries and a foreign policy that would shun any entanglement with foreign powers that might arise in the war between Russia and Japan, at the same time standing for the integrity of China and for the policy of the "open door" for that nation.

We commend the policy of the administration in relation to the new Republic of Panama and congratulate the country on the fact that the Panama Canal will now be built to the great benefit of the commerce of this country and the world.

The people of this country have unmistakably indicated their choice for the Republican nomination for President of the United States, no other name being considered than that of President Roosevelt.

[illegible] for the enforcement of law without fear or favor. His earnest efforts are constantly devoted to the public welfare. The party is indeed fortunate in being able to present such an ideal candidate for the suffrages of the people of the country. His record is a splendid one and merits the approval of all.

The wise, consistent and patriotic course pursued by the Hon. Thomas C. Platt and Hon. Chauncey M. Depew in the United States Senate and House of Representatives in upholding and strengthening the administration of President Roosevelt and their labors in the interests of their constituents, give them an influence felt in all circles.

In State, as in the nation, we see the happy results of Republican principles and practice. The policies of retrenchment and indirect taxation inaugurated by our matchless Governor, Benjamin B. Odell, have resulted in lifting the burden of taxation from the farmer and laborer and placing it upon those best able to hear it.

We heartily congratulate the Hon. N. N. Stranahan and Hon. P. W. Cullinan on the great success with which they are meeting the duties and responsibilities of their high offices and the great executive ability that they display in their positions as Collector of the Port of New York and State Excise Commissioner. Their splendid success is very pleasant to their countless friends. We hope they may long adorn their present positions, unless, as we confidently expect, they are called upon to take higher positions in the public service.

We commend with great pride Col. John T. Mott, whose unselfish devotion as State Committeeman has promoted the interests of the party, not only in this Congressional District but in the State. His faithful work is worthy of the highest praise.

The gentlemen representing this county in the Legislature, the Hon. Francis H. Gates in the Senate and the Hon. Thomas D. Lewis and the Hon. Frederick G. Whitney in the Assembly, have labored faithfully during the present session in the interests of this county. It is with satisfaction that we refer to their record.

Resolutions of regret on the death of Fred D. Wheeler were presented by Mr. Harry R. Carrier as follows.

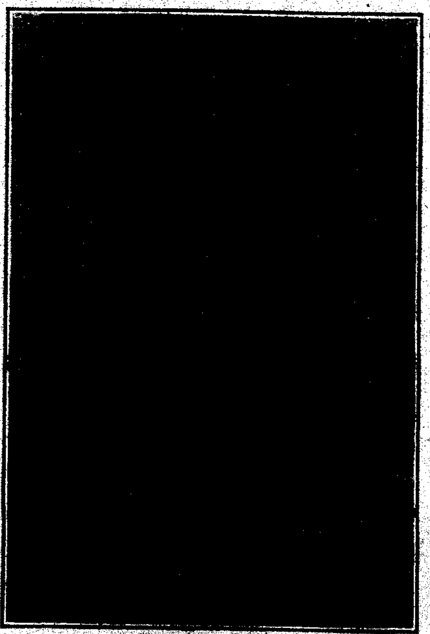
The Republicans of the Third Ward and of the other wards of the City of Oswego, with profound sorrow, announce to the convention the recent death of our beloved neighbor and friend, Fred D. Wheeler, former City Clerk of Oswego. Mr. Wheeler from his earliest manhood was an untiring, zealous and efficient worker for the success of the [illegible] in his public as well as in his private life desire to express our appreciation of his straightforward character, marked by all the manly virtues, his consistent, successful and earnest efforts to do well regarding every private and public trust imposed in him.

We desire to express to his family the heartfelt sympathy we feel for them in the irreparable loss they have sustained in his untimely death.

Ex-Mayor Baker also made touching references to the death of Mr. Wheeler.

The resolutions were adopted, after which the motion of Mr. John S. Parson to adjourn, prevailed.

The Congressional Convention to elect delegates to the National Convention, will be held in Watertown on Friday morning at 11 o'clock.



Dr. A. F. Schauffler, who Will Be Present at the County Sunday School Convention.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

Oswego County Association will Convene in this City—Dr. A. F. Schauffler will be Present.

Sunday-school workers throughout the county will be glad to learn that the annual convention of the Oswego County Sunday-School Association will convene at Fulton, in the First M. E. Church on Thursday, April 21, opening at 10.30 a. m. The central figure of the convention will be the famous Dr. A. F. Schauffler of New York, probably the best known Sunday-school leader in the United States. Though a very busy man, he has consented to come to Fulton and to teach the lesson for the following Sunday at the afternoon session and to give one of his masterly addresses in the evening. Dr. Schauffler was at the convention in Oswego four years ago and made a deep and lasting [illegible] him.

Other speakers will be Rev. P. F. Womer of Syracuse, Rev. E. B. Topping of Oswego, Mrs. Owen of Utica, Mrs. R. C. Turner of Oswego, Rev. Mr. Petterson of Mexico, and others. A feature of the afternoon session will be a simultaneous conference, with departments for pastors, superintendents, adult and intermediate teachers, and primary workers, each department presided over by some prominent local leader in that special line of work. In the evening, the officers for the ensuing year will be elected, and an offering will be received for State and county work. It is hoped that this offering will be large, and that every delegate will be furnished with funds by his school, to make this contribution worthy its important object.

Fulton is so centrally located, and so accessible, and the reputation of Dr. Schauffler is so great that it is confidently expected that workers from all parts of the county will be present. The local arrangements are in charge of a large committee.

The correspondence and sending out of programs are in charge of Mr. Harry L. Stout, of Fulton, the county secretary. The Rev. C. N. Thorp of Oswego, the president of the association, will preside over the sessions. Programs will be in the hands of schools throughout the county in time for appointment of delegates by next Sunday.

The Household Pet— The Gas Range.

The response to our announcement of last week, to the effect that we would sell gas ranges at cost while our present limited stock lasts, has, as had been expected, been prompt. Some have secured their ranges but do not want them put in at once; others want them set as soon as possible, wishing to take advantage of the whole season and also wishing to avoid the inevitable rush of a little later on, these latter are keeping us comfortably busy, notwithstanding the fact that as yet we have not experienced any warm weather.

Knowing how soon this stock will melt away, and not knowing what our prices on our next lot may be, we cannot too strongly urge prompt decision and prompt action, if possible disappointments are with certainty to be avoided.

CURRENT EVENTS CLUB.

Domestic and Foreign Happenings Briefly Chronicled.

The Current Events Club met on Monday evening, March 28, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Earl S. Brown on South Third street. The Rev. John Richards and Mr. J. H. Howe were the leaders.

Mr. Richards stated that he and his coadjutor had decided to divide the matters of foreign and national interest, Mr. Howe speaking on those of foreign import and he confining his attention to domestic affairs.

The decision of the United States Supreme Court in the great Merger case was favorably commented on by Mr. Richards, who stated that he would be pleased to have the members discuss each of the subjects as presented, which proved an interesting and enjoyable feature. The lynching of a negro in Springfield, Ohio; the signing of the "Jim crow" bill by the Governor of Maryland; the confirmation of General Wood by the United States Senate; the collapse of the corner in cotton and the discomfiture of Sully, the "cotton king;" the Ware pension measure, were concisely set forth and discussed.

The favorable report of the commission regarding the proposed Pan-American railroad and the disposition of the Legislature to sacrifice the marvelous grandeur of Niagara Falls to the commercial spirit of the age, concluded an interesting program.

Mr. J. H. Howe spoke on the progress of the Russo-Japan war and the unreliable rumors circulated regarding the capture of Port Arthur and alleged victories of the combatants; the probability of permitting the Russian Black Sea fleet to pass through the Dardanelles; the recent decisive [illegible] General Wood in the Philippines; trouble in the Balkan [illegible] Emperor William's trip through the Mediterranean; loss of the [illegible] sub-marine boat; Cuban reciprocity and the adoption by that country of the American and modern methods of cultivating tobacco. Time [illegible] the members for the discussion of the foregoing topics and the interesting session was brought to a close.

The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Hunter, corner of Second and [illegible] streets, on Monday evening, April 11. The leaders will be Mrs. L. Fowler Joy and Miss Mabel Chesley.

New Evidence in Little Case.

Mr. John J. Little was called to Canastota last week by the information that a pocket book which had belonged to his brother, James Little, who met with a violent death in the Fall, had been found at a considerable distance from where his body was found in the basin of the Erie canal. The pocket book was empty and had not been in the water. This strengthens the theory of murder and the case will be again opened for investigation, it is expected.

All children, girls as well as boys, should be taught self reliance.

Don't allow eating of any kind between meals if you want to avoid digestive troubles.

Don't let the children sleep under heavy blankets; that is a frequent cause of night sweats.

Don't forget that a common cause of nearsightedness in children is working, reading and writing in a bad light.

Children subject to convulsions should be so clad that they can be stripped almost immediately, and in the house where the child lives hot water should be obtainable at any moment in the twenty-four hours.

DROWNING IS QUICK.

Man Cannot Live Under Water More Than Two Minutes.

"The story frequently repeated about professional divers who have been able to remain under water for over two minutes is silly," said a doctor. "No one can remain under water that long without drowning, whether he is a trained diver or not. At Navarino, where the sponge divers are reported to be able to remain under water three and four minutes, tests were made recently and resulted in conclusively proving that none of them remained down as long as a minute and a half. Ninety seconds seems a very long time to the watcher on shore, and it is about the limit of a diver's endurance under water. At Ceylon, where time tests were also made among the famous pearl divers, it was ascertained that few of them remained below the surface as long as a minute, and other tests made on the Red sea among the Arabs proved that a minute and a quarter was the longest they could endure without a fresh breath.

"On the coast of England several years ago a diver, a trained diver, one of the best on the coast, renowned for his endurance, went down and was pulled up so slowly when he gave the signal that he was under water about two minutes and five seconds. He was drawn out of the water insensible, with blood flowing from his nose and ears, and it was only after long and arduous work that his recovery from the effects of that two minute stay under water was assured. Drowning is a quick death. Even though the water is kept out of the lungs, insensibility will ensue in one minute and complete unconsciousness in two. The stories of people who have been in the water five minutes being resuscitated are generally mistakes or untrue. A man could not be in the water five minutes without coming to the surface several times and be restored to life."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Taking Desperate Chances.

It is true that many contract colds and recover from them without taking any precaution or treatment, and a knowledge of this fact leads others to take their chances instead of giving their colds the needed attention. It should be borne in mind that every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality, makes the system less able to withstand each succeeding cold and paves the way for more serious diseases. Can you afford to take such desperate chances when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds can be had for a trifle? For sale by H. C. Giesler.

ODD KOREAN HABITS

TEAR BASKETS AND HEART CLOTHS AND THEIR USES.

"Secret" Mourning That Every One Knows of and Respects — The Quaint Toilet of a Masampho Belle. A Strange Headdress For Women.

There is a great deal of poetry about all Koreans. This does not make the visitor in their country love them less.

"Why do you shake your husband's gown so ferociously every morning?" the writer said to a hostess in Seoul. "Are you afraid a spider may be weaving in it?"

"Oh, no, moonface," was the reply. "He must be in Japan now—so far it is—and his spirit comes every night to this gown. So tired must he be in the morning to go back so far into his body again."

And she wept copiously, dropping each tear very carefully into a metal lined little basket hung from her waist. If her husband had died on his journey the basket would have been nearly full by this time; every one who has any regard for her would have added a drop or two, and her mourning would have been as intricate a performance as a case in international law. Even as it was the tear basket was steeped in incense and many heartbreaking songs and proverbs wailed over it. Weep flowers—that is, any sort of bloom that withers soon—may be pressed and strung around the basket. The wing of a wounded bird may decorate one side; a motherless child may imprint a kiss upon it for the good of the spirit.

"Do men ever wear the tear basket for women?" I once inquired.

"Oh, moonface, you are curious so much," was the reply. "Women never go away from men in Kowli."

"But they die."

"Yes, and then verra often the good men wear the tear basket in secret mourning."

There is much secret mourning in Korea, and it is like the Irishman's secret—everybody knows it and respects it. A woman who has loved the wrong man may wear secret mourning clothes for him and don the tear basket filled with tears of persons who have not deigned to speak to her in the lifetime of the loved one. At certain hours she may wail round his grave and leave the best of everything to eat on his tomb for his hungry spirit. The worldly mate of the departed looks on, and often it seems she is flattered by the performance. A slave may mourn secretly for the queen, and anybody who wants to may sympathize without hurt for a beheaded criminal.

Next to the tear basket the heart cloth is the quaintest symbol of Kowli emotions. One is never permitted to know of this precious ornament unless it is worn for his or her sake. In old Korea it was placed over the heart of the beloved before being worn in any other breast. One heart cloth often does for a whole family, being worn by different members in turn. Characters representing poetic sayings are appliqued upon it, such as:

"Without thee I dwell with the spirit of the withered tree."

"My heart beats only to thine."

"Ahu—peace."

"The sun will come again."

In some parts of the country heart cloths are placed over the body of the dying and then given to the shanggoo, head male mourner, and the joofoo, leading female mourner.

Masampho is a quaint and picturesque town, nearly as much so as Fusan, from which it is not far removed. One of the sights of Masampho is her shopping district, which consists of innumerable mats spread out on the ground, upon which are exhibited the wares of their owners, who squat beside them.

But the chief joys of Masampho are her deliciously strange little women—the never to be forgotten Masamphonese, wild eyed, glossy haired dumplings, with cherry lines for mouths, who waddle around and about, quacking in fascinating tones.

The Masampho belle's toilet is worthy of the time she spends upon it. Her face is washed with honey oil instead of water. Sometimes she sifts a fine powder scented with her favorite flower over it.

She may stain her complexion to suit her fancy, but generally she prefers it to be the natural color, which is a beautiful ecru. Though she may never be seen by man, save husband or father, during curfew time or women's hours—8 p. m. and 3 a. m.—she may go out freely visiting friends and relatives. Her hair is brushed with a fragrant bunch of switches and glued into many different forms. Sometimes it makes a butterfly or a tortoise and at other times a lot of leaves or a little sampan.

When it is properly shaped, big jade or glass pins are stuck in. The only cap she ever wears has no crown. Its back is shaped like a helmet, and there are two long tassels hanging from the forehead and neck brim. Her cotton trousers are as full as a divided skirt and become narrow at the ankles, where they meet little socks made of grass and picturesque shoes. Her skirt is very full and shirred at the top into an eight inch band. This fits tightly around the chest and under the arms. The jacket worn is not over seven inches in length and runs the gamut of Korean blues and greens, which are somewhat the tints of the peacock's tail.

If of the common people, she may allow her small feet and ankles to show, but if of noble blood her skirts must sweep the streets. All women carry with them a long cane, so that if by any possibility they should meet a man they may thrust it quickly over their heads, leaving only a slit in front for the eyes.—New York Post.

The Power of a Look.

Nothing is more charming than the straightforward look which indicates that a woman is in complete possession of herself, confident of her own powers and strength, and does not feel the need of looking hither and thither for a way of escape. Soft and melting eyes, flashing eyes, brilliant eyes, soulful eyes, are not in it with the eyes of direct gaze, particularly if they are shaded by lids which are rather large and heavy. Many a hostess is popular because she looks directly at her guests, and each one feels the mark of her special favor. Another woman's failure as a hostess and a conversationalist may arise from the opposite course.

A Cure for Headache.

Any man, woman or child suffering from headache, billiousness or a dull drowsy feeling should take one or two of DeWitt's Little Early Risers night and morning. These little pills are famous because they are a tonic as well as a pill. While they cleanse the system they strengthen and rebuild it by their tonic effect upon the liver and bowels. Sold by H. C. Giesler.

Old paint and varnish may be removed by two parts of ammonia shaken up with one part of turpentine. It will soften them so they may easily be scraped off.

Mix plaster of paris with vinegar instead of water and you will find it excellent to stop the cracks in the wall.

If you tack a piece of white oil cloth over your molding board it is almost as good as a marble slab.

Best Cough Medicine for Children.

When you buy a cough medicine for small children you want one in which you can place implicit confidence. You want one that not only relieves but cures. You want one that is unquestionably harmless. You want one that is pleasant to take. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy meets all of these conditions. There is nothing so good for the coughs and colds incident to childhood. It is also a certain preventive and cure for croup, and there is no danger whatever from whooping cough when it is given. It has been used in many epidemics of that disease with perfect success. SAMURAI OF JAPAN.

PLUCKY SOLDIERS WHO COME OF FIGHTING ANCESTRY.

How the Spirit of Old Feudalism Still Influences the Mikado's Men—The Honor of the Sword—The Cooly a Fighter.

The fighting man of modern Japan is apparently animated by the same spirit of intense loyalty to the state that for centuries made the samurai of feudal Nippon the safeguard of the nation. In old Japan the samurai were ever ready to sacrifice themselves for country—in fact, it was their prerogative and sacred right. The sword was the "soul of the samurai," and his life was consecrated to the maintenance of its honor.

Although abolished with the fall of feudalism in 1868 the samurai still exert a potent influence in the affairs of Japan. Nearly all the officers of the army and navy are descendants of the ancient warriors, and few who are not of samurai blood have gained eminence in the nation. The samurai of old Japan despised trade and money making as only fit for the base minded and low born. Luxury was deemed vain and effeminate and the samurai lived simple, athletic lives, firm in the belief that honor and arms were inseparable.

In the enlisted ranks of the Japanese army and navy there is also a fair sprinkling of this samurai class. Even today nearly all the Japanese of that heroic ancestry are either fighting men or follow some professional or intellectual vocation. The old prejudice against trade survives as keenly as ever, but the rank and file of the mikado's forces are principally made up of the cooly class.

For over 2,000 years the samurai alone were allowed to bear arms in Japan. They were skilled in the arts of war, and to them only were imparted the polite breeding and superior training of the gentleman. It is therefore all the more surprising that the cooly Japanese, whose ancestors had never been permitted to fight, should have proved themselves just as good soldiers as the descendants of the samurai. Apparently in the broadening of Japanese national life that has come about in recent years the fighting spirit has passed from the caste that was supposed to inclose it into the whole people.

Formerly many Japanese officers were sent abroad to receive their training. These men built up the present organization of the Japanese army and navy and established the various schools and colleges which now dot the empire. It is no longer necessary for any soldier or sailor of the mikado to leave his island home to learn his trade.

The daily life and social etiquette of the Japanese officer differ materially from those of his American and European brethren. No Japanese would dream of slapping his brother officer on the back, nor would he invade his room unceremoniously. Hazing, too, would be an impossible breach of good manners. The social intercourse of Japanese officers is regulated by a most ceremonious etiquette. Even the cadets always address one another with formal politeness.

But this is only on the surface. In reality a keen spirit of good fellowship pervades the force. It is regarded as most dishonorable to seek for promotion at the expense of a brother officer, even by methods deemed legitimate in other services—as, for example, by cultivating social relations with the men who dispense honors and rewards.

Conscription based upon the European model was introduced into Japan by imperial edict in 1874. Although the population, with the exception of the samurai, had never been used to military service, it took to it with enthusiasm. There was never any objection to conscription. The emperor had ordered it, and that was enough for anybody in the case. All male Japanese between the ages of seventeen and forty are liable to military service, but the active army is actually levied from males at the age of twenty. The term of service is three years in the army and four in the navy, after which the men pass into the reserves.

Among the privates there is much competition to advance to the rank of noncommissioned officers. The majority of the enlisted men are intelligent and fairly well educated, but promotion from the ranks is not easily obtained, the standard of qualifications being high. Promotion to the commissioned ranks is practically impossible to the Japanese private soldier.

JAPANESE DANCERS.

Pretty Accomplishments of the Celebrated Geisha Girls.

The geisha, or professional girl entertainer of Japan, is trained in the arts of dancing and singing in schools especially established for that purpose. After the girl has become a proficient dancer she receives a salary according to her popularity. She is, in fact, an actress, the word "geisha" meaning what actor does in English.

The geishas, however, are not only dancers and singers. It is necessary that they play several musical instruments, so that when a party of them is engaged half of them provide the music while the other half dance. The samisen, koto and drum are the instruments most commonly played by the geishas.

When a Japanese desires to arrange some social entertainment the amusement of the occasion is furnished by the dancing girls. Generally these affairs are held in tea houses, and it is customary to engage certain geishas, who are known by what would be called in this country their stage names. These are names of flowers, gems, seasons or indeed anything of great beauty or attractiveness. Such names are O Kiku San, which means the Hon. Miss Chrysanthemum, or O Tama San, which is the Hon. Miss Jewel, or O Maru San, the Hon. Miss Spring. The "O," which means "honorable," is used only before words of one or two syllables. Miss Camellia, for instance, would be Tsubaki San.

These girls are possessed of wonderful charm and play havoc with the hearts of the young men. Many of them marry distinguished men, and the wives of some of the most prominent men in Japan today were geishas.

The geishas make a pretty show in the gay life of the cities, as they are trained to bear themselves with grace and decorum, and they dress in exquisite style. They may be seen in the principal boxes at theaters and at all public places, but they have no social rank

THE CAREER OF SULLY.

Remarkable Rise and Fall of the Whilom Cotton King.

The career of Daniel J. Sully, who until his recent failure was hailed "king of cotton," is one of the most wonderful in the history of finance.

He is forty-three years old, a native of Providence and until a year ago last December was unknown on the New York Cotton Exchange. Early in January, 1903, he entered the market and within a short time had accumulated $50,000. Soon he acquired a following, and with its support he began to bid up prices.

Before the operators were aware of it he had cornered May cotton and made a fortune variously estimated at from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000. He had also gained a reputation that enabled him to lead the market almost at will, and he managed several big pools that added to his wealth. Then the crash came, and the cotton king had lost his crown.

His experience was very much like that of Joseph Leiter, who in 1898 sent the price of wheat from 65 cents to $1.85 per bushel and then collapsed.

PARKER OF NEW YORK

JURIST WHO MAY BE A PRESIDENTIAL NOMINEE.

How He Rose From Farmer Boy to the Highest Judicial Office in the Empire State—His Home Life—A Democrat by Heredity.

Among the men who are being discussed as candidates for the Democratic nomination for president none is more generally mentioned than Alton Brooks Parker, chief justice of the court of appeals of the state of New York.

Judge Parker lives modestly on his farm at Esopus, on the west bank of the Hudson river, a few miles from Kingston, N. Y. The estate consists of 140 acres, of which 120 are under cultivation. Much of the land is covered with peach, apple and pear orchards and vineyards, but his Red Poll registered cattle are his especial pride. The number of this herd is not large, but includes several prize winners. His old colonial mansion, which he named Rosemount, is situated on a timbered knoll overlooking the river.

During nine months of the year he is kept at Albany for five days of the week and often six attending sessions of the court, but usually about 3 or 4 o'clock on Friday afternoons he takes a train for home and spends Saturday directing work upon his farm.

Judge Parker is five feet ten inches in height, weighs 185 pounds and is broad and deep about the shoulders and chest. His hair is reddish brown, and he is inclined to be bald. His mustache is somewhat lighter and is flowing. His eyes are brown, with a merry, genial expression indicative of his disposition, which is cheerful, generous and unostentatious.

Socially Justice Parker and his wife are prominent both in Albany and Kingston. Mrs. Parker was born in Rochester and is a descendant of Jochem Schoonmaker, head of the original colonial settlement of Dutch at Kingston. Mr. and Mrs. Parker were married in 1873 and have had two children, one of them a son who died in childhood. Bertha, the only daughter, was married six or seven years ago to Rev. Charles Mercer Hall, rector of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Cross at Kingston. They have two children, Alton Parker and Mary Parker, aged five and three respectively. These grandchildren are the justice's especial delight.

JUDGE ALTON B. PARKER.

Alton Brooks Parker was born in the village of Cortland, N. Y., May 14, 1852. The first twelve years of his life were spent on his father's farm, and during the last three he attended school in winter and worked on the farm in summer. From the age of twelve to fifteen he was a student at the Cortland academy, and he paid his tuition fee with the proceeds of labor performed after school hours. For several years thereafter he taught school, and, having saved sufficient money, he took a two years' course at the Albany Law school, from which he was graduated in 1872. He then settled down to practice at Kingston.

Judge Parker is by nature inclined to politics and by heredity a Democrat. His father was a Jacksonian Democrat and his grandfather was a Jeffersonian Democrat. As soon as he became of age young Parker began to take an active part in politics, and in 1877, when but twenty-five, was elected surrogate of Ulster county for a term of six years and re-elected in 1883. In 1884 he was delegate to the presidential convention at Chicago and helped nominate Grover Cleveland. The following year he was made chairman of the New York Democratic state committee and managed David B. Hill's campaign for governor, bringing him in a winner by 11,000 majority. During the campaign a justice of the supreme court died, and Judge Parker was appointed to fill the vacancy by Governor Hill. So fully was the selection approved by the people that in the following year Judge Parker was nominated for the position by both the big political parties and elected practically without opposition.

Three years later, in 1889, a second division of the court of appeals—which corresponds to the supreme court of other states and is the highest judicial tribunal in New York— was organized in order to meet the demands of litigation, and Judge Parker, although only thirty-eight, was appointed a member. Here he remained until the dissolution of the court in 1892. Then at the request of other judges he was appointed to the general term of the supreme court. In November, 1897, he was elected chief justice of the court of appeals by a plurality in the Empire State of over 60,000 votes. His term of office does not expire until 1911.

FRIEND OF AN EMPEROR.

Dr. Allen, Who Was Decorated With the Korean Order of Pai Kuk.

Dr. Horace Newton Allen, United States minister to Korea, who recently received the decoration of the first class of Pai Kuk, is highly esteemed by Emperor Yi Hiung.

Dr. Allen, who is a native of Ohio, went to Korea in the early eighties as a medical missionary. Shortly after his arrival in Seoul he was called to practice his skill on a young prince who had been severely wounded. He succeeded in saving the life of his royal patient and was immediately designated court physician by royal decree.

About the time that he got into the good graces of the emperor it happened that the United States government brought a claim against Korea for the destruction by natives of a vessel sailing under the stars and stripes. The claim had originally been brought against China, but the Chinese officials replied to the American note that this country would have to look to Korea for the money, as China had no claim on the Korean government. The note was accordingly referred to Korea, and Dr. Allen was called in by the emperor for consultation.

When Dr. Allen read China's declaration that she did not claim sovereignty over Korea, he suggested that Korea act as an independent government.

Yi Hiung saw the point and in 1888 dispatched a legation to this country, with Dr. Allen in charge, to see that it was properly established at Washington. After remaining in this country two years Dr. Allen returned as secretary of the American legation, and in 1897 was made minister.

Dr. Allen is forty-seven years old and is six feet two inches tall. His wife was graduated with her husband at Ohio Wesleyan university, Delaware, and went abroad with her husband twenty years ago. They have two sons.

Big and Little Boat.

A little boy was taken down to the harbor by his father, where he saw, for the first time, a large steamer towed by a puffing, whistling, little tug, with an immense hawser connecting the two. "Oh, papa, papa!" he shouted in excitement. "See! The big boat has the little one by the tail, and he's a-squealing."

The Frugal Snail.

The frugal snail, with forecast of repose,
Carries his house with him where'er he goes;
Peeps out, and if there comes a shower of rain
Retreats to his small domicile again.
Touch but a tip of him, a horn—'tis well—
He curls up in his sanctuary shell.

He's his own landlord, his own tenant; stay
Long as he will, he dreads no quarter day.
Himself he boards and lodges; both invites
And feasts himself; sleeps with himself o' nights.
He spares the upholsterer trouble to procure
Chattels; himself is his own furniture
And his sole riches. Wheresoe'er he roams,
Knock when you will, he's sure to be at home.

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

This year is the golden anniversary of the Republican party. It is just fifty years old, having been founded in 1854, and the story of its half century is the eventful history of the United States during the greatest period of its existence. Through most of the fifty years the party has controlled and governed the country, and the advance of the one has been the glory of the other.

Four great facts seem to justify the Republican party in asking the voters of the United States to continue it in control of the affairs of the government. First, the promptness with which it has fulfilled the pledges made to the electors; second, the prosperity which has come to all classes of our citizens as a result of the fulfillment of those pledges; third, the evidence which that prosperity furnishes of the fallacy of the principles offered by the opposing parties, and fourth, the advantages to our country, our commerce and our people in the extension of area, commerce and international influence which have come as an incident of the fulfillment of pledges made to the people.

The Republican State Convention will meet in New York City next Tuesday to place in nomination a chief executive for this great Empire State. It is hoped the choice will fall on Hon. Elihu Root. Certainly Mr Root has won the confidence of all citizens, irrespective of party affiliations, and is justly conceded to be one of the greatest men that has appeared in the public life of any country, in any position, on either side of the ocean. He made a great Secretary of War. He would make an ideal Governor.

With Theodore Roosevelt at the head of the national ticket and Elihu Root leading the State Republican forces there will rally around both leaders a mighty majority, and victory will be assured.

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE.

The Republicans in this district ... made a very happy choice in their advocacy of the selection of the Hon. P. J. Cullinan, State Excise Commissioner, to represent them in the National Convention. Mr. Cullinan has done yeoman service for the party in State and nation. He has measured up to the full requirements of an official in the department of which he is the head, and he enjoys the confidence of the leaders and co-workers to an unlimited extent. No duty has been too onerous or exacting for him to discharge. It is hoped the convention, which meets in Watertown next Friday, will ratify the choice. The district convention also adopted resolutions commending State Committeeman John T. Mott for his unselfish devotion to the best interests of the party. It was a worthy and well-merited tribute to an efficient and painstaking official whose ambition has always been to serve his party and State with fidelity and zeal.

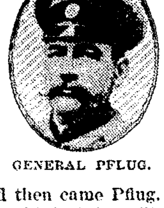
Fighting Men of the Czar of Russia

Captain Roudneff, Hero of the Variag's Hopeless Fight. Major General Pflug--Vice Admiral Starck, Who Lost His Ships--Matusievitch and His Torpedo Boats--Tchesnovitch of the Retvizan.

CAPTAIN WSSEWALOD FEDOROVITCH ROUDNEFF had his baptism of fire the first day of the war, and Russians are proud of the valor he displayed. Roudneff commanded the ill fated Variag, the formidable protected cruiser built at Philadelphia for the czar. She was at Chemulpo in company with the Russian gunboat Korietz when Rear Admiral Uriu's big fleet arrived and ordered the commanders of the Variag and Korietz to surrender or come out and fight. The Russian ships were caught in a trap. They could not escape by flight and were so greatly outnumbered that swift destruction was certain. It was the sort of crisis that confronted Admiral Cervera at Santiago, but the situation of the Russians was even more desperate. They faced it as boldly as the gallant old Spaniard. Captain Roudneff and the commander of the Korietz cleared for action, the sailors singing the national anthem of Russia, and, cheered by the crews of the neutral warships in the harbor, the Variag, with the little Korietz under her lee for protection, steamed out to face two Japanese battleships, six cruisers, five torpedo boat destroyers and seven torpedo boats. The Variag was soon in flames, and her decks were a shambles, for the fire of the entire Japanese fleet was concentrated upon her. Of her crew of 540 men 109 were killed or wounded in half an hour, and her commander retreated into Chemulpo, sunk his ship and blew up the Korietz. Captain Doudneff, who was wounded, took refuge on the French cruiser Pascal and gave his parole, which puts him out of the remainder of the war unless he is exchanged. The czar promptly decorated the gallant captain for his heroism.

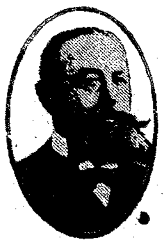
CAPTAIN ROUDNEFF.

Major General Pflug hasn't done anything for Russia thus far except send dispatches, but his name has been mentioned as often as that of Viceroy Alexeieff since Japan torpedoed the Russian ships at Port Arthur. Since the days when George T. Lanigan wrote his famous threnody on the death of the ahkoond of Swat American newspaper humorists have hailed with delight any quaint new name that came over the wires. The Mad Mollah of Somaliland served them for a time, and then came Pflug. Major General Pflug, chief of the military staff at Port Arthur. Though scattered from Maine to Texas and from Florida to Washington state, the American press humorists pounced upon that name as one man, and Pflug is already the hero of a dozen poems and innumerable jests. Major General Pflug is one of Viceroy Alexeieff's right hand men, and his reports which first came from Port Arthur are now emanating from Mukden, the old Mantchoo capital, which is farther up the railroad, well out of range of the Japanese fleet. Major General Pflug is a handsome, soldierly appearing officer, and will doubtless give a good account of himself when serious land fighting begins.



GENERAL PFLUG.

One of the most determined and active of the czar's naval officers in the east is Captain Matusievitch, who commands the torpedo flotilla at Port Arthur. Previous to the arrival of Admiral Makaroff only scouting duty had been performed by this section of the fleet, but since his advent the torpedo flotilla has seen some hard fighting. Shortly after Makaroff took charge a desperate conflict took place between Captain Matusievitch's boats and the light craft of the Japs, in which one of the czar's destroyers was sunk and another captured. The Russian boat was boarded by the Japs, and a desperate hand to hand fight took place. An incident of the battle was the killing of the Russian commander by a Jap sailor, who kicked the body of his antagonist overboard.



CAPTAIN MATUSIEVITCH.

Captain Matusievitch, who was directing the battle, was unable to go to the assistance of the beleaguered boat, the approach of the heavier ships of the Japanese fleet compelling him to retreat into the harbor.

When the war broke out Russia had twenty-four torpedo boat destroyers and a large flotilla of torpedo boats at Port Arthur, but so far they have succeeded in inflicting little or no damage on the ships of the Japs. Russia sends her torpedo craft to Port Arthur in sections, where they are put together and launched from a floating dock that is moored at the tip of the "Tiger's Tail" in the inner harbor. Several of these boats are now en route to Port Arthur by the way of the Transsiberian railroad.

Vice Admiral Starck, who commanded the Russian Pacific squadron when the war began, is today the most miserable man in all the broad dominions of the czar. All the hard won honors gained by years of striving in the Russian service were wiped out in that dreadful midnight hour when the daring Japs torpedoed his ships in the harbor of Port Arthur and sent several of them to the bottom. His subsequent relief from command and recall to St. Petersburg in disgrace are too well known to recapitulate. It is said that on that eventful night of Feb. 9 Admiral Starck, with most of the senior officers of his fleet, were on shore attending a fete in honor of the birthday of Mme. Starck. When the boom of the guns was heard during the height of the festivities confusion reigned. The admiral and his officers hastened to the port with all speed, but the damage had been done, and the battle was over. Several of the czar's ships were shattered hulks, and the great victory which gave control of the sea to the Japanese had been won.

ADMIRAL STARCK.

On the head of Admiral Starck the blame was placed and justly. Such is the rule of war. He had proved faithless to the trust reposed in him and had been found wanting in the hour of need, for, no matter how many battles a commander may win, one defeat wipes out all his former glory. It was a costly birthday party to Admiral and Mme. Starck that took place on the night of Feb. 9, 1904.

Although Captain Tchesnovitch, commander of the battleship Retvizan, had the misfortune to have his vessel torpedoed and beached in the first naval engagement at Port Arthur he has still performed valiant service for the czar. Before the Retvizan was patched up and floated she lay on the shore of the outer harbor in a position to command the entrance with her guns, and in every subsequent attack of the Japs she took part in the firing. In fact, to Captain Tchesnovitch belongs all the credit of repulsing one attack, and it was the guns of the Retvizan that sank the four merchantmen with which the Japs were endeavoring to block the entrance before they could be placed in position in the channel. The Retvizan is one of the most powerful ships in the Russian navy. She was built by the Cramps at Philadelphia and launched in 1900. She is 376 feet long, 72 feet beam and has a displacement of 12,700 tons. The Retvizan is heavily armored with Krupp steel, and her main battery consists of four twelve-inch breechloaders in pairs in turrets and twelve six-inch quick firers. Besides being fitted with four torpedo tubes, she carries two second class torpedo boats.

CAPTAIN TCHESNOVITCH.

While Grand Duke Alexis Alexandrovitch is the nominal commander in chief of the Russian navy, the real head of the czar's department of marine is Vice Admiral Avellan, who succeeded to his present post on the death of Vice Admiral Tyrtoff last fall. Admiral Avellan at the present time is confronted by a serious problem. Russia must remain practically powerless on the sea in the far east unless the Port Arthur and the Vladivostok squadrons are re-enforced by the Mediterranean fleet. To accomplish this successfully is what is causing Admiral Avellan a vast deal of thinking. Should these three squadrons be brought together, they would form a force sufficiently powerful to meet the Japs on fairly equal terms. To get them together is the question.

ADMIRAL AVELLAN

Without the co-operation of the Baltic naval force this seems impossible, as any attempt to consolidate the Port Arthur, Vladivostok and Mediterranean fleets would simply result in their being beaten in detail. The combined fleets of the mikado would have no trouble in destroying each separate squadron.

According to naval experts, it would take the Baltic ships at least ten weeks to make the voyage to the China sea; so if Admiral Avellan decides to adopt this way out of the dilemma it will be well into the summer before there can be any change in the naval situation at the seat of war.

"HONEST INJUN."

How the Chickasaws Were Taught the Meaning of the Expression.

Among the earliest comers to the Hatchee country, in western Tennessee, was a Mr. Barnes, a blacksmith, who became a friend of the Chickasaw Indians and often mended their guns without charge. Barnes was a poor man, but obtaining on credit a donkey named Moses, which was valued at a considerable sum, he imported the animal and stabled it at the smithy, says the Youth's Companion. It was the first in that region. One morning he found the door open and Moses gone. He followed a trail to the bank of the river and lost it. The stream was in flood, and he believed his valuable animal was drowned. Unless he found some way to raise the money to pay for it he was a ruined man.

Two months later a trading scow came down the Hatchee from Bolivar, and on the roof, spread out in the sun, was the hide of Moses, unmistakable in its soft and handsome grays. Barnes related his story to the trader and received the skin, which had been bought at Bolivar from a trader there. As no white man would have shot a donkey Barnes concluded that the Indians, who had never seen one, but who were then hunting on the Hatchee, were the offenders.

To trap them he tried a little stratagem. He organized a shooting contest and offered as a prize "the handsomest skin ever taken on the Hatchee, the pelt of a beautiful animal."

A Chickasaw brave was the winner of the contest and claimed the prize. Barnes brought forward the skin of Moses and spread it on the ground.

"There is your prize," he said.

"Me shoot um! Me shoot um!" cried the winner, running to the skin and pointing to a bullet hole. Then he told how he had been wandering down the river bank and had seen this strange wild animal, like nothing he had ever seen before, breaking through the cane. He had shot it and sold the hide at Bolivar. He was delighted to get it back.

This was what Barnes had hoped for. Standing, he addressed the Chickasaws.

"My brothers," he said, "you know me. I am a poor man, but I am a friend to the Chickasaw. I mend his gun for him and deal fairly by him. This animal was my white man's pony. I bought it far away and brought it here. It cost me much wampum, the price of many Indian ponies. To lose it will lose me all. It escaped me and went to the woods, and there a Chickasaw killed it.

"When I am in Chickasaw country, I obey Chickasaw law. When Chickasaw is in white man's country, he should obey white man's law. White man's law is that whoever kills my pony must pay me for it. What will Chickasaw do?"

The Indians had listened attentively. When he had finished, they went to their ponies, tethered near by. The whites watched them meanwhile with intense interest. The Indians untethered their ponies and brought them up.

"Take um," they said. "Indian have only ponies. Give um all."

"How many?" asked Barnes.

"You say how many."

Barnes appointed an appraiser, who selected a number of ponies equal in value to the donkey. These the blacksmith sold to his neighbors.

The Indians gave up their hunt and went back to their villages, poorer, but satisfied. They had maintained, for their tribe at least, some claim to the title, "Honest Injun."

Follow Your Dreams.

"To compel our thoughts to follow the memory of dreams and on no account to revert to any subject of waking thought, pleasant or otherwise"—that is a woman's formula for sleep.

"If we have already slept in the night," she says, "we should, in trying to sleep again, recall the dreams of the previous sleep and carry them on. If we have not slept, then it is necessary to go back to old dreams, which is rather more exertion and less certainly successful. But even this is far better for sleep than allowing the memory to revert to any waking thoughts or to the familiar old devices of counting a hundred or picturing sheep, etc."

Just the Thing.

Mr. Goodheart—Regarding those kittens, my dear, the president of our society says the most humane way to drown kittens is to put them in an ordinary earthen flowerpot and then suddenly turn the flowerpot upside down in a pail of lukewarm water. Mrs. Goodheart—Why, yes; that is a good idea—isn't it?—because you know there is a hole in the bottom of the flowerpot for the poor little things to breathe through.

Approved of the Idea.

Mr. Ferguson (in wrath)—If you're going to bring a lot of club women to this house to spend the day, you'll have to entertain them yourself. I wash my hands of the whole affair. Mrs. Ferguson—Well, they look as if they need it.—Chicago Tribune.

THE KITCHEN FAIRY.

A Device In Which Food Cooks Without Fire or Attention.

A capital scheme for fireless cooking, similar to that which is engaging the attention of German scientists, is described by a contributor to the Woman's Home Companion. She calls it the "kitchen fairy." The "fairy" consists of a large wooden bucket or box, fifteen inches high and sixteen inches across or even larger; an eight inch granite dinner pail, with a tight fitting cover and some excelsior. Pack the excelsior into the wooden bucket to the depth of about three inches, and on this place the granite pail and pack excelsior tightly around it to the top. If properly packed the granite pail can be lifted out of the excelsior and put back again without disturbing the packing.

"To cook string beans, cabbage, turnips, etc.," says this correspondent, "prepare in the usual way, boil in the granite pail from ten to twenty minutes, season, put on the tight cover and place boiling hot in the packed excelsior. Cover the whole with a woolen pad and over that place a feather pillow. It will keep hot from six to eight hours, and the steam does the cooking. Rice, macaroni, meat and vegetables cooked in this way have a finer flavor than when boiled or stewed in the ordinary way. Old fashioned oatmeal porridge may be made for breakfast by simply stirring one cupful of oatmeal into three cupfuls of salted boiling water in the evening and placing it in the cooker overnight. This simple device, in which food cooks without fire, requires no attention."

NOVEL WALL PANEL.

Made of Handkerchiefs It Forms a Useful Ornament.

Wall pockets or panels are always a useful addition to a room, and if they be pretty and artistic, as they may easily be made, they prove as ornamental as they are useful. The wall panel shown in the illustration, made of handkerchiefs, is suitable to hang upon the dressing room door and tuck slippers and shoes in, or it is useful as a wall pocket, into which may be tucked fancy work or any of the small trifles that women find it expedient to drop into catch-alls. One large flowered handkerchief covers the panel of pasteboard, and two five cent handkerchiefs, with borders of the same color, are cut in half and gathered at the tops to form pockets. These are sewed to the large handkerchief and trimmed with ribbon bows.

Weak Hearts

Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.

Mr. D. Kauble, of Nevada, O., says: I had stomach trouble and was in a bad state as I had heart trouble with it. I took Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for about four months and it cured me.

MISS AGNES MULLEN.

The Only Woman Advertising Manager For a Railway.

Miss Agnes Mullen of Chicago, young and pretty, is the only woman advertising manager for a railway in the world. Miss Mullen knows how to advertise. She knows exactly what pleases her when she reads an advertisement, and she thinks other people will like the same things. She adopted that system when she became the only woman official of a big American railway, the Monon route. Miss Mullen says little. She isn't a talking woman. She is manager of the advertising department; that's all.

"Women with the postscript habit can't succeed in business, especially this business," says Miss Mullen. "I never wrote a postscript to a letter in my life. I say what I have to say and let it go at that. That applies to advertising. Cut out the postscripts. Let the printer do the rest. Then place the ads, right, and advertising pays—pays big."

Miss Mullen was born in Topeka, Kan., although she has lived in Chicago most of her life. She is petite and fair. In appearance she does not resemble an advertising expert, who can tell you just what returns she will get from the placing of an ad. in New Jersey or Michigan or the circulation of a score of papers. But she has a sturdy, businesslike way about her that makes one feel more respect for the business woman.

Miss Mullen's office is in the general office building of the Monon route in Custom House place. She reaches her desk early in the morning and dispatches her rapidly accumulating work with neatness and precision.

Miss Mullen lives with her parents. She has three sisters and two brothers. Her father is a retired railroad man.—Chicago American.

Repose of Manner.

Repose of manner, that quality for which all Englishwomen and some of our southern beauties are famous, is one of the hardest things in the world to acquire. It means simply the power of relaxing.

First or all, you must relax; second, you must keep relaxed, and all the other rules are expressed in the same word, "relax."

Doctors who have studied their feminine patients well will tell you that much of your nervous force escapes through your finger tips while you fidget with your chain or your purse. You lose still more when you cough and jerk your body about unnecessarily.

One beauty specialist goes so far as to declare that nothing will make wrinkles quicker than the habit of moving and jerking and that nothing is so fatal to beauty as coughing and wheezing. All such habits are nervous complaints. To cure all these fidgety movements cultivate the habit of sitting perfectly still, keeping the hands and fingers motionless as long as possible, and relax.

Your reward will be the air of distinguished repose so sought after by our nervous society women.

A Kitchen Time Table.

"A kitchen time table," consisting of a large piece of cardboard, divided into two columns, on which are written the names of various kinds of foods and the time required for cooking or baking them, should be hung in every kitchen.

Suppose, for instance, that the first item is "Sponge cake, thirty minutes." Then the cook will know that the loaf must be left in the oven exactly half an hour. Not once will she have to disturb it, and not once will time have to be spent in looking at it to see if it is done.

And so, too, with other things. The required time can be learned from experience and then noted down for future reference.

It proves to be a valuable aid, guarding against burned food and saving both time and labor. The real value of this little device to the housewife is due to the fact that it contains her actual experience. Her cookbook may tell her the time that is required generally for any specific article; a friend or neighbor may tell her what time is required for baking in her specific home with her stove. But in neither of these instances are all of the conditions the same.

The Mother Who Laughs.

There are many conscientious fathers and mothers who make themselves and their children miserable by taking youthful foibles too seriously. It is an innate propensity of a child possessed

LIGHTENS HER LABOR.

The Way One Woman Gets Through Lots of Housework With Ease.

A woman who awakens the wonder of her friends by the ease with which she gets through a great deal of work confided to one of them recently a few simple expedients by which this is made possible.

Realizing that the work of ironing is nothing to the fatigue entailed while doing it, she has made herself a floor cushion about a foot and a half square. This is simply a pad three inches thick filled with excelsior, but when standing on it she finds that she does not incur that aching and burning of the feet which so often follow standing at the ironing board.

This woman has also provided herself with a lapboard three feet long and very thin and light. Sitting with this across her knees, she irons small pieces, such as handkerchiefs and table napkins, and in this way saves herself lots of fatigue. Then, again, she has recourse to an old piano stool, the most convenient thing in the world, she declares, to have in the kitchen. Upon this, screwed to a convenient height and drawn up to the kitchen table, she works away comfortably, not only when ironing, but when peeling vegetables and doing other such tasks.

"I have a motto," she tells her friends, "and it is to this effect: 'When you find a thing very hard to do, be sure you are not going about it right.' I firmly believe that there is an easy—comparatively easy—way to do everything, and I think it pays to find it out."

CLEVER WOMEN.

The Reason They Are Not, as a Rule, Very Popular.

Why do men dislike clever women? is a question that many clever women have felt impelled to ask themselves. They might go still further and ask themselves why most women also dislike clever women.

The reason is the same in either case, for sex does not make any special difference in a matter like this. What both men and women are looking for is the pleasant, lovable companion, and clever women have a way of not being companionable. There is apt to be too much self consciousness about them for one thing—too much "I." They cannot resist the temptation of saying bright things, and the effect comes to be a little like that of the acrobat who turns somersaults continuously. Most clever women feel clever. That is probably what offends so in them. No one finds the assumption of superiority in another lovable, whether it be superiority of social standing, personal appearance or mentality. People can be as important as they like, as beautiful and as clever as they like, if only they won't be self conscious about it. The clever woman is generally fearfully self conscious.—New York Tribune.

PROFIT

The matter of feed is of tremendous importance to the farmer. Wrong feeding is loss. Right feeding is profit. The up-to-date farmer knows what to feed his cows to get the most milk, his pigs to get the most pork, his hens to get the most eggs. Science.

But how about the children? Are they fed according to science, a bone food if bones are soft and undeveloped, a flesh and muscle food if they are thin and weak and a blood food if there is anemia?

Scott's Emulsion is a mixed food; the Cod Liver Oil in it makes flesh, blood and muscle, the Lime and Soda make bone and brain. It is the standard scientific food for delicate children.

Take Care of the Cellar.

A great deal of sickness in families is caused by the condition of the cellar. Not unusually the cellar opens into the kitchen. The kitchen is heated, and the cellar is not. Following natural laws, the colder air will rush to take the place of the warmer and therefore lighter air of the kitchen.

This would be well enough if the cellar air was pure, but often it is not. Partly decayed vegetables or wood may be there. A day should be taken to throw out and carry away all dirt, decayed wood or vegetables and other accumulations. The cobwebs should be brushed down and the whole cellar thoroughly cleaned and then whitewashed.

Mrs. Annie M. Stenz is president of the First National bank of Monroeville, O. At one time she was the wife of O. W. Head, then president of the bank. Later she became the wife of Henry P. Mrs. Stenz is forty-seven years of age, a financier of ability and for a number of years has managed her large private fortune in a manner that has multiplied it many times. She finds time, however, to be a social leader and to devote considerable time to church work.—Kansas City Journal.

Children and the Piano.

It used to be considered that it was a good thing for children to be taught to play the piano; but, if there be any truth in the statements made by a Berlin doctor, that certainly should not be taken for granted. Among 1,000 young girls who began to learn the piano under fourteen years of age 600 were, so the doctor discovered, the victims of some sort of nervous disease, while out of 1,000 girls who had not been taught to play the piano only 100 suffered in like manner. The result of his investigations is that the doctor recommends the study of the piano should be postponed till after the age of sixteen.

Combs For Blonds and Brunettes.

Let only the golden haired or black haired girl risk the gold and ivory combs, and the silver one is for the brunette alone. No shade of hair was ever born or invented which could not wear tortoise shell. Its tints and lights are universally becoming. These combs are all expensive, for only the genuine materials or the best imitations are worth buying. The handsomest ones are jeweled, which brings them to a fabulous price. But a plain shell comb, uncarved and unjeweled, can be purchased for $5.

In selecting any comb be careful to choose one with long teeth curved so that the comb feels firm in the hair. It is both dangerous to the comb and embarrassing to the wearer to have it fall. If you are within reach of any Chinese importer he is the best one to furnish you an ivory comb. The Chinese have been quick to learn our desires, and they have adapted their handiwork accordingly. Some of their shops display combs carved in exquisite designs.—Washington Star.

Spencer and Music.

Mr. Herbert Spencer cultivated what he called the "receptive sense" in respect to music and was wont to speak with more than a little bitterness of the general desire to be a performer. One performer who had been chosen to play Beethoven for him was thunderstruck on arrival at Mr. Spencer's residence at being asked to render an extract from one of Sullivan's operas. Light music had a charm for the philosopher which light literature never had.

PATHFINDER LODGE BANQUET.

An Occasion of More Than Usual Importance and Pleasure to K. of P. Members.

The annual banquet of Pathfinder Lodge No. 373, K. of P., was held at The Clark last Wednesday evening. The banquet is usually held Feb. 22, the anniversary of the establishment of the order in this city, but the date was unavoidably changed this year.

Previous to the banquet a reception was held in the lodge club rooms. At 9 o'clock the members repaired to The Clark, where covers had been laid for sixty guests. The tables were profusely decorated with roses, carnations and tulips. Landlord Morse had prepared a most tempting menu, which was served to the satisfaction of all present.

Buell's orchestra furnished inspiring music.

After cigars had been passed, Toastmaster W. H. Hornibrook made a few enjoyable remarks, read letters of regret from out-of-town members, and then called for the following toasts:

"History of Pathfinder Lodge," Mr. John M. Cox, in a most concise manner gave its history from the time it was instituted nine years ago to the present date.

"Principles of the order" was handled by Attorney W. S. Hillick in a heart-to-heart talk. "Ladies' night," by Mr. David Van Buren. The ladies have an advocate for a good time in Mr. Van Buren. Mr. N. H. Gilbert's solo was greeted by an encore, to which he kindly responded. "Social sessions" by Dr. F. E. Fox." "D. O. K. K." Mr. Frank Brown succinctly gave the object and aims of this society, which bears the same relationship to the K. of P. that the Mystic Shrine does to the Masonic order. A class from the local lodge will be initiated this Fall. "Club rooms," by Mr. E. A. Putnam. "The order," was responded to by Mr. H. L. Waugh. "City hospital" by Dr. Joy. A sentiment was expressed in favor of a K. of P. room in the hospital in the near future. "Supporting officers" by Chancellor Commander M. F. Lewis. "Pie sessions" by Dr. B. A. Loveless completed an interesting program.

Impromptu remarks made by many of the Knights were impressive, spicy and amusing. The enjoyable event, in which good-fellowship abounded, was brought to a close by the members arising and singing "America."

This Winter the Knights have looked well to the social side of life. At present a pool tournament is in progress.

Another "Ladies' night" will soon be given, which will include a musical program, to be followed by games, dancing, etc.

Spring Dry Goods and Millinery.

The W. H. Patterson dry goods and millinery store was the center of attraction on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week when the Spring opening was held. The store had been newly painted and decorated and Mr. Burr Sheldon had displayed exquisite taste in the planning and carrying out of the decoration scheme. Purple and white crepe paper was used in profusion and scrolls, lattice work and inverted arches were used with good effect throughout the rooms. Spring flowers, palms, pink globed electric lights and airy ribbons, silks, mulls, laces etc., added beauty to the scene. Mr. Sheldon who succeeded Mr. Carl Janes as store decorator, is receiving the deserved congratulations of every one upon the success he achieved.

The dress goods and millinery were the points of especial interest to femininity and the display was more elaborate than ever before. The hats were artistic, wearable and becoming and they sold amazingly, despite the fact that the weather was most unpropitious.

In dress good the newest things noticed were Manish suits in all the new shads; Panama suitings, Voiles in black and colors; Meltons, Tweeds, Scotch mixtures and rain proof suitings, Agawam suitings, English broadcloths, Mohairs, plain, striped and figured; also Granite cloths.

Pongees, crepe-de-cheines, poie-de-soie, poie-de-cheine, crepe-de-Paris, taffetas, Jap silks, China wash silks and Satin Foulards; silk shirt waist patterns, Lansdowns and wool crepe-de-cheines.

Coats in 1830 and 1860 styles. Pongees, Etons and all the late cuts. Wash silk waists, waists in crepe-de-cheine, poie-de-soie, white and colored. Silk shirt waist suites in white, black and colors. Wash shirt waist suits in all colors.

In wash goods, all the standard prints ginghams, toile-de-nords in plain, plaid and stripes; all the new effects in muslins both in designs and colors.

FASHION'S REALM

Brilliant Display of Spring and Summer Dress Goods and Millinery--Unique and Artistic Decorations.

J. C. O'BRIEN

A veritable breath of Spring greeted one upon entering the J. C. O'Brien dry goods store during the three opening days last week, the delicate odor of violets permeating the air from a bell of violets which was suspended from the ceiling. A second bell of roses was noted on the opposite side of the store, which never was so beautifully decorated as at this time. The decorator, Mr. W. A. Smith, originated a decorative scheme most exquisite, and carried t out to the smallest detail. In his work he was greatly assisted by the immense assortment of choice, dainty Spring fabrics, in silk, lace, mull and light weight woolens, in which the store abounded. Mr. O'Brien has purchased generously in expectation of an unusually heavy demand for dry goods this season, and the line cannot be surpassed. At least that was the verdict of all who visited the store on these days, and the sales attested their appreciation. Buell's orchestra furnished delightful music all three days.

Among the newest dress goods shown were voiles and nub voiles, maxillas, coverts, English broadcloths, plain and figured mohairs, Scotch and English tweeds, m anish suitings, Danish cloths, Sicilians, and wool and silk crepe de chines. The famous lansdowns were shown in all the new shades and black. In silks were displayed satin liberty for shirt waist suits, satin luxors, vassar, radcliff, and changeable and plain taffetas, crepe de soies, crepe de chines, crepe de Paris, peau de soie and an endles assortment of staple and fancy silks, for this is to be an especially silk season.

In dress trimmings the most exclusive laces, bands, appliques, &c., were displayed, and the ribbons were never so pretty, so fashionable and so reasonable.

The millinery department was most attractively decorated and Miss O'Hare rarely exhibited prettier hats, and hat trimmings. The keynote for the season is daintiness and the fact has been borne in mind in the buying and blending of the braids, flowers, ribbons, laces, chiffons, &c. Miss Margaret Looby, the new milliner, is an artist in her chosen line, and her hats sold without urging.

The ready-to-wear department was complete in itself and the suits, coats, skirts and waists were greatly admired and found many purchasers.

The rug room and carpet department were points of especial interest, as no such elaborate display had ever before been seen in Fulton. The rugs ranged in price from $1.25 to $125 and nearly every price between was touched. The same was true of the carpets, fibre carpets, fibre and art squares, mattings, &c. All tastes, and pocket books were suited.

Despite the backward season and the rain of Friday and Saturday, Mr. O'Brien feels the keenest satisfaction as he contemplates the results of the opening days, and the prospect for Spring trade at his store.

F. P. CONNELL & CO.

The firm of F. P. Connell & Co., does not have formal opening days but as Mr. Connell remarks, "they are constantly opening cases of new goods and are always glad to see their friends." They are showing a fine line of dress goods in wash poplin, fil de soie, voiles and brilliantines in browns; hit-and-miss plaids in Danish cloth, satin stripe Bedford cords, &c.

They also have a beautiful line of wash goods for Summer dresses, shirt waists and shirt waist suits. Only at this store can be found the sequinjets which are so popular for dress trimmings. The carpet department is well equipped with carpets, mattings and Kashmir art squares.

M. E. YOUNG.

Miss Young displayed a large line of beautiful, attractive, wearable hats and at such low prices that one marveled, during her formal opening days of last week. The store room was most inviting with its ivory latticed arches, twined with Spring flowers, and its stock of hats, and hat trimmings. Children's hats and ready-to-wear hats were also shown in great variety. Miss Van-Slyke is trimmer for Miss Young again this season, and that is sufficient guarantee that the hats will be just right when purchased from this store.

M. KATZ & CO.

Thursday morning of last week the formal Spring opening of the M. Katz & Co. department store commenced, and throughout the week it proved a success. The decorating had been skillfully done by Mr. Maurice Hilliar and peach trees and rose bushes laden with bloom reminded one that the season for discarding heavy, sombre apparel was at hand. A white swan on the centre ledge drew a craft containing a doll and when the electric lights were turned on, the effect was most pleasing. Piano music was rendered during the day time and in the evening Wilson's orchestra delighted the shoppers.

The windows contained a tempting menu of the feast within and called forth much attention. The first floor was devoted to dry goods, china and cut glass, and the display was much admired. Among the new dress goods noted were mohair crashes, manish suitings, waterproof coverts, prunillas, wool voiles and crepe de chines in a number of fashionable shades. In silks were displayed the new messaline jasper, japanese, Chinas foulards taffetas, crepe de chines, and many novelty silks for shirt waists and shirt waist suits. This store also displayed an immense line of dress trimmings in laces, ribbons, braids, buttons, appliques &c. All the novelties were on exhibition in the new belts, collars, in endless assortment; ties, gloves, fancy hosiery, shirt waist sets, chains, &c.

The ready-to-wear department was generously supplied with suits beautifully tailored and priced reasonably; coats, separate skirts, misses suits, shirt waist suits in wash materials, shirt waists and fancy waists, and the entrance to this interesting department on the second floor, was made through a floral gate and under a floral arch, and singing canary birds added to the enjoyment.

The furniture, carpet and rug department was larger than ever with tasteful articles. A special display of rugs for the three days was one especially notable features.

In the millinery department was found ready-to-wear hats, ready-to-trim hats, and hats already trimmed, in great variety. The millinery department is now a permanent feature of this store and it is liberally patronized. Altogether this Springs opening days were the most successful from all standpoints, of any during the four years which this firm has spent in our midst.

FULTON FIRE DEPARTMENT

Efficient and Capable Corps Selected for the Ensuing Year--Biographical Sketch of the Officers Chosen.

HARRY L. WAUGH, NEWLY ELECTED CHIEF FULTON FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Chief Harry L. Waugh is thirty years of age, and has lived in this city for twenty-eight years of that time. He has been a volunteer fireman and a member of Hose Company, No. 3, for eight years and takes the keenest interest in the affairs of the Department, especially its advancement and betterment. He is opposed to a paid department for Fulton at present, because he does not believe that one could be made as effective as the volunteer department without an expense to the taxpayers that would be very burdensome. It would be necessary to maintain two engine-houses, as the city is divided by the Oswego river, and that would be almost an impossibility, owing to the great expense. Chief Waugh has been President of his company for two years and Assistant Foreman for two years. He is perfectly conversant with the requirements of the responsible position which he has been chosen to fill, and is universally respected by the firemen and the citizens as well.

First Assistant Chief Frank J. Smith, is twenty-five years of age and has resided in Fulton fifteen years. He has been a member of Hose Company, No. 4, for six years and during that time has been President of his company one year, Second Assistant Foreman one year and Foreman one year. He was Second Assistant Chief two years and Assistant Chief one year. Mr. Smith is thoroughly liked by his fellow firemen and will make a capable officer.

Second Assistant Chief Fred Lamphere is forty-six years of age and is one of the most enthusiastic supporters of the volunteer department. He has been a member of Hose Company, No. 1, for three years and has been President of the company for one year. During his residence of forty years in this city he has made a multitude of friends, who are pleased that he is in the line of promotion in the work which he undertakes so willingly whenever the alarm sounds. His mature judgement is of great value to his fellow associates in the department.

Hook and Ladder Company, No. 1.

The Times was unable on Wednesday to secure the list of officers elected by Hook and Ladder Company, No. 1, at their annual meeting held on Tuesday evening of last week. They are: President, Edward Jenkins; Vice-President, Earl Devendorf; Secretary and Treasurer, William S. Hillick; Foreman, Norman Pullen; First Assistant, Roy Hulbert; Second Assistant, Harry Youmans; Wardens, B. J. Doyle and Ralph Waugh; Delegates to Elect Chief, Irving Smith, Earl Devendorf and Ralph Waugh.

Call at Mrs. Harry Pilch's and inspect her samples of Spring suitings before buying elsewhere.

Several vocal selections will be rendered by the Boys Glee Club during the two afternoons.

Committed Suicide.

Frank Darby, aged sixty, hung himself from the rafters in his barn near Munger's Corner's early on Thursday morning, and was dead when discovered by his wife, who became alarmed at the length of time which he took to feed the stock, and went in search of him. The deceased had been very melancholy recently, and it is supposed that he committed the deed while temporarily insane. Coroner Cusack was called and decided an inquest was unnecessary.

FRIDAY . . BARGAINS . . O'BRIEN'S

We intend to make FRIDAY the BANNER DAY of the WEEK, and we will succeed if low prices will induce you to buy. Prices made on Friday will be for Friday only. Come next Friday and you will be eager to repeat the visit.

J. C. O'BRIEN, CORNER FIRST AND ONEIDA STREETS, FULTON

Honorably Ambitious.

The following item, clipped from the Buffalo Evening News, of March 31st, is in relation to Mr. Edward J. Hatch, who was recently united in marriage with Miss Mary E. Van Wagenen, of this city.

Justice Hatch, of the Supreme Court of New York State, who sat for some years in the Second Division of the Court of Appeals at Albany and is now on the Appellate bench in New York, having been sent here by appointment of Governor Odell, a very distinguished judge, very likely contemplated, as he sent his son to Harvard, a legal education for the young man and a succession to his own professional practice. But when young Hatch was graduated from Harvard and the proposition was laid before him that he study law, his reply was that it was his opinion there were already enough lawyers in the family. It seemed to him that the industrial field offered the best opportunities for a young man of ambition and energy. He graduated a couple of years ago at Harvard and came to New York and sought a position, as did young Root, with the Metropolitan railway people.

It is my impression that his first service of that kind was in Brooklyn Borough. After a brief service in the training school which conductors are obliged to attend, he was appointed a a conductor upon a trolley car and served in that position for some months. It was his intention to master all the details of a service of that kind. Having done that, he was transferred, at his own request, to the motor department, and was given a place a motorman on a trolley car. In that capacity he served for a number of months and early attracted the attention of his superiors.

He was at last promoted from the position of motorman to that of switchman and in that way learned the mechanical operation of the system, so far as rails were concerned. Having mastered that department and having again attracted the attention of his superiors, Mr. Hatch was promoted again and a few months ago was still further promoted to the post of assistant superintendent of the Metropolitan Street Railway system. This advancement was without "pull," the officers of the Metropolitan Street Railway system not knowing, at least through anything that Mr. Hatch had ever said, that he was a son of the distinguished jurist of the Supreme Court. So, two country-born and bred boys, one of them in direct association with Hamilton College, and the other of a distinguished legal family and educated at Harvard University, have come to New York and made careers for themselves in the great industry of city surface transportation.

The pluck and firmness of purpose of Mr. Hatch will be the better understood when it is said that he refused, after he came to New York, to accept any financial aid from his father feeling that he had received an education, that the world was open to him and that it was his duty to himself to support himself; and, although at first it was a hard struggle, he did it without being beholden to any man. This furnishes an object lesson of what young men can do who are earnest, zealous and faithful in the discharge of their duties and who are honorably ambitious and hew to the line.—New York Times.

CONSTIPATION CURED.

A Barrytown, N. Y., Man's Experience with Cal-cura Solvent.

Dr. David Kennedy's NEW Medicine Cured Him Promptly.

Constipation leads to worse. Often it is the cause of appendicitis. Always it leads to dangerous chronic disease. It should not be neglected, nor should it be temporarily relieved with drastic purgatives. Here is a case in point:

"Mr. C. S. Osterhoudt, of Barrytown, N. Y., was distressed with indigestion, chronic constipation and kidney trouble for four years. He tried many medicines without avail. He heard of Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. Kennedy's new medicine, used it and began to improve rapidly. All of his old complaints have disappeared and he owes everything to Cal-cura Solvent. $1.00; all druggists.

Peas For Pigs.

In a Wisconsin station experiment the effect of pea feeding on the external appearance of pigs was notable. Toward the end of the experiment when pea meal and shorts were compared with cornmeal and rye meal the luxuriant hair and smoother flesh of the pea fed pigs were remarked upon. The corn fed pigs were less smooth, had deeper wrinkles, and the flesh showed a tendency to be soft and roll over the shoulders and flanks.

Taking Desperate Chances.

It is true that many contract colds and recover from them without taking any precaution or treatment, and a knowledge of this fact leads others to take their chances instead of giving their colds the needed attention. It should be borne in mind that every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality, makes the system less able to withstand each succeeding cold and paves the way for more serious diseases. Can you afford to take such desperate chances when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds can be had for a trifle? For sale by H. C. Giesler.

As to Manchuria.

The eyes of all the world are on Manchuria. It is a country of which we know practically nothing, and war time is the right time to study unfamiliar territory. In casting about for a correct map and other information of a specific character, I took the advice of the commercial agent of the United States at Vladivostok, and bought for the sum of seven cents, folder No. 28 of the New York Central's "Four-Track Series," issued by our old friend, George H. Daniels. As a rule, not much reliance can be placed on railroad maps, but Agent Richard T. Greener writes: "Daniel's map of Manchuria is the best in print." It certainly is cheap enough for the poorest of us. It should be stuck up in every public school, and Manchuria should be the geographical objective for some months.—February 14, 1904, Victor Smith, "On the Tip of the Tongue," New York Press.

THE SICKROOM MIRROR.

You Must Be Discreet In Allowing the Patient to Use It.

The looking glass, whether a plus or minus quantity, plays a more important part in the sickroom than most nurses and physicians give it credit for. The patient who is allowed to look into one is likely to be frightened into a relapse at sight of his cadaverous appearance, while the one who is not allowed to look is similarly affected by the refusal, which he attributes to the fact that his face is too much for his nerves.

"All things considered, I think it a good plan to give a sick person a chance to look at himself occasionally," said a doctor. "Of course the indulgence must be granted with discretion. If a patient is really looking seedy a turn at the looking glass is equivalent to signing his death warrant, but if taken at a time when braced up by some stimulant or a natural ebullition of vital force a few minutes of communion with his own visage beats any tonic I can prescribe. It thrills the patient with new hope. It makes him feel that he isn't quite so far gone as he had thought and that possibly a fight for life is, after all, worth while.

"Being thus sensitive, a persistent withholding of a mirror convinces the patient that he must be too horrible for contemplation, and he promptly decides that the best thing for him to do is to give up the ghost and get out of the way. That is one mistake hospitals were apt to make up to a few years ago. When I was a young fellow, getting my first practice after graduation, I served on the staff of several hospitals, and in all, especially in the free wards, those aids to vanity were strictly forbidden. The deprivation went hard with many of the patients, particularly the women, and when I came to have a little authority among doctors and nurses I advised a judicious application of looking glass treatment. I still advise it both in hospital and private practice, for I find that a little reassurance as to the state of the complexion and the appearance in general goes a long way toward effecting a cure."—New York Press.

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

THE NECESSARY MAGAZINE IN THE PRESIDENTIAL YEAR

The Review of Reviews is often called a necessity, in recognition of its usefulness in keeping readers "up with the times."

In Presidential election years the REVIEW OF REVIEWS is more than ever "the necessary magazine." Everybody wants to be truly and quickly informed about this or that public question that has forged to the front; to know about the new candidates and personal factors in politics, to have a complete picture at hand of the current movement of history.

In Dr. Shaw's editorials, in its authentic and timely contributed articles, in its brilliant character sketches, in its condensations and reviews of all the important articles of other magazines, and in its hundred a month of valuable portraits, witty cartoons, and interesting views, the REVIEW OF REVIEWS gives the much desired news of the world's and our own progress. "The World under a Field-glass" is the way one subscriber describes it.

Men in public life, like President Theodore Roosevelt, the members of Congress, and the great captains of industry, who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided it is "indispensable."

THE KEY TO SIBERIA

VLADIVOSTOK, THE CZAR'S FINEST SEAPORT IN THE EAST.

Pacific Terminus of the Transsiberian Railway and an Important Naval Station on Russian Soil In the Orient.

Vladivostok, so frequently mentioned in reports from the war in the orient, is the capital of Russia's empire on the Pacific and the key to the vast territory of eastern Siberia. For many years it was the chief Russian city in the far east and, next to Port Arthur, is today the most important naval station on Russian soil.

The city is situated on the Muravieff peninsula, which extends into Peter the Great gulf, and because of its proximity to Korea and Manchuria is strategically of great importance in the present struggle with Japan. Vladivostok much resembles Port Arthur, both being situated on peninsulas that can be approached by the enemy's fleets on three sides, an undesirable position, as the recent bombardments of the ports have proved.

The harbor is approached by way of the eastern Bosporus strait and Amur bay. The channel is clear throughout, with depths of from 75 to 150 feet, and the Golden Horn inlet, as the harbor is named (from its resemblance to the Golden Horn at Constantinople), has not less than 55 feet at its entrance, with 35 to 40 feet off the town. The Golden Horn (or Zoltoi Rog) is about three miles long and half a mile wide, the city being built along the shore for a distance of about two miles. The main fortifications occupy the northern shore, the dry dock is near the middle of the inlet, and the barracks are on the extreme east. Both sides of the entrance are strongly fortified, and batteries are also planted on the Amur bay side of the long spit which incloses the harbor.

Vladivostok is the eastern terminus of the Transsiberian railway, or the Chinese Southern, as that branch of it which crosses Manchuria is called. It is thus in communication by rail with Harbin, Mukden and Port Arthur. It is also connected by rail with Khabarovsk, the capital of the Amur region, 475 miles distant to the northeast. It is closed by ice about two months in the year.

The city was founded in 1861. Russia came into possession of the maritime province, of which Vladivostok is the capital, by the treaty of Argun made with China in 1860. By the treaty an immense tract of country lying between the Yumen, Ussuri and Amur rivers was obtained by the czar. The Chinese, it is said, were unaware of the treaty's full meaning.

The population of Vladivostok is stated to be between 30,000 and 40,000 in normal peace times, but the figures given out as to its population at various periods of its career are somewhat puzzling. Since the completion of the railroads the city has greatly developed, and as Vladivostok is the seat of the viceroy of the east it contains many handsome government buildings as well as churches, one of which, a Greek church, has five domes. There are also gymnasiums for boys and girls, several professional schools, a naval hospital, mechanical and naval works, steam sawmills, flour mills and various other manufacturing plants.

The docking accommodation consists of one dry dock, two floating docks and one small commercial dock. The dry dock is 550 feet long by 90 feet wide, while the largest floating dock is 301 feet in length by 74½ feet in width. The dry dock is superior to that at Port Arthur, and it would be of immense advantage to the Russian cause if Admiral Makaroff could reach there with his damaged battleships.

Captain Reitzenstein, who is in command of the naval forces at Vladivostok, has four splendid ships in his squadron—the Gromovoi, Rurik and Rossia, armored cruisers of the most powerful class, and the protected cruiser Bogatyr—but despite the fact that his ships are swift and powerful Captain Reitzenstein dares not leave the protection of the forts except for short dashes into the sea, which have so far had no effect on the naval situation.

Now that the ice has left the Golden Horn the Japs may make another descent on Vladivostok. It is susceptible of attack from both land and sea.

PERIODICAL AUCTIONS.

For the Marketing of Live Stock. An Ohio Horse Sale.

By Professor C. S. PLUMB, Ohio College of Agriculture.

Auction sales furnish a good opportunity for disposing of stock. Sometimes a special country auction sale is held to dispose of the surplus stock of a local breeder or two or more such breeders may combine to hold such a sale. In such cases the arrangements and advertising may be left to the auctioneer, who receives a percentage of the sales made and pays for clerk hire, advertising, etc.

But the more important local auction sales are those which are held periodically at some point convenient for both producers and buyers. Such sales are not very common in the United States, though they have been established in a few places in the central west, especially for the disposal of horses and cattle. Such sales are sometimes held on the streets or on the public square of a considerable town or in some commodious stable.

The animals are offered for sale singly or in lots, as the seller may prefer. The auctioneer usually receives either so much per head for stock sold or a percentage of the amount realized by the seller. The cost of advertising such sales is usually nominal, and sometimes no special advertising is necessary, as in case of the monthly stock sales which have been held for many years on the streets of London, O., on the first Tuesday of every month. Payments for stock sold at these periodical auctions are nearly always made on a cash basis.

British Auction Sales.

The local auction markets held in Great Britain are of considerable importance and are usually held weekly. At Kilmarnock, Scotland, periodical sales are held, the stock sold being largely Ayrshire dairy cows and butchers' stock, much of which comes from Ireland. From 100 to 150 cows are commonly sold at each weekly auction. There is a yard with pens for keeping stock for inspection; also two buildings about forty feet square for conducting the sales. There are in each a sawdust covered ring, a box for the auctioneer and clerk and seats arranged in amphitheater style for the bidders. Each cow is entered on the record by a number, and a slip of paper bearing the number is pasted on the rump.

At Kilmarnock the cattle are consigned to the auctioneer, to whom the consignor must look for his pay. No animal is to be taken from the yard until paid for. For remuneration the auctioneer receives about 1 3-5 per cent of the amount of the sales.

These British sales are patronized by dealers, farmers, dairymen and butchers. All have an opportunity to inspect the stock before the sale. Some of these country local auction sales in Great Britain are very large. At Hereford, England, on each Wednesday hundreds of cattle change hands, as many as 2,000 being sold in one day.

A Typical Local Horse Market.

At Orrville, O., for some years a horse company has conducted sales twice a month. The horses are brought in from the surrounding country and are offered for sale in a building constructed for the purpose, containing many stalls, a salesroom, auctioneer's and clerk's box and seating space for buyers. These sales are attended by local buyers and men from a distance who come to secure stock for special orders.

Farmers' Co-operation a Big Success

Webster City, Ia.—It is a remarkable state of affairs that has developed in Rockwell City as the outcome of the formation six years ago of one of those co-operative companies of farmers which are making such strides in the west today. Iowa has had various successful co-operative organizations, but the Rockwell City body bids fair to carry off the laurels. This company has for some time sold produce for the members, and it now buys nearly all their goods for them, and the merchants of the little town begin to manifest considerable apprehension over this last item.

Whether the farmers' company shall continue to buy and sell boots, shoes and clothing to the members, to the alleged damage of local merchants, promises to become a question of policy in the association, and there seems to be a tendency to hold in check, if not eliminate, this feature in the future.

At first lumber and coal were the only articles dealt in for the benefit of the members, but gradually farm implements, hardware, twine, feed, flour and other staples were added to the list and finally the footwear and clothing feature that make it in fact something of a department store.

Besides selling the stock and produce of its members, it is stated that the company has carried on a business of $600,000 a year in the goods mentioned, and this at a cost of less than 1 per cent, or $5,500. A surplus of $20,000 was this year reported, out of which was declared a dividend of 130 per cent, or $13 a share.

Condimental Foods and Tonics.

Healthy animals do not need medicine or tonic. Yet there are times when an animal tonic is of use upon the farm. The Maine station suggests one costing 20 cents a pound, which is concentrated instead of diluted, which is all drug and not mostly feed stuff, and hence far stronger; one which is probably at least as efficient as, and certainly far cheaper than, the generality of condimental feeds: Pulverized gentian, one pound; pulverized ginger, one-quarter pound; pulverized saltpeter, one-quarter pound; pulverized iron sulphate, one-quarter pound; mix. Feed tablespoonful in feed once daily for ten days. Omit three days. Feed as before for ten days.

HOOSIER STATESMAN

FAIRBANKS OF INDIANA, WHO MAY BE VICE PRESIDENT.

Most Talked of Republican Candidate—Born on a Farm, He Worked His Way Through College—Noted as a Railroad Lawyer.

Although Senator Charles Warren Fairbanks of Indiana has stated that he is not a candidate for the vice presidential nomination, he is the most talked of man for the honor and has come to be regarded as the probable nominee of the Republican convention.

The movement for Mr. Fairbanks seems to be spontaneous, and he has persistently refused to sanction any effort of his friends to make a canvass for his nomination. This attitude of the Hoosier statesman, say his friends, is not to be construed as an evidence that he does not appreciate the honor, but that he believes the office should seek the man. Should the choice of the Republican national convention for second place fall on Senator Fairbanks there would be little doubt of his acceptance.

Mr. Fairbanks was elected to the senate in January, 1897, to succeed Daniel W. Voorhees. He went to the senate a new man, not having previously held any public office. He was at that time comparatively unknown outside of the states of the middle west, but it was not long before he was recognized by his colleagues as a man of great ability. Before his first term expired in March of last year he was re-elected by the unanimous vote of his party, and unless chosen vice president next fall he will continue in the senate until 1909.

As a speaker Senator Fairbanks is neither emotional nor eloquent. He is calm and deliberate of utterance and has a sincerity of manner that commands respect and generally carries conviction. In debate there are few men in the senate more keen and ready than the senior member from Indiana.

The story of his life is interesting. It is another of the many examples of a poor boy rising to fame and fortune by his own exertions. He is a descendant of Jonathan Fayerweather, who came from England in 1636 and settled at Dedham, Mass. Charles was born on a farm in Union county, O., and spent his boyhood there, attending the schools of the neighborhood. When he had gone as far as the local schools would take him he decided to go to college.

While not absolutely poor, his father was unable to stand the expense of such an undertaking, and young Fairbanks was compelled to work his way. The Ohio Wesleyan university was not far from his home, and with another lad he rented a room, their parents providing the necessary furniture and provisions. While working on the farm young Fairbanks had learned how to use carpenters' tools and did odd jobs in this line to add to his slender resources. He was graduated in 1872 with high honors, studied law and began the practice of his profession in Indianapolis. His success as a lawyer has been great, and he is said to be worth several million dollars. He has manufacturing interests in Ohio, a large farm in Illinois and is considered one of the best authorities on railroad law in the country.

Senator Fairbanks is the tallest member of the upper house of congress and is one of the best dressed men in that august body. He wears a beard of rather peculiar cut. There is a large bushy mustache, and underneath and mingling with it a thick and close cropped growth covering the entire chin. At a little distance the mustache and beard merge into one dark patch, the mouth being almost entirely hidden.

Senator Fairbanks' family consists of a wife and five children, four sons and a daughter. The latter is the wife of Ensign John W. Timmons of the navy. The eldest son, Warren C., is secretary and treasurer of a large manufacturing company. The second son, Frederick C., graduated from Princeton last year and is now studying law at Columbia university. Richard, the third son, is at Yale, and the fourth, Robert, is preparing to enter Princeton.

Mrs. Fairbanks is a daughter of Judge Cole of Marysville. Miss Cole was a classmate of Mr. Fairbanks at Wesleyan university and was associated with him in the editorial conduct of the college paper. They were married in 1872. Mrs. Fairbanks occupies a leading position in the social life of the national capital and Indianapolis and entertains on a large scale. She is president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

of average good health and spirits to make older people laugh with him; not at him, at the things that seem amusing to his own sense. And the mother who has the blithe and ready humor to enter into his fun becomes his most fascinating companion. He heeds her rebukes and bends to her correction without ill feeling where sternness would arouse his pride and ire, for he is assured that she is ready to share all his innocent pranks and that her disapproval has no foundation in impatience or injustice. And when the day arrives that "childish things are put away" and the grown men and women look backward to their early home, with what a throb of pleasure they say, when things happen: "Mother would appreciate this. She had the quickest sense of humor of any woman you ever saw!" And underneath these light words is the thought, "How happy that dear mother made me, and how I love her!"

About Your Neck.

A famous artist has said, "Of all the beautiful objects in nature none surpasses the well molded neck of woman." The length of the perfect neck should be one-half the height of the head, from the level of the chin to the summit, and at its narrowest part should have twice the circumference of the wrist. Age is first shown in the form of the neck and care to retain its perfect contour should therefore be an important duty. Exercise of the muscles of the neck by bending the head in all directions at regular intervals during the day will assist and will tend to prevent deposits of fat at the base, a common disfigurement. Fullness of the neck, in the case of children, should at once be brought to the attention of the family physician.

Odds and Ends of Soap.

Most good housekeepers have on hand a soap shaker in which to stow away the bits of soap that soon become too small for handling and are likely to get lost. But the fragments of the scouring stones and bricks are an ever vexing domestic problem. A good and economical way of disposing of them is to place them between two strong pieces of brown paper and crush them with a rolling pin till perfectly pulverized. The powder can then be put into a tin can or box and used with a damp cloth for scouring tins, agateware, brasses, etc. Odds and ends of a dozen kinds may be mixed together with impunity.

Where Everything Is In Pairs.

There are two or three kinds of drawing rooms that literally set the teeth on edge and cause the souls of artistic people to shudder within them. One is the room where everything is in pairs. There are pairs of vases, pairs of photograph frames, pairs of pictures, pairs of footstools, pairs of everything. It is impossible to prevent the thought flashing across the mind that if pairing originated with the flood one can only wish that Noah had taken the animals into the ark one by one.—London Queen.

Broken Glass.

If you happen to break a glass or valuable glass ornament it can be effectually and easily mended in the following way: Melt a little isinglass in spirits of wine, add a small quantity of water and warm the mixture gently over a moderate fire. When mixed by thoroughly melting it will form a perfectly transparent glue, which will unite glass so nicely and firmly that the joint will scarcely be noticed by the most critical eye.

The Man and the Match.

"Show me two men with unlighted cigarettes, and if I watched them for a minute I can tell you correctly whether the one who has the match is from Philadelphia, Boston or New York."

The speaker was a person of some observation, and his friend naturally asked:

"How can you tell?"

"In this way," said the observant man. "If the man is a Philadelphian he will strike the match, hold it for his friend to get a light, then take a light himself and throw the match away. If he is a Bostonian he will light his own cigarette first, then hold the match for his friend and after that throw it away. If he is a New Yorker, however, he will strike the match, light his own cigarette and throw the match away."—Philadelphia Press.

Baby's Position When Asleep.

Should the baby rest with face downward or repeatedly bend the thighs on the abdomen there is some intestinal disorder. It is a bad sign for the child when lying on his side to have the head greatly drawn back. When in this position and the breathing is hoarse something ails the throat. If the breathing is normal the mischief is in the brain.

Old Daguerreotypes.

If you have some old daguerreotypes, glass covered and gilt matted, take them out of their embossed leather cases and frame them in some dull shade of close piled velvet—sage green or dull red or, if you like, in silver or pewter—and you will have a fashionable bit of bric-a-brac and at the same time preserve an esteemed antique.

Paint on Glass.

Splashes of paint on glass if left for any time will become hard. To remove them take boiling water and in it dissolve a lump of soda, a piece about the size of an egg to a pint of water. Wet a cloth or piece of flannel in this and rub the marks, when they will be found to come off quite easily.

The Way to Sit.

Don't sit on the end of your spine. Don't sit with your knees apart. They should always touch. Don't sit with the legs crossed, because it throws the weight on one hip and distorts the body.

Vaseline, as most housekeepers know by experience, leaves ugly spots that are not removed by ordinary laundering. A professional cleaner says soaking the stains in kerosene will usually remove them.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 13, 1904.

IF Mr. Bryan will hush up for a minute or two we may be able to hear the gentle voice of Mr. Parker.

THE Togo Bottling Works at Port Arthur have at last discovered that the cork is too small.

WHY does Mr. Bryan insist upon the reaffirmation of the Kansas City platform? Does he want to see some other fellow fall into the coal-hole?

JUDGE PARKER is far in the lead of Democratic Presidential candidates with members of Congress. But his chance of leading them to victory may be said to be small.

THE heroic survivors of the Variag and Korietz, the vessels destroyed in Chemulpo harbor, are having a tremendous reception in Russia, which goes far to offset any reverses the Russians have met with.

OUR Democratic friends are making a great to-do about the row in the Republican Convention of West Virginia. They do not seem to comprehend the fact that such little dissensions are simply a sign of active interest in public affairs. See Cuba, for instance.

IN his letter to the Chicago University, President Roosevelt wrote a very felicitous letter of congratulations and paid the Germans in this country a high compliment for showing the Americans "the power of joyous living" and the "gain to the higher life" which comes from a liberal education."

THE postal frauds should help rather than harm the Republican party. Our Postal Department is the greatest organization in the world, having grown from seventy-five post offices in Franklin's time to 76,000 now, and from 300 employes to 250,000. There has been an amazingly small percentage of fraud.

HOBSON and Bankhead are having great fun with each other down in Alabama. The latter derides the former's proposal for a $2,600,000,000 navy, and points out that such an appropriation would cost Alabama alone $70,000,000. But Hobson kisses the women and babies and moves triumphantly on.

MANY petitons are being received in Congress for the establishment of a parcels-post. The coming of such a valuable adjunct of the mail service is only a question of a short time. Why should the American people be tyrannized over by four monopolistic express companies? We ought to be able to send ten or twenty pounds by mail as the Germans and English are.

AGAIN the President illustrates his fairness and impartiality. Captain Cowles, his brother-in-law, is attacked with great virulence, because the battleship Missouri, which he was commanding, collided with the Illinois. It was a deplorable accident, but a court of inquiry acquitted him of blame, and if he were not the President's relative, the acquittal would be universally accepted as just. As it is, there is a great tumult.

The Wilmington, N. C., Star says: "As long as we lynch in the South and draw our guns and shoot each other to death in the street we are wasting time in establishing immigration bureaus." The Charleston News and Courier copies this and says: "The plain truth plainly spoken. Only the desperately adventurous and most undesirable would seek residence in a State where a citizen's ability to draw a pistol and shoot first is his greatest security." This is most creditable talk.

Congressional Convention.

The Congressional convention for the counties of Oswego, Jefferson and Lewis met in Watertown on Friday of last week. The Hon. P. W. Cullinan of Oswego called the assemblage to order and named Messrs. James H. Cooper of Oswego, chairman; W. F. VanAllen of Jefferson, secretary and H. W. Cox of Lewis, teller. Chairman Cooper appointed Messrs. P. W. Cullinan of Oswego, Albert Foster of Jefferson and Daniel O'Brien of Lewis, a committee on resolutions. Hon. T. M. Costello asked that a committee to name the delegates to the National Convention be appointed, and Col. John T. Mott and Mr. Costello became the Oswego County members of the committee. The committee recommended that the delegates to the convention be Hon. P. W. Cullinan of Oswego and Mr. Elon R. Brown of Jefferson, with Mr. J. A. Outerson of Carthage and Major J. S. Koster of Lewis county, as alternates. The delegates were instructed to use all honorable means to secure the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt for president.

The resolutions which were adopted endorsed the administration of President Roosevelt, Gov. Odell, Senators Platt and Depew, Congressman Knapp and State Committeeman Mott. The retention of Col. Mott as State Committeeman was strongly recommended.

A new Congressional Committee consisting of Harrison Fuller and W B. Van Allen of Jefferson, A. L. Clark and H. A. Phillips of Lewis, and P. W. Cullinan and T. M. Costello of Oswego was selected. The representation in the next convention has been fixed as follows: Oswego and Jefferson twelve, and Lewis six. Congressman Knapp thanked the convention for the endorsement of his administration and praised President Roosevelt and the Republican party. Mr. Cullinan returned sincere thanks to the convention for sending him to the National Convention and pledged himself to follow his instructions.

O. L. G. Club.

One of the newest clubs in Fulton was organized at the home of Mrs. G. G. Chauncey a few weeks ago. The members are the little Misses Mary Webb, Mary Hunter, Zelma Allen, Ruth Allen, Francis Allen, Marion Lake, Gertrude Lake, Barbara Gilbert and Katherine Wettengel. Their purpose in organizing was to furnish a crib for the new City Hospital, and they meet every fortnight and make useful articles for a sale which they will hold on April 30. They are also making an autograph quilt and are meeting with a ready response to the request for autographs at 10 cents each. The example which these young ladies have set might be followed with profit and pleasure, by older ones, and it is probable a club of older girls will be organized in the near future to work along the same commendable lines.

Snappy Spring Styles.

What's the Sense

in waiting a week on your tailor, when you can come here and walk off with a suit that fits as good as any "merchant tailor's," and embodies the snappiest styles and the handsomest materials?

Then think of the variety you have to select from. What merchant tailor can lay before you such a varied assortment from which to match your individual preference?

Added to all this, the price is very much lower than you would have to pay the tailor. Have you any objections to saving the difference?

The illustration shows two of the season's most popular leaders both bearing the famous Schloss label which stands for solid merit.

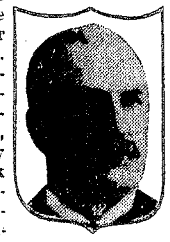
Uncle Sam's Canal Diggers

Members of the Commission Which Will Superintend the Work of Joining the Oceans

NOW that the members of the isthmian canal commission have gone to Panama to make a general survey of the situation, Uncle Sam may be said to have begun work on the great waterway, although actual construction will not be undertaken for some time to come. Rear Admiral Walker and his fellow commissioners will go over the whole route, noting the work done, planning improvements and arranging for the sanitation of the entire canal zone. When the commission sailed for Panama it was accompanied by a score of representatives of mining and dredging concerns who went to look over the ground and make estimates of the cost of digging, dredging and masonry work with the idea of obtaining contracts. Since its appointment the commission has been besieged by numerous contractors and men who want to furnish supplies of all kinds, as well as thousands of professional men and skilled mechanics who are anxious for employment at the isthmus. Nothing will be done, however, in the way of letting contracts or organizing a working force until the members of the commission have thoroughly sized up the situation.

JOHN G. WALKER.

Besides Rear Admiral Walker, the men appointed by President Roosevelt to superintend the construction of the big ditch are Major General George W. Davis, William Barclay Parsons, William H. Burr, Benjamin M. Harrod, Carl Ewald Grunsky and Colonel Frank J. Hecker. The commission as thus constituted is essentially a body of engineers, six of the seven members having distinguished themselves in engineering work. The law under which the commission was created provided that four should be skilled in the science of engineering.



G. W. DAVIS.

Rear Admiral John G. Walker, U. S. N., retired, chairman of the commission, probably has given more study to the isthmian canal than any other man in this country. He has served as chairman of two commissions appointed to investigate canal routes and has familiarized himself with the whole subject. He was graduated from Annapolis in 1856, reached the grade of rear admiral in 1894 and was retired at the age of sixty-two in 1897. He is a man of splendid physique and possessed of vigorous health.

The vice chairman of the commission, Major General George Whitefield Davis, U. S. A., retired, who will probably be designated governor of the canal strip, has a distinguished record as a soldier and administrator. He is one of the many successful soldiers who did not have the advantage of a West Point education. He enlisted in the volunteer service during the first year of the civil war and in 1866 was mustered out with the rank of major. The next year he entered the regular army as a captain, from which time until the Spanish war advancement was rather slow. He had, however, made a reputation as an engineer, and from 1876 to 1885 was assistant engineer of the Washington monument at the national capital. On the outbreak of the conflict with Spain he was appointed a brigadier general of volunteers and reached a like rank in the regular service in 1900, when he was sent to the Philippines as inspector general of the army. Previous to going to the far east he had served as military governor of Porto Rico and made a good record in that post.

W. B. PARSONS.

In the Philippines he was military governor of Manila and later commanded the department of Luzon. In June, 1902, he was promoted to the rank of major general and succeeded General Chaffee as chief in command of the American forces in the islands. He was retired last year.

To William Barclay Parsons, chief engineer of the New York rapid transit commission since 1894, more than to any other man is due the successful construction of the great underground railway system which is now nearing completion in that city. Many variations of Mr. Parsons' original plans were made before the final one was adopted, but the basic idea is the one devised by him.

F. J. HECKER.

Mr. Parsons' experience as an engineer has been a wide one. He was consulting engineer to the railway system of the island of Jamaica during its period of construction, and as chief engineer of the American-Chinese Development company he surveyed the line of railway from Hankow to Canton, the longest in China. Mr. Parsons is a native of New York city, a graduate of Columbia university and is forty-five years old.

The only member of the commission not an engineer is Colonel Frank J. Hecker of Detroit, who may be classed as a business man. He is a native of Michigan and since the civil war, in which he fought, has been engaged in large business operations. After the war he was in charge of construction on the Union Pacific railway and later became general agent of the road at Cheyenne. From there he went east and built several railroads in New York and Connecticut, and in 1879 he began building cars in Detroit. He is now the head of one of the largest car works in this country. During the Spanish war Colonel Hecker served the government as director of transportation.

C. E. GRUNSKY.

Carl Ewald Grunsky, member of the commission from California, is a graduate of the Polytechnic institute at Stuttgart, Germany, and one of the best known engineers on the Pacific coast. After returning from Germany he was connected with the California engineering department for nine years, when he resigned. He has been engaged on nearly all the great engineering works of the state since that time and in 1892 devised the present sewer system of San Francisco.

Since 1900 Mr. Grunsky has been chief engineer of the board of public works of San Francisco and while holding that position has made plans for improvements aggregating $17,000,000. He also investigated the available sources of water supply for the city and devised a project for municipal waterworks with its source in the Sierra Nevada mountains.

Few civil engineers have been so frequently honored with public positions of trust as has William H. Burr, professor of civil engineering at Columbia university since 1893 and before that time in the same chair at Harvard. Besides his duties at Columbia, he has been consulting engineer to the various departments of New York city, and while acting in that capacity for the department of parks he superintended the construction of the speedway along the Harlem river after the first walls which separated the drive from the river had slid out into the water in several places. He is now consulting engineer for the department of bridges. In 1899 he was appointed a member of the isthmian canal commission by President McKinley, and is therefore familiar with the work to be done.

W. H. BURR.

Benjamin Morgan Harrod of New Orleans was graduated from Harvard in 1856 and is one of the most distinguished engineers in the south. He has served as chief engineer of the state of Louisiana and of New Orleans and in 1895 was in charge of the construction of the drainage system of that city. Since 1879 he has been a member of the Mississippi river commission.

B. M. HARROD.

Before the work of construction can begin steps will be taken to make the canal zone healthful so far as possible by modern methods of sanitation. With the commission are Colonel William C. Gorgas, assistant surgeon general of the army; Dr. Lewis La Garde of the medical department of the army, and Dr. John W. Ross, medical director of the navy. The medical men will examine into all sanitary matters in the canal zone.

Only Admiral Walker and General Davis, the army and navy members of the commission, will give their whole time to the canal work. Private business will demand a part of the time of the other five members. The salary of the commissioners is $12,000 a year and expenses. They will not return to this country until the end of May.

Rats and Water.

After all other remedies fail there still remains a way of getting rid of rats, and that is by depriving them of water. They can live for a very long time without food and when hard pressed will not hesitate to eat each other, but no rat can go twenty-four hours without drink; therefore if every possible means of obtaining water is taken from the rats they will desert the vicinity.

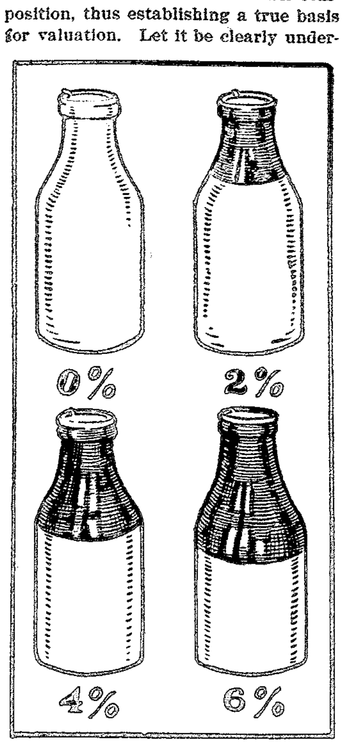
FARM AND GARDEN

CITY MILK SUPPLY.

High Grade Milk, "Standard" and "Certified"—How Produced.

By WILBER J. FRASER, Chief In Dairy Husbandry, University of Illinois.

By standard milk and cream is meant that which has a certain known composition, thus establishing a true basis for valuation. Let it be clearly understood by producers, consumers, city councils and everybody that in these days the dealer can furnish the customer with milk of any desired richness, without regard to the quality ordinarily yielded by the cow, and all milk should be either so standardized or else bought and sold according to its natural composition.



STANDARDIZED MILK.
[Showing the amount of cream on milk containing the designated per cent of butter fat.]

Since fat in milk is the most variable constituent, the other solids remaining fairly constant, standardizing milk is a comparatively simple matter. All that is necessary is to add or remove a certain amount of butter fat, which is easily done by means of the centrifugal separator or by letting the cream rise by gravity. In this work skim milk, containing practically no butter fat, must be added or removed. Such a method would result in justice to both producer and consumer.

The grade of milk known as "certified" is nothing more than milk of a known composition, as clean and free from bacteria as science and skill can make it and produced by an inspected herd. Even in the production of this grade of milk costly buildings are necessary, but they should be so constructed as to be easily cleaned and must be kept in perfect condition.

Before milking all udders must be washed, whether they appear soiled or not, and the milkers must wash their hands and put on clean suits of some washable material. As soon as drawn the milk must be removed from the stable to a sanitary dairy, where it is cooled to 50 degrees F. or below, standardized and bottled. The bottles and all other utensils with which the milk comes in contact must be thoroughly washed and sterilized after each using.

The easiest and most effective way of letting the patrons know the advantages of high grade milk and the methods used in its production is by means of an attractive illustrated circular. This circular should show views in the dairy barn and dairy, describe how the herd is kept and the milk produced and prepared for the trade. Copies should be distributed among the patrons and, together with samples of the milk advertised, given to the influential people of the town. The physicians should be called upon and some means devised for getting them to visit the dairy. If they find everything there in first class condition they will not be slow in recommending the milk to their patients.

IN A SANITARY DAIRY.
[Washing the udders before milking.]

NOT FOND OF SOCIETY.

Attorney General Knox's Daughter, Who Is Soon to Wed.

Miss Rebecca Page Knox, only daughter of Attorney General Knox, whose engagement to James Robert Tindle of Pittsburg has just been made public, is the first young woman of the present cabinet circle to make such an announcement.

Miss Knox is about twenty-three years old, bright, pretty and vivacious, with a petite and graceful figure. She made her debut in Pittsburg just prior to her father's appointment to the cabinet, but has never been identified with Washington society, owing to her distaste for official life. Her acquaintance with Mr. Tindle dates back to her school days, although until recently there was no idea on the part of their friends of any serious attachment between the young people.

Mr. Tindle is one of a party with Miss Knox and Mrs. and Miss Mohler in Cairo, Egypt. Miss Knox has made three attempts to make a tour around the world. The first one had to be given up on account of ill health, and the second one was postponed because Miss Mohler became ill. The party finally got started last autumn. They arrived in Egypt, but it is now announced that they have abandoned the idea of going entirely around the world and will return to this country sooner than was planned. Miss Knox has always been a chum of her father, who fondly describes her as "a level headed girl."

After the New York horse show of 1902 Miss Knox made a tour of the orient lasting all winter and also was one of the Roosevelt party at the Charleston exposition.

Her fiance, Mr. Tindle, is the son of the late Robert Tindle of Pittsburg and a grandson of James Wood, who was one of the prominent citizens of western Pennsylvania. Mr. Tindle is a man of independent fortune, fond of travel and as indifferent to society as his future bride. Miss Knox will reach Washington in June, and the wedding will take place in Pittsburg next fall.

Weak Hearts

Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.

Mr. D. Kauble, of Nevada, O., says: I had stomach trouble and was in a bad state as I had heart trouble with it. I took Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for about four months and it cured me.

HONORED BY THE POPE.

Very Rev. T. F. Cusack, Auxiliary Bishop of New York.

The Very Rev. Thomas F. Cusack, who was recently appointed auxiliary bishop of the Roman Catholic diocese of New York by Pope Pius X., was formerly a mission priest, and his elevation occasioned no little surprise in clerical circles.

Bishop Cusack bears the distinction of being the first bearded prelate of the Catholic diocese of New York. Were it not for his priestly garb he might be mistaken for a physician or member of some other secular profession. Thoughtful eyes and high forehead indicate the student, while a firm mouth and square chin show force of character and persistency of purpose. A tall figure, broad shoulders and an erect carriage give him a commanding presence. The bishop wears a beard to protect a weak throat.

The new prelate is a native of New York city, forty-two years of age and of Irish parentage. His early education was obtained in the public schools and St. Xavier's college, New York, and at St. Joseph's seminary, Troy. The late Archbishop Corrigan was a warm friend of the young priest, and about seven years ago he chose him to head a band of missionary workers known as the New York apostolate.

During his years as a missionary priest Bishop Cusack has had many trying experiences. In the winter months he and his associates have been accustomed to take tours through remote country districts, holding meetings. In the spring and fall they conduct missions in the various parishes of New York city. They give five weeks to a parish generally, four for Catholics and the last for Protestants. In these last meetings an important feature of the work is the question box, in which non-Catholics may drop whatever inquiries they wish. Wide reading and study, aided by an excellent memory, enabled Father Cusack to answer these questions nearly always without reference. At a mission held last fall Father Cusack heard 6,000 confessions in four weeks.

General J. Warren Keifer, Who Is to Re-enter Political Life.

General J. Warren Keifer, who is to re-enter politics after an absence of twenty years, having been nominated for congress by the Republicans of the Seventh Ohio district, will be no stranger in the national house of representatives, over which he once presided as speaker.

in 1858 and has since made the Ohio capital his home. He served with distinction in the civil war, retiring from the service with the rank of brigadier general. When the Spanish war broke out he was appointed major general.

In 1877 General Keifer was elected to congress and was three times reelected. His term as speaker was from 1881 to 1883, coming between those of Samuel J. Randall and John G. Carlisle. He is now in his sixty-ninth year and is one of the foremost lawyers of Ohio. His nomination is equivalent to election, the Seventh district being strongly Republican.

ANIMAL STOWAWAYS.

On Ships and in Cargoes They Often Cross the Ocean.

New York has for many years received numbers of destitute aliens of the animal world from the holds of the banana ships. The trade in bananas is an enormous one, and many of them come from sources at no great distance, whence the fruit can be brought without cold storage. The big clusters of bananas are peculiarly adapted for harboring "stowaways." Among these are enumerated numbers of small, harmless snakes, lizards of various kinds, occasionally, it is said, a young iguana and large and particularly venomous spiders. But real pests which survive and increase in a new country are fortunately rarely transported accidentally. The one serious instance is the chigo, or "jigger." It is said to have been transported from Central America to the East Indies.

The Colorado beetle has never succeeded in making a home in England, though mosquitoes of a peculiarly ferocious though nonmalarial kind are said to have appeared in English hotels. Several corn beetles, a very destructive type of insect and among the greatest enemies of those who would like to create an "emergency" store of corn, have been "dumped" in England with foreign grain and have established themselves.

Bird "stowaways" on ships are very numerous in the narrow parts of the Mediterranean during the migration. They also frequently alight on ships when these are near the coast, being then very much exhausted and glad to find "a rest for the soles of their feet." Golden crested wrens sometimes descend in a storm on some North sea smack on a migration night and even alight on steamers by day. It was confidently stated that a golden crested wren was seen to fly from off the back of a short eared owl when the latter came in from the sea and alighted near a jetty on the east coast.

The belief that some little birds come as "stowaways" on the backs of larger ones was held in reference to the Canada geese by the North American Indians and by the Turks of Cyprus, who alleged the same of the crane and stork. That some birds must travel great distances on ships crossing the Atlantic seems probable. The American bittern and two American cuckoos have been found in England, the first rather frequently. It is conjectured that they can only have crossed the ocean by traveling on the masts and yards of ships, probably steamers, as otherwise they must have died of starvation.—London Spectator.

PITH AND POINT.

A wound in the purse is not mortal.

Don't growl—that's the brute's business.

Those we think are weakest are often stronger than us all.

Every man has at times in his mind the ideal of what he should be, but is not.

Don't misjudge the man with a quick temper—they are the best hearts in Christendom.

Rather prefer to provoke a smile than to provoke a man. There is no harm done by provoking a smile.

Don't try to escape the battle of life. Life is not life without conflict, and death is not death without victory. And the battleground is the man, and the victory is the soul.—Schoolmaster.

A Pessimist.

"Don't you suppose it is possible for a man to go through the world without telling a lie?"

"I doubt it. Almost every man has been in love at some time in his life."

Consumption

The only kind of consumption to fear is "neglected consumption."

People are learning that consumption is a curable disease. It is neglected consumption that is so often incurable.

At the faintest suspicion of consumption get a bottle of Scott's Emulsion and begin regular doses.

The use of Scott's Emulsion at once, has, in thousands of cases, turned the balance in favor of health.

Neglected consumption does not exist where Scott's Emulsion is.

Prompt use of Scott's Emulsion checks the disease while it can be checked.

Mistake of a Blind Boa Constrictor.

A boa constrictor that was nearly blind was once found to be contentedly swallowing a blanket for dinner instead of a rabbit, which was also within reach, and it was only with great difficulty that it was forced to disgorge this singular article of food. A snake's tongue is therefore not an organ of taste, nor is it, as many think, a sting; it is more probably a delicate organ of touch.—Chambers' Journal.

The Old English School.

Colonel Anstruther Thomson, an aged Englishman, says in a volume of reminiscences that at a school which he attended as a boy the students were regularly dosed twice a year. "We were marched up to Carmalt's desk two and two. Two glasses of a horrid compound of bark were on the desk, and an usher stood on each side. We had to drink the dose, turn to the usher and put out our tongues to show that we had swallowed it! This was charged in our account: 'Wine, 5 shillings.'"

Widows in China.

According to the laws of good society in China, young widows should not remarry. Widowhood is therefore held in the highest esteem and the older the widow grows the more agreeable her position becomes. Should she reach fifty years she may, by applying to the emperor, get a sum of money with which to buy a tablet on which her virtues are named. The tablet is then placed over the door of the principal entrance of her house.

Current Events Club.

The regular meeting of the Current Events Club was held on Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Hunter, Corner Second and Buffalo streets.

Owing to the absence of the president, Mrs. Emens occupied the chair, and, as the secretary was in New York, Judge Wilson was appointed to take his place.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved. Mrs. George Chauncey proposed the names of Mr. and Mrs. Almon Bristol. By unanimous vote they were made members of the club.

Mrs. Chauncey reported, as chairman of the entertainment committee, that representatives from the different circles and clubs in the city had met and it was decided to have Prof Losey of Syracuse give Othello. It was decided to make this a Library benefit and to hold it in the City Hall; each member should take two tickets at 25 cents each, and the evening of the entertainment was to be either April 26 or 27, or May 3 or 4. The hall can be secured on those dates and they will be entirely satisfactory to Prof. Losey.

The following committees were appointed: on tickets, Mrs. Thomas Lewis and Mrs. Chauncey; introduction of speaker, Mr. E. R. Redhead; chairs and decorations, Mr. John Hunter; treasurer, Miss May Gardner; ushers, Messrs. Louis Emerick, E S. Brown, Harry Howe, H. J. Wilson; to take tickets at the door, Mr. Charles Bennett.

Mrs. Redhead spoke of the necessity of discussion at this meeting in connection with the continuation of the club during next year, and by motion it was decided that the club would continue during the Fall of 1904 and 1905, and that at the next meeting, election of officers would take place.

The leaders for the evening were Mrs. L. F. Joy and Miss Chesley; Mrs. Joy having the foreign current events in her charge, and Miss Chesley the home events.

The following interesting topics were discussed: the influence of Great Britian in Thibet; the school question in France.

Miss May Gardner gave a most lucid explanation in regard to the present feeling of the French people on the school question and what had led up to this condition. Mrs. Joy closed this part of the discussion with a very interesting paper on the attitude of the Pope towards the character of the music in Catholic churches, giving the history of this movement which had led up to the decision of the present Pope.

The one hour and a half's time alloted for the meeting had been spent in a most interesting and pleasant manner, so Miss Chesley felt that she did not have much time left at her disposal, but everyone was anxious to hear of the home affairs; hence there were discussed Judge Parker as a possible candidate for the presidency of the United States, also the condition of the three cornered Republican controversy in New York State between Governor Odell, Senator Platt and President Roosevelt; the Rhodes scholarship which is a matter of vital interest as the examinations are to be taken on the 13th of the present month. Whoever is successful in this competition will be paid $1,500 per year for expenses at Oxford University, which is considered ample, and at the same time will permit the successful student to spend his Summer vacations on the continent travelling.

The report of the committee in the House of Representatives in connection with the impeachment of Judge Swain of Florida was discussed, as was also the attitude of our conservative editors in connection with the interpretation of the service pension bill of our federal officers.

The meeting was large, the interest very marked and all present enjoyed themselves.

Northern New York Conference

The Northern New York M. E. Conference was in session in Ilion last week, and a tremendous amount of business was disposed of. The Presiding Elders from the six districts reported a financial and spiritual growth since the last gathering and reports from the different Missionary societies were very encouraging.

The conference has taken the Revs. G. W. Wood, J. C. Darling, H. A. Harris, S. O. Barnes, C. H. Guile, W. M. Holbrook and S D. Markham from the effective to the superannuated and supernumerary lists.

The money collected for general educational work was ordered paid over to Syracuse University.

Rev. F. B. Severance declined to serve longer as business manager of the conference and the Presiding Elders choose his successor.

The conference was entitled to four delegates to the general conference to be held in Los Angeles, Cal., on May 2. This is the most important gathering in the church and delegates from all countries where Methodism is taught, will be present. Mr. H. L Paddock of the First M. E church was chosen a delegate at the Lay Electoral conference by the largest vote cast for any laity candidate. Mr. E.R Redhead of this city presided at the conference as chairman.

Rev. S. T. Dibble has been assigned to Ogdensburg: Rev W. W. Dibble to Vernon Center and Revs. John Richards and S. D. Robinson were returned to Fulton at the unanimous request of their congregations.

The Rev. A C. Loucks was appointed Presiding Elder of the Oswego District.

Annual Report, First M. E. Church.

The annual report of the First M. E. church shows that society to be in a healthy financial condition. It has enjoyed a spiritual growth as well, under the pastorship of the Rev. John Richards. Among the changes contemplated in the church edifice during the ensuing year, is the installing of a magnificent pipe organ and the necessary changes in the architecture of the church to permit such an addition. Andrew Carnagie's gift of $1,500 has been a substantial addition to the organ fund.

Oswego Harbor Breakwater.

On April 14, a committee composed of F. O. Clark, Oswego; N. N. Stranahan, Fulton; Colonel John T. Mott, P. W. Cullinan, Judge Merrick Stowell, J. C. Churchill, Jr., Oswego; Hon George Hall, Ogdensburg; C. H. Bond, R. A Downey, J. B. McMurrick, Oswego, Thomas Hunter, Fulton; and a representative from the Fulton Chamber of Commerce will go to Washington D. C., for the purpose of meeting the River and Harbor Committee and discussing the muchly desired breakwater for Oswego harbor.

The speakers, probably Congressman Knapp, Collector Stranahan, Hon. P. W. Cullinan, and Col. John T. Mott, will go fortified with statistics and arguments why the breakwater, which means so much to the commercial interests of Oswego, should be rebuilt at once. The original River and Harbor bill of this year contained an appropriation for the work, but the measure was held up in committee.

Knights of Columbus Lodge Room.

The Knights of Columbus club rooms in the DeBarber block are the most handsomely appointed and furnished of any of the club rooms in this city The second and third floors are occupied by the lodge and excellent taste has been displayed throughout in the decorations and furnishings. One enters the parlor from the hall at the left, and it is decorated and furnished in wood shades; massive Mission furniture in weathered oak, with bronze leather cushions for the chairs, produces a very homelike feeling. The handsome rug is in the same tints, as are the wall coverings. Several choice pictures adorn the walls and a magazine rack and writing table, all in the weathered oak complete the room. An arch separates the parlor from the "den," which is furnished throughout in the fashionable "Dutch" style. The immense rug on the floor is in green and red, as are the wall and ceiling decorations. Weathered oak, with dull red leather cushions in chairs and on the magnificent settee, and Dutch pictures, wall cabinet and plate glass mirrors make this room an ideal resting place for the members of the order.

One passes from the "den" to the cardroom, which is furnished as are the other rooms with massive furniture; the card table being one of the best samples of the furniture-maker's skill. From the card room to the poolroom one next goes and here is found the best pool table in the city High oak chairs, similar to those in the other rooms, are ranged along the walls and the oak floor is spendidly dressed. The kitchen, which adjoins the pool room, is fitted up with an Ideal gas range and all the articles needed for the serving of a first class spread.

On the third floor is situated the Assembly room, and next week the furniture for this room will be placed. It has been ordered and made especially for the Fulton lodge, as was the furniture and rugs in the different rooms. There is a harmony and blending of all colors and materials used in these rooms, which produces an effect most charming. The members of this prosperous lodge have cause to be proud of the result of their efforts and especially is the committee to be congratulated upon the success achieved. The committee is composed of Messrs. B. J. O'Grady, E. J. O'Brien and C. T. Lynch

ELOQUENT SERMON

Rev. W. C. Hubbard, Grand Lecturer, Addresses Members of Masonic Fraternity in Zion Episcopal Church.

The membe s of Hiram Lodge, No. 144, F. and A. M., and Elizabeth Chapter, O. E. S., attended divine service last Sunday in Zion Episcopal church and listened to a most interesting and instructive address delivered by the Rev. Warren C. Hubbard of Brooklyn, Grand Lecturer of the Order. The service was most impressive throughout. The pastor, the Rev. A. H. Grant, read the lesson for the day, and the vested choir, which is exceedingly well-trained, added materially to the interest, a valuable acquisition being Miss Charlotte David as violin accompanist. Special mention should also be made of the offertory solo by Miss Mabel North, who possesses a sweet soprano voice.

The Rev. Mr. Hubbard selected the following text:

"Hear me, O Lord, hear me, that this people may know that Thou art the Lord God."—I. Kings, xviii., 37.

The prophet Elijah stands alone in the midst of the multitudes; the King is there; the four hundred prophets of Baal are there; the thousands of Israel are there; yet he stands alone. The priests of the unanswering God have wearied themselves into exhaustion; the Prophet of the Most High now prays in the words of our text. I shall not under the present circumstances detain you by any attempt to describe the scene, but rather ask you to consider three qualities which distinguish the prophet under a trial which might well have daunted the bravest and made weak the strongest. First, "zeal for the truth"—is the conspicuous feature in the whole transaction; no self-interest to advance; no bye-ends to serve. To secure the triumph of truth is the great object which has brought him to his present situation, the motive which sustains him under it. Wherever it should point, prepared to acquiesce. Even to subserve the cause of truth he employs no questionable means, resorts to no fraudulent procedure, no crafty devices, no equivocal dealings, but is willing to rest entirely the success of his undertaking upon its consistency with truth. Too common is that exhibition of the infirmity of frail humanity, that when once a man has espoused a cause, and committed himself to it, he will oftentimes appear to be earnest for its success, eager to see it prosper, not so much for the principles at stake, or from any great regard to principle as because he has espoused it—because he has committed himself to it. Such an one to spare himself the mortification of failure will at times stop short of no expedient so he and his cause, right or wrong, may triumph. Not so Elijah. There, single and unsustained, before the king and his courtiers, before the whole assembled nation, he thinks nothing of popular odium, nothing of the withering disappointment, nothing of the mortified failure, nothing of the utter discomfiture, under which his own proposal might prostrate him, but calmly and frankly stakes the issue upon the truth. Another feature eminent in the prophet's character is a strict and jealous regard to the honour of God. And this is a principle indispensable to the one whom I have just mentioned as that is intimately subservient to this. Without regard for the honour of God, zeal for truth is a shallow pretence; indeed without God nothing is true; there is no truth. All that can minister to the well-being of the creature centres in Him and from His eternal truth are derived the principles which secure the right, uphold the dignity, and promote the happiness of man; which bind man to man, and assure peace, good will among all. If I have not a paramount regard to the honour of God, I have reason to suspect I am not disinterested. If I have not a singleness of mind to the glory of God, I have reason to conclude that my aims are selfish, and being so, I shall inevitably deviate from the line of rectitude. When I regard not Him who is truth itself, and necessarily true in all His ways, it is not the truth but my truth which I affect. If I respect not solely and exclusively His will which is just and righteous, it is my own will I consult. In vain do we profess a love for the truth when we shut our eyes to its essence and to its source. In vain may we plead that we are influenced by motives of pure benevolence, that we are cherishing purposes for the welfare of our fellow creatures, if we will not consult the Great Creator of all in what concerns the best interests of His own. The man who foists or forces his crude schemes of philanthropy upon his fellows, irrespective of the teachings and monitions of divine wisdom, has in his own account become wiser than God; and what wonder if he think wisdom shall perish with him. The man who loves the truth and upon its fixed and immutable principles would promote the well being of his fellows, must have recourse to the God of truth and seek His principles and line of conduct in Him, in His word, in His revealed will. So did the prophet Elijah. This is the mighty undertaking to which we behold him addressing himself, is his first consideration, to bring the apostate nation back to their God, to restore them to the ways whence they had departed, to lead them, first to own, then to follow Him. "If the Lord be God, then follow him." Holy zeal for the truth, strict regard to the glory of God, engrossed the whole soul of the prophet and shut out all things else. These swayed all his impulses and left no place for misgivings or intimidation. Again, the conscious rectitude of his principles secured the sterling integrity of his conduct, another illustrious feature in the prophet's character and brightly conspicuous in the present emergency. With him a cause was not righteous or true because it was popular or because it led the way to honours or emoluments, nor only so while it was popular and promising; nor was his own interest the measure of its uprighteousness. So extremely unpopular and unpromising was the cause which he espoused, that we see him standing alone in its vindication, and so little did he consult self-interest that to his personal detriment, yea to the hazard of his hunted life, he spurned the royal favor, fettered with vice, and braved the vindictive wrath of Baal's priests. The king he fearlessly confronted with the charge of treason against God, the populace with their base duplicity to Him, the established priesthood with their mockery of a God. The prophet is a model for our imitation. Let it not be said he was endowed with supernatural powers; that the inspiration of the Almighty dwelt within him and that therefore not so much is to be expected of us as any approach to him. To be sure, we are not expected, we are not required to put in exercise powers which we do not possesss, which are beyond us and without our reach, but that is not the affair. The moral qualities which he displayed, whether in the superhuman endowments entrusted to him, or those of an ordinary kind, are common to all men, and such we are expected to cultivate and to manifest in the use of the talents which are ours Zeal for the truth! Regard to God's glory! Integrity of purpose and practice! These we can cherish; these we can maintain. Upon these we can act and all these are required of us and in these respects Elijah is our exemplar. Says St. James, "Elias was a man subject to like passions as we are;" formed and endowed and with the like infirmities too, as ourselves. Like us, he could have his doubts and be desponding and fearful. In him the instinctive love of life was as strong and the dread of death as abhorent as with ourselves. Yet when duty summoned him, he knew neither despondency nor fear. He rose above them, and strong in his rectitude and in his God, firm for the right he was indifferent to the frown or favor of mortal men, nor swerved from his noble confidence or his stern integrity. The answer to his fervent prayer was miraculous; yet as the efficacy of prayer in his instance is held up to us, so all his virtues are for our imitation as our example and our encouragement.

I consider it a happy circumstance in addressing my brethren of our ancient craft, that Christ has given us so grand a character to contemplate as the prophet Elijah.

These gatherings are days worthy of remembrance, yet they should be days in which we shall not merely exchange fraternal greetings, sweet though they be, but to scan closely our duty and see how near and how far ours approach to it. For Masons have duties if there be Masonry and a God. The same general principles which I have outlined as marking Elijah's character are those which should mark each and every Mason, if he be a true one. Zeal, loyalty, integrity, are those principles, and dear brethren, I must speak plainly as an ambassador of Christ—zeal, loyalty and integrity are too often found wanting in the character of individual Masons, whether they be English or American, Jew or gentile, churchmen or sectarians. Surely zeal belongs to the workmen of the temple. It matters not that the ritual of initiation clusters about the temple of Solomon's erecting, the object of the practical application of that ritual and that initiation is to be found in our day and its opportunities.

There is a temple to be built up within and without ourselves. Its sacred sanctuary within, its cloisters of daily walk without. If a lazy man is to be condemned—no less so is a lazy Mason. Apathy weakens anything and everything. To seek to make Masonry a hive for bipedal drones is to degrade it into a mockery and a sham. It means a great deal or it means nothing. It cannot be dragged from its lofty heights as bearing aloft the Ten Commandments given to man amid the lightning's flash and the roaring of the thunder, to a plane of mediocrity which teaches nothing, leads nowhere, and invites merely to sleep. A society which to-day girdles the globe, extends from pole to pole, speakes all languages, has one hand placed upon an universal duty to God, and the other stretched out to fulfil an universal duty to man, is too noble an institution to harbour parasites or to shelter ease-loving indoleuce. That which has an active God as its head and an active work as its aim, needs and must have members: strong, zealous, untiring, live members. I cannot, I need not take the time to enumerate the duties which Masonry teaches. You know them. You heard them amid the solemnity of your own initiation, and you have heard them again and again since, as you were present at the initation of others. Are you performing them? That is the question which I bid your conscience to ask you! To ask you to your comfort or to your contrition! It is only as you exalt Masonry into a reality that you can rise to your own individual responsibility in the matter. Do not fall into that prevalent error which considers an individual nothing, and an aggregate of individuals the summum bonum of everything. If individuals lived each in the midst of a desert, this might be true, but he who lives where there is one other person generates that wonderful mystery called personal influence, which lives as long as life lasts and moves as long as the earth moves. Each of you is a living link in that great Masonic chain which forms unity and makes possible universality. The strength of each link must be the strength of the entire chain. The constant polish of each link must be the brilliant lustre of the entire chain, and as one link is entwined on either side by another link, so do you form a triple strength, which, says the divine word, cannot easily be broken. So is the individual Mason of the greatest importance to the unity, welfare and reputation of the lodge to which he belongs. An unworthy, false and bad Mason is marked in the community where he lives, and there are many mouths open and many hands outstretched to fling the odium of his di-grace upon the fraternity which has named him with its name. Recognize, then, the fact of your individual responsibility and consequently your Masonic importance. Be zealous! zealous for the good of the craft; zealous that you are known as its firm supporter; zealous that its objects shall be attained—that its divine mission be fulfilled; zealous that what you may do in your lifetime shall serve to strengthen it in the years yet to come, when perhaps the need of it shall be even greater, and its power for good become the blessing of untold myriads of God's children. No less important is loyalty, and I mean by this, not merely loyalty to your lodge, but loyalty to Masonry. The one makes sure the other, and loyalty to Masonry means loyalty to God. To dissever one from the other is to wrench the soul from the body and to insist the body still lives. In my ears are ever-ringing those words which have so many times been uttered to me in my official capacity as I have stood before the Masonic altar to receive the obligations of Entered Apprentics, Fellow-crafts and Master Masons, words which are nothing less than an awful oath made here, but recorded there; "So help me, God, and keep me steadfast." Think of it brethren! The Almighty interrupted in His heavenly avocations, to be called upon as a witness, that a creature of His hands shall be faithful to His obligation. I have heard and administered those obligations hundreds upon hundreds of times, but to this day those words fill me with awful solemnity, as I hear them uttered, "So help me, God," and wonder if the candidate meant or realized the fact that he and God has entered into a solemn compact to help and to be helped. O how the bare thought rings out the charge to loyalty! You and I have knelt upon both knees, both hands placed upon the Holy Bible, square and compasses, and have called upon God to help us to do our Masonic duty. The oath is written in the awful book of God's remembrance! But what against it? Faithful or unfaithful; loyal or disloyal. No one who has failed can shelter himself behind any wall of ambiguity reared upon Masonry's teachings. Her letters patent are the Ten Commandments; her crest is the "All seeing Eye;" her motto "Do this and live." Masonry tells us all, and that very plainly too, that we are to have the God for our God. It is a careless way of reading the First Commandment, "Thou shalt have no other gods but Me," and dismiss the subject with the self-satisfying comment, "Well, I am not anidolater nor a theist," The true reading is no less than this; "Thou shalt have no other gods, but Me, thou shalt have." There is no uncertainty about this understanding of it. It is clear, decided, and even preemptory. Every Mason then must have the God for his God, and more than this, every Mason must see to it that no images carved by hand or fashioned in the mind, shall take the place of that God, or the duty which belongs to Him. There are more idols than those of wood or stone; there are gods of wealth, of fame, of position, of will, of inclination, of selfishness, of indifference, and above all the Czar of all humanity's gods—the great god, self, which blocks up the way between a man and the one true and living God. So that the name of idolater has a modern application even though an ancient meaning. So too does Masonry forbid the taking of God's name in vain. To be familiar with the great ones of the earth, merits and receives the rebuke so richly deserved; to speak coarsely of one's father betokens both vulgarity and heartlessness. I have yet to learn why these rules of good breeding and reverence are to be so carefully and rigorously maintained and the King of Kings and Lord of Lords treated with familiarity and vulgarity, coarseness and heartlessness. So look upon God as Masonry's acknowledged corner-stone. To call Him the Great Architect of the Universe, to plead with Him to help a man to be a true Mason, and then by means of angry or jesting oaths to drag Him into the midst of fury and hate or ribaldry and obscenity, is an incongruous temerity which does not belong to Masonry or to Masons, and gives the strongest "reasons why" for that finale of the third commandment, "The Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh His name in vain." Nor, again, is there any truth or foundation for that oft-repeated and exceedingly foolish declaration that "Masonry is all the religion a man needs," meaning by it that attendance at church and partaking of her sacraments are superseded and made useless by a membership with a Masonic lodge.

Ancient craft Masonry was founded upon the building of King Solomon's temple. For what was the temple built, may I ask? To remain a monument of man's handiwork, beautiful when completed, but its altar bare, its courts deserted and its walls the confines of silence or desolation? Not the temple of the scriptures! It was to be the scene of a daily morning and evening sacrifice, of a continuous priesthood, of a stated, frequent and compulsory attendance of all, and especially of men, under the penalty of being cut off from God's people. Surely modern Masonry, if it teaches the opposite of this, must have wandered afar off from its origin and pattern and must needs have found itself another God than Solomon's Elijah found himself in the midst of those who had forsaken temple, altar and God. But he stood loyal to the truth as a rock stands amid the roar and dashing of the waves which hurl themselves against it, then curl and seethe about it, only to retire unsuccessful and abashed, sullenly growling out their defeat and creeping away very lowly from its foot.

I charge you then, my brethren, with the performance of this duty of loyalty.

AVOID THE RUSH

Secure Your Gas Range

NOW.

Although we have not yet had one single warm day we have already sold this season as many gas ranges as are sold in some places of similar size in a whole Summer.

What Does that Fact Indicate?

It indicates that free piping and ranges at cost, before a possible advance in price, offers an irresistible attraction.

It also indicates that it has become generally known that the hundreds of ranges that have been in use have given universal satisfaction, and that with the advent of the first warm spell there will be a rush of orders that we cannot possibly hope to fill as promptly as many will expect us to.

That's why we have been urging, and still urge, prospective customers (and there are hundreds of them) to secure their ranges before the warm weather actually sets in, for in the filling of orders it should be and will be a case of first come first served.

Remember this offer applies to our present limited stock, which, during one week of warm weather, would disappear like snowballs under a Summer sun.

A Noteworthy Social Event.

The spacious parlors at the home of Mrs. Abram Emerick were filled last evening with 200 guests, who had assembled in response to an invitation of the Fulton Reading Circle to listen to an exceedingly interesting and instructive lecture by Prof. William H. Mace, who occupies the chair of History and Political Science in Syracuse University.

Prof. Mace was introduced to the audience by Mrs. E. R. Redhead, the president of the circle, who stated succinctly the manner and method pursued by the circle in its course of study. Mrs. Redhead also paid a graceful tribute to Mrs. D. W. Gardner, who was a charter member of the circle which had been organized twenty-seven years ago, but who was unable to be present because of the inclemency of the weather and poor health.

Prof. Mace, in a most comprehensive manner, depicted the temper and life of the English-speaking people from the earliest forms of society of which there was any historic trace. He then led his audience up to the regime of the Stuart kings and the principle of divine right which they tenaciously adhered to, the struggle between the king and parliament, the long parliament, the contest over civil and religious liberty, the commonwealth, England and the revolution, the restoration, the resolve of the Puritans to seek refuge in other lands and the founding of the American colonies. Comparisons were also made between the Petition of Right which Charles I. was compelled to sign and the language embodied in the Constitution of the United States.

A most pleasing feature was a vocal duet by Mrs. L. F. Joy and Mrs. H. P. Allen, with Miss Charlotte David as accompanist. Mrs. Joy also favored the assemblage with a solo and was compelled to respond to an encore.

A delightful social session followed the lecture, during which light refreshments were served.

Delegates Instructed for Parker.

The Democratic State Convention which was held in Albany on Monday proved to be very exciting but the delegates were instructed for Judge Parker for President, after a stubborn contest. Attorney Giles S. Piper of this city was selected to represent the 28th District as a Presidential elector, This is a distinguished honor, and the Times congratulates Mr Piper.

Killed by the Cars.

James Barry, aged 49, while walking on the O. and W., R. R., tracks on Saturday, was struck by the New York flyer and instantly killed. The funeral was held from the Catholic church on Monday morning and interment was made in St. Mary's A son who resides in Chicago had been called to this city by the illness of his grandmother, Mrs. Frawley, and reached here a few hours before his fathers death.

REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION

Delegates Directed to Work and Vote for President Roosevelt at National Convention — Enthusiastic Receptions Given Senator Platt and Governor Odell.

The Republican State Convention met in Carnegie hall last Tuesday and named as delegates-at-large and alternates to the National Convention at Chicago: Senator Platt, alternate J. Sloat Fassett; Senator Depew, alternate Louis Stern; Governor Odell, alternate Erastus C. Knight; Frank S. Black, alternate Henry C. Black.

The platform strongly endorsed the administrations of President Theodore Roosevelt and Governor Odell, and the delegates at large to the national convention were "directed to use all honorable means to secure the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt."

Chairman William Barnes, Jr., of the committee on permanent organization, reported the nomination of Representative Sereno E. Payne as permanent chairman and a list of vice presidents representing every district. The nominations were ratified and Chairman Depew appointed William L. Ward and William Barnes, Jr., to conduct Mr. Payne to the chair which was done amid cheers.

Prolonged cheering followed Chairman Payne's speech and Assemblyman Jean L. Burnett, chairman of the committee on resolutions, then read the platform, as follows:

Text of the Platform.

The Republicans of New York, by their representatives in convention assembled, reiterate the devotion to and confidence in the principles of their party. After half a century of existence they felicitate their countrymen upon the truth that the progress of the nation has been accomplished under chief magistrates who have been the embodiment of Republican ideas, and through the wisdom of Republican statesmanship and Republican patriotism in congress.

After four years of Democratic rule, during which the national finances were mismanaged, a deficit created, the industries of the country paralyzed, labor neglected and wages reduced, the agricultural interests ignored, the people, seeking relief from these errors, again invoked the protection of a Republican administration and elected as president of the United States the foremost American of his time, William McKinley.

With his inauguration and the restoration to power of a party pledged to the encouragement of domestic activity, an honest system of finance, and the expansion of our commercial interests, these conditions were reversed. The enforcement of these policies was followed by a renewal of confidence; capital emerged from its hiding place; manufacturing enterprises no longer languished, and the workingmen found employment. An adequate tariff safeguarded the products of the farm from the inroads of foreign agriculturalists, and social and industrial advancement has been steady and permanent.

It is a singular fact that while the nations of the old world were applauding the American government for the magnanimity and high-mindedness with which it disposed of the grave questions which followed the war with Spain, at home the Democratic party was unreserved in its criticism and its predictions of calamity. With imperialism and militarism as its slogan it attempted to mislead the people into the belief that territorial aggrandizement was the ultimate object of the Republican policy. It renewed its assault upon that citadel of our strength, the national monetary system, and offered the fallacy of free silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 as a substitute for the basic principle of the gold standard and an honest dollar, and with numerous mischievous and untried theories of government endeavored to demoralize public confidence and shatter the faith of the people in the party in power. The popular verdict against such teachings was overwhelming and testified to the common sense and loyalty of the American electors.

Confusion of Political Opponents

While we have witnessed the confusion of our political opponents and the repudiation of their candidates and platform, our ranks have been augmented by thousands of patriotic, law-abiding citizens, who, no longer willing to tolerate the declarations and practices of Democracy, have identified themselves with the party of progress and prosperity. In the same spirit that inspired them to embrace Republicanism we welcome them and invite them to co-operate with us for sound government and the perpetuation of justice and right.

The tragedy that deprived the nation of the exalted services of President McKinley shadowed every heart with sorrow, but emphasized nevertheless the truth that though men perish the republic still lives. The work of rehabilitation, inaugurated and successfully carried on by him, and the wise policies which characterized his administration, were taken up by his successor, whose courage in the midst of trying circumstances, and whose ability, honesty of purpose and sturdy Americanism have elicited the admiration and respect of all of our people.

We commend Theodore Roosevelt for the fearlessness and good judgment with which he entered upon the solution of problems of social economy and government. We recognize the rare capacity he has exhibited in meeting all the requirements of his great office. We realize that his official acts have justified the public confidence which is the fundamental factor of his popularity.

Accordingly we endorse the administration of Theodore Roosevelt. Believing in his loyalty to the principles of the Republican party, relying on his devotion to the interests of American citizens, and confiding in his wisdom, his courage and his statesmanship, we hereby direct that the delegates this day chosen use all honorable means to bring about his nomination for president at the national convention to be held in June.

President's Action in Panama.

We endorse the president's action touching the Panama canal. The inter-oceanic waterway, long desired and vainly sought by the great commercial nations, the short-cut from our great centers of commerce on the Atlantic seaboard to Asia and the Pacific islands, and the link that brings our Eastern and Western coast into neighborly communication, a commerce gain for all the world in time of peace and an American necessity in time of war, is at last assured. Through the prompt acts of a Republican president and a Republican congress our national control thereof is secured. The American flag will float over it for ever.

We deplore the absence of the American flag from the high seas and the lack of American shipping in the foreign trade, a condition due to the lack of protection for a once-great and powerful industry that shed lustre and renown upon the nation and helped to save it from destruction in its earlier days of national peril. We favor the enactment of such legislation as shall give the American-built ships, officered and manned by American citizens, the carrying of the larger part of our foreign commerce, in order that the nation shall have both the ships and the men as a resource of defence in time of trouble, and in order that American workingmen may have the building and running of the ships employed in doing our foreign carrying.

We reaffirm our belief that the greatest national issue is the maintenance of prosperity, and we stand squarely for the integrity of the principle of a protective tariff. That principle is required to maintain the highest scale of American wages and the supremacy of the American workshop.

The permanency of a Republican government is based upon a pure and free ballot. We are opposed to either its corruption or its limitation by depriving any citizen of the United States, anywhere, of the right to deposit his vote, except for causes permitted by the constitution. To this end we demand the protection and permanency of all civil and political rights to our citizens, without discrimination as to race or color.

Management of State's Business.

The management of the state's business has been a reflection of the splendid attainments of federal administration. The executive genius of Governor Benjamin B. Odell, Jr., has imparted vigor to every department distinguishing the conduct of affairs by those business-like, practical methods of which he is the conspicuous exponent. A commonwealth, like an individual, must live within its income. The individual who spends more than he acquires invites insolvency, and the state that adopts the same policy must face disaster. For his determined advocacy of retrenchment, of relief from state taxation, his measures of economy and his sagacious regulation of state expenditures, Governor Odell deserves, as he has received, the appreciation and support of the people of New York.

We commend our party representatives in the national legislature. They creditably and loyally represent the great and diversified commercial, industrial and social interests of our state.

The Republican party acknowledges with gratitude the splendid services of the senior United States senator Thomas C. Platt, who for more than a quarter of a century has stood stalwart and firm in the battle for Republican supremacy, and whose leadership has been inspiring and potent in the accomplishment of Republican success.

The Republican party is still committed to those fundamental maxims of the government, in the advocacy of which it had its conception and birth. Its record tells of a fidelity to principle and of a courage to conviction that has been illustrated by no other national organization since the foundation of the government. It has remained steadfast in its ideals, unyielding in its championship of truth. Under its administration the United States has become great and powerful among the nations of the earth.

With this the result, the Republicans of New York extend congratulations to the people of the country and pledge their party to unity, earnestness and work for the maintenance of good government and the continuance of principles which insure peace, plenty and the happiness of the people.

There was some discussion over the fact that these "directions" included only the delegates-at-large, but Governor Odell explained that in this way:

"Since 1880, when we abandoned the plan of selecting the district delegates, the state convention has not, and indeed cannot instruct the district delegates. Those delegates are elected and, if desired, by their home conventions are instructed. This direction of the convention to the delegates-at-large to secure Mr. Roosevelt's nomination is the strongest possible way in which the matter could be put. The word 'directed' is stronger than the word 'instructed.'"

Features of the convention were the enthusiastic receptions given Senator Platt, Governor Odell and former Governor Black, and the applause that followed the mention of the name of President Roosevelt. The direction of the convention to secure the president's nomination was greeted with cheers.

The congressional dispute in the 33rd district between adherents of J. S. Fassett and the present congressman, Gillet, was left practically without settlement so far as the convention was concerned except that the Mongin-Fassett delegation in Seneca county was seated permanently. The controversy over the congressional nomination will have to be decided by the contestants themselves.

The following electors were chosen, their names to go on the state ticket this fall:

1, Brinkerhoff Meyers; 2, Peter Wyckoff; 3, John Drescher, Jr.; 4, Edwin W. Voorhees; 5, Charles E. Teale; 6, ———; 7, Charles R. Banks; 8, James E. Korean Habits.

Both men and women smoke pipes having tiny metal bowls and stems so long that generally assistance must be summoned to light them. As they are inveterate smokers, and their pipes hold so little tobacco that they must be refilled and relighted every few minutes, the greater portion of their time is thus consumed. It is, therefore, safe to say that one of the prime causes of Korea's backwardness in development is the national pipe.

Another cause is the greed and shortsightedness of the imperial policy in seizing and appropriating individual wealth wherever found. Thus all ambition is destroyed, and no native will strive for more than a bare livelihood, knowing that anything he may accumulate over and above that, will be seized by the tax collector.—From "With the Hermits," by Kirk Munroe, in Four-Track News for April.

Political Equality Club.

The social given by the members of the Political Equality Club at the home of Mrs. N. H. Haviland on Wednesday, April 6th, was one of the most enjoyable events in that society's history. The guests were made very welcome by Mrs. Haviland and the musical program was most enjoyable. Flinch was played and an informal evening spent. Refreshments were served.

Miss Arria Huntington's lecture at the home of Mrs. F. E. Goodjon on Friday afternoon, April 8th, was largely attended, a representative audience gathering to hear the talented speaker. Miss Huntington spoke well and interestingly, and all those who were priviledge to hear her, are most enthusiastic in their gratitude to the club for giving them the opportunity.

The county convention was held in Oswego on Monday afternoon and evening, April 11th, and several delegates from the Fulton Club were present. Routine business occupied the major portion of the afternoon session. Dr. Harriet M. Doane was elected President of the county organization, Mrs. H. N. Gilbert, Sectary, and Miss Sinnamon, of Oswego, Treasurer. The National President, Mrs. Carrie C. Catt, spoke before a large audience in the evening and delighted all who heard her, by her charm of mind and manner.

While There is Life There is Hope.

I was afflicted with catarrh; could neither taste nor smell and could hear but little. Ely's Cream Balm cured it.—Marcus G. Shautz, Rahway, N. J.

Cream Balm reached me safely and the effect is surprising. My son says the first application gave decided relief. Respectfully, Mrs. Franklin Freeman, Dover, N. H.

The Balm does not irritate or cause sneezing. Sold by druggists at 50 cts. or mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Sts., New York.

NUT VALUES.

Chestnuts are starchy and take the place of potatoes.

Brazil or cream nuts are very rich in fat and should be blended with pecans, English walnuts or hazelnuts.

Black and white walnuts as well as hickory nuts contain nitrogen and oil, but no starch. Blend with rice or potatoes.

Cocoanuts contain very little nitrogen, but are rich in oil. The fiber is difficult of digestion. The cream and milk are excellent for salads and sauces.

Peanuts are very rich in nitrogen and contain considerable starch and oil. When boiled and mashed they are much better than when roasted and ground.

Almonds are really digesters or appetizers. They are too expensive to be used alone in large quantities. Four or five thoroughly masticated at the end of a meal will frequently aid in the digestion of other foods.—Ladies' Home Journal.

State Association Holds Convention in New York and Listen to Interesting Addresses by Prominent Officials.

strength is derived solely from the fact that he has never said anything, it is clear that he ought not to run the risk of sacrificing his unique position. It is now possible for his friends in all parts of the country to talk for him without the slightest danger of his being called to account for anything they say. His record is perfectly adapted to the purposes to which it is being put. It enables him to be classed as a high tariff man or as a free trader with equal probability. He is the candidate of Mr. Cleveland, the reformer, and of Mr. Hill, the practical politician. He himself voted for Bryan, and the Democrats who voted against Bryan hail him as their star of hope. It is not to be denied that his record permits this, and it is too valuable an asset for a candidate who hopes to be elected by Democratic votes to be frittered away by foolish and inopportune declamation. There are those among Judge Parker's friends who claim, it is true, that he could talk without in any way impairing this peculiar availability, but why should he run that risk?

No spectacle in American politics has been more curious than the rise of Mr. Hearst. It is not accounted for by the mere fact of his inherited wealth. Nor is it explained by the existence of journalistic or political machines. He has rendered no public service which throws light upon it. When, rather less than a year ago, his newspaper began to print little articles announcing that this, that or the other small and unknown political club had declared in favor of Hearst for President, those who saw it simply smiled. But already the Democratic party in four States has indorsed this extraordinary candidacy, and the'e is undoubted sentiment in the Democratic party throughout the country in favor of his nomination. I have been expecting this development, though not in the form in which it has presented itself. No one could foresee Hearst. But every political observer must have perceived that the spirit of socialism had taken possession of the Democratic party and had finally become its one clearly distinguishing motive. I want to impress upon you and, if possible, upon all my fellow citizens, throughout New York, that it makes no difference whether Hearst or Parker be the Democratic nominee, that which gives energy, purpose and character to the Democratic campaign will be the spirit of socialism.

There is no uncertainty in the Republican party either as to its candidate or its principles. If there were uncertainty as to its candidate, there would still be none as to its principles. They are definite and proved. Eight years of consistent and successful administration proclaim and illustrate them. Upon you devolves the duty of bringing them home to the people of New York, of proving their wisdom and of securing to them the support of the voters in your several communities. Nothing can take the place of the work that you will do. Conscience and judgment have always guided the American people in the selection of the high officers of their government, and to these noble monitors the appeal of the newspaper press, earnest, sincere and patriotic, will not be made in vain.

When Senator Platt ended his speech the editors arose in their seats and cheered him for four or five minutes.

MR. DEPEW INTRODUCED.

Senator Depew was next introduced by Mr. Smyth. Announcing that he had been under the doctor's care for a throat trouble, Mr. Depew said:

For the first time in my life I am here not to make a speech. In the the years that Senator Platt and I have been working together it has been he who has done the business and I the talking; but after listening to the speech he has made to-night I think that things ought to be reversed.

As I said before, I am here against the wishes of the powers that rule the world, my wife and my doctor, and I was cautioned that if I did speak I was only to speak in a whisper. But the trouble is that I am not a whispering politican.

I have been going to Republican National and State conventions for forty years, and I have seen many demonstrations given to the public men. The demonstration has sometimes been to the popularity of the man, as in the case of McKinley, and not always to their power or what they have done; but the demonstration I witnessed given to Senator Platt in the convention on Tuesday was the greatest I have ever witnessed, not only for the Senator, but as a demonstration of affection for the man who has led the Repnblican party through so many contests for President and Governor.

Whatever the metropolitan press has had to say about the Senator, there has always been one body of men, though you have chastised him, who have always believed in him, and that is the country editors.

As Senator Depew sat down, after delivering the last parograph of his speech, a voice from the tables said: "Yes, you are right, and we always will."

William Barnes, jr., chairman of executive committee of the Republican State Committee, was next introduced. Mr. Barnes told of his first entry into politics about fifteen years ago, and said that the first time he met Senator Platt was at a State convention, when the contested delegation that he led was thrown out of the convention by the Senator.

John A. Sleicher in a speech referred to President Roosevelt and called him "The man of destiny." The name of the President was received with cheers and handclaps.

BEAUTY HINTS.

Methods by Which to Improve Your Skin, Eyes and Hair.

Greasiness of the skin is an unpleasant condition and is by no means easy to cure. All rich and greasy food should be avoided. The face should be washed in rain water, or, if this be unattainable, in water softened by the addition of borax. The soap used should be of the purest and contain no glycerin. Wash the face occasionally with white vinegar diluted with rose water.

Ask your druggest for an eye wash of camphor and borax and bathe the swollen lids with it every night. The best way to do this is to use an eye cup, which can be obtained at any drug store and costs only a few cents. Fill the cup about half full with the wash, then fit it over the eye and hold it in that position, throwing the head back and opening the eye to receive the wash. It takes some effort of the will to do this until you are used to it.

If your hair is in a serious condition nothing but persistent effort will bring it back to health. Every night you must massage the scalp thoroughly with vaseline. This will bring back the natural oil as well as promote growth. Brush the hair and scalp thoroughly once a week to remove the natural accumulation of dust and dandruff. In combing and brushing be as gentle as possible so as not to waste the hair. Shampoo once a week with green soap. Avoid oiling your hair. Simple treatment is the best.—Pittsburg Press.

THE MAID OF ALL WORK.

A Lack of System Will Make Her Tasks Doubly Hard.

A maid of average ability should be able to do the housework for a family of three in a clean, orderly manner without friction, especially when the home is supplied with numerous labor saving conveniences. Do not, however, expect a maid to sweep and scrub all day and supplement the exertion by serving a five course company dinner at 7 o'clock, for one or both efforts will result in a failure, no matter how strong or willing she may be, says the Indianapolis Journal. The source of most trouble in the domestic household is lack of system. If a maid has a method of her own which enables her to perform the required services in a satisfactory manner it is usually wise not to interfere with her plans. If, however, she lacks system have a friendly talk with her, pointing out how her work may be planned so that it may be done properly and leave her some time for rest and enjoyment. If she is a sensible girl this will appeal to her, and she will likely fall into your way of working. After having decided upon a system which best accords with the household insist upon each duty being performed on the day allotted to it unless something quite unforeseen occurs to prevent. If at any time you are without a maid and must do your own work apply this same plan yourself.

AROUND THE HOUSE.

Smear the glass stopper of a bottle with vaseline and no matter how long it stands unopened it will not stick.

Scraps of wax candles melted with an equal quantity of turpentine make an excellent polish for hardwood floors.

It is said the sirup or cream will not drop from a pitcher on to the tablecloth if the nose of the pitcher is rubbed with butter.

When a needle requires the services of an emery, do not rub the point any more than necessary after inserting it unless you wish to blunt it.

To clean the nickel plate on stoves polish with air slacked lime. It will shine like a mirror. If any spots are obstinate use a piece of fine sandpaper.

After the dust of sweeping day has settled, wipe your windows and mirrors with a piece of chamois wet in warm water and wrung out until just damp. It leaves the glass perfectly clear and shining.

A Woman's Success.

Embroidering baby clothes was my first financial venture. I was a very ambitious housewife and wanted money for some new things for the house, so I began by embroidering little sacks, for which I charged $1.50. For the more elaborate ones I received $2. White broadcloth coats with large collars brought $3, and at the end of a year the amount footed up to $260. The work was dainty and fascinating, and my friends and acquaintances were quick to take advantage of the opportunity to secure hand wrought pieces for their wee tots. I bought a pattern of the size for the age of the baby and followed the directions given with it for the making. My customers furnished their own materials, which relieved me of any outlay in money. As the articles made were all white, they had to be kept spotless and required extreme care in the handling.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Training a Daughter.

To train her daughter in courtesy the mother must begin at a tender age. The twig is so easily bent that it scarcely resists the guiding hands. Even with this training the girl may, when half grown, come to a stage when self assertion shows itself and when she feels that it is quite the thing for her to force herself upon people's attention. All growing things have their trying age. But this, too, will pass away, and if the girl has started right there is not much difficulty in inducing her to believe that she and all her affairs are not of paramount importance to the public at large; that gentleness and consideration command more love and popularity than self assertion and carelessness of the concerns and whims of others.

STORY OF AN ESCAPE

AN INCIDENT OF THE CHICAGO IROQUOIS THEATER HORROR.

The Way a Woman and Her Two Children Were Saved From the Hurricane of Flame and Panic by a Stranger Who Was Intoxicated.

All great conflagrations that are attended with loss of life have, as a rule, their serio comic as well as their tragic incidents. Many peculiar escapes have been recorded, but the following story of how one woman and her two children were saved from death in the awful horror of the Iroquois theater in Chicago, where so many hundreds perished in the hurricane of flame and panic, as told by Miss Elizabeth A. Reed in the Chicago Record-Herald shortly after the fearful tragedy, is unique in many ways:

Mrs. Henry Stirling, with her two children, sat in the fateful Iroquois theater on that dreadful afternoon. Little Bob was next to the aisle, then the mother, and Dorothy sat on the other side. Beyond the six-year-old girl there was a vacant seat, but little heed was given to it as the spectacular drama went on and the wondering little folks looked open eyed upon the scenes before them.

At last an uncertain step came down the aisle and a well dressed man lurched into the vacant seat. The curtain was up, but he was an old theater goer, and as the extravaganza was not entirely new to him he turned to the child. Her confiding blue eyes answered his appeal for friendship; there was wonder in the expressive little face, but no fear, even when he ventured to lay a caressing hand upon the golden curls.

Mrs. Stirling shrank from his contaminating touch upon Dorothy's head. He saw or felt her loathing and said brokenly, "Don't you be 'fraid—ish all right—all right—sweetish li'l girl ever I shaw—sweetish li'l girl ever I shaw."

The gay drama went on, the crowd cheered, the children clapped their hands, and their merry laughter mingled with the applause, but the stranger still kept his bleared eyes upon the lovely child. Every few minutes his hand would stray lovingly over the sunny head and some expression of endearment would fall from his uncertain lips. At last Mrs. Stirling called the attention of an usher to the prolonged annoyance, and a remonstrance was made, but the answer came, "You go way—ish all right—all right—sweetish li'l girl ever I shaw—sweetish li'l girl ever I shaw."

Again the big hand touched the golden hair, and this time it strayed downward and took the little hand in loving clasp. The child looked fearlessly into his face and smiled.

The mother grew more and more nervous. Again an usher was called and a complaint made. The slender young man looked at the big fellow and concluded that prudence was the "better part of valor," so he went to consult with another about effective methods of getting the intruder out of the house.

The stranger looked at the stage again; this time he saw a tiny flame rapidly spreading to the scenery. Rising instantly, he took little Dorothy in his arms. Stepping beyond the mother and unheeding her frightened remonstrance, he swung the child upon one shoulder and with the other hand caught up little Bob; then with both of them pressed closely in his strong arms he walked out of the house. The doubly frightened mother involuntarily followed him.

This precious instant was the moment of salvation. Another minute—another half minute—and it would have been too late. They had nearly reached the entrance when a cry of horror rang through the house, followed by screams of terror and shrieks of pain.

Without further volition of their own they were swept into the street. Wholly dazed by the awful shock Mrs. Stirling pleaded, "Put them down—put them down now!"

"No, thash all right. Where do you want to go?"

"Right up this way to the Ashland block," she answered. Then the strange party pushed on through the crowd which was already rushing with helping hands to the scene of the disaster.

Lurching from one side of the walk to the other and apparently in constant danger of falling, he still carried his precious burden safely. Once within the protecting doors of the great Ashland block the elevator carried them to one of the higher floors, where Mrs. Stirling rushed into her husband's office cryng, "Oh, Henry, the theater is burning, and this man has brought the children out!"

Although not half comprehending the horror, the father put his hand in his pocket and drew out a twenty dollar bill, which he offered with profuse thanks. But he and his money were alike ignored. With a majestic sweep of the hand the drunken hero answered, "Go way—I don't want your money—go way—thash all right—thash the sweetish li'l girl ever I shaw—sweetish li'l girl ever I shaw," and then he staggered out of the office.

Correct Address.

"Isn't Columbus dead, pop?"

"Why, certainly he's dead, years and years and years ago. What put such a question into your head, my son?"

"Why, the little boy what sits next to me in school said his father addressed a letter to Columbus yesterday."

"Where did he send it, son?"

"To Ohio."—Yonkers Statesman.

HIS FIRST CHECK.

The Way the Piece of Paper Worried Thomas A. Edison.

Thomas A. Edison once told a friend the story of his first acquaintance with any big sum of money. It was when he was struggling with his earlier inventions, and he had about as clear an idea of the value of a bank check as the man in the moon. He had finally sold his patent on the gold and stock indicator to the Western Union Telegraph company and had called at its office to close the deal. After a few preliminaries he was given a check for $40,000. He eyed it curiously and appeared to be puzzled what to do with it. Observing his perplexity, General Lefferts, then president of the Western Union, told him that if he would go to the Bank of America, in Wall street, he could get the cash on his check.

"So I started," said Edison, "after carefully folding up the check, and went toward Wall street. So uncertain was I in regard to that way of doing business that I thought while on the way that if any man should come up to me and offer me two crisp $1,000 bills for that piece of paper I would give him the check very quickly."

On his arrival at the Bank of America he half tremblingly shoved his check out to the cashier. The latter scrutinized it closely, gave him a piercing glance and said something which Edison, being hard of hearing, failed to understand. That was enough. He was fully convinced that his check was not worth $40,000 and again thought as he rushed out of the bank that any man who would give him $2,000 for it could have it. He hurried back to the office of the Western Union and said he could not get any money. A clerk was sent to the bank with him to identify him.

"This man," said the clerk, "is Mr. Thomas A. Edison, to whose order the check is drawn."

"Why, certainly, Mr. Edison," said the cashier. "How would you like your money—in what shape?"

"Oh, any way to suit the bank; it doesn't make any difference to me, so long as I get my money."

Edison was given $40,000 in large bills. After dividing the roll into two wads of $20,000 each he stuffed one into each trousers pocket and made all speed out of Wall street. The next day he began work on his first New York laboratory.—Success.

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

THE NECESSARY MAGAZINE IN THE PRESIDENTIAL YEAR

The Review of Reviews is often called a necessity, in recognition of its usefulness in keeping readers "up with the times."

In Presidential election years the REVIEW OF REVIEWS is more than ever "the necessary magazine." Everybody wants to be truly and quickly informed about this or that public question that has forged to the front; to know about the new candidates and personal factors in politics, to have a complete picture at hand of the current movement of history.

In Dr. Shaw's editorials, in its authentic and timely contributed articles, in its brilliant character sketches, in its condensations and reviews of all the important articles of other magazines, and in its hundred a month of valuable portraits, witty cartoons, and interesting views, the REVIEW OF REVIEWS gives the much desired news of the world's and our own progress. "The World under a Field-glass" is the way one subscriber describes it.

Men in public life, like President Theodore Roosevelt, the members of Congress, and the great captains of industry, who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided it is "indispensable."

A Substitute For Latin.

In an English school recently a certain boy was regularly absent during the hour in which Latin was taught. The teacher called upon the boy's father, at whose instructions it had been learned he remained away, and asked for an explanation. The father said: "It is all right. During the Latin hour I am teaching Jimmy something that he will find far more useful than Latin in his progress through life." The teacher was interested and asked what this subject might be. The father replied, "I am teaching my son how to shave without a looking glass."

Ate Their Gods.

The gods of most South America tribes of Indians are generally looke upon as sacred, but when the gods be come a nuisance it is time to put a end to them; at least, that is what a certain tribe along the Zabari rive think. They worship the iguana and monkey, but as soon as the iguana started eating chickens they though it time to stop worshiping him an to eat him in place of the chickens h had eaten. This they do, and they pre fer iguana stew to chicken fricassee.

The Elect of Boston.

I can remember when it was jocosely said of some families of Massachusetts that they claimed to have had, in the time of Noah's deluge, a boat to themselves, and I can recall, on the other hand, when a social aspirant in Boston asked, "Who belong to the really old families, grandmamma?" and when that relative shook her weary head and said, "Mostly no one, my dear."—Thomas Wentworth Higginson in Atlantic.

THE CASPIAN SEA.

One of the Remarkable Physical Features of the Globe.

One of the most remarkable physical features of the globe is the deep and wide depression in the hollow of which stands the Caspian sea and near to it the sea of Aral. The Caspian is nearly as large as France, and its surface is eighty-four feet below the level of the Black sea. The sea of Aral is nearly as large as Ireland and is very little over the sea level. Within recent geological times the vast expanse in which these lakes are found was sea. Its floor has been gradually raised, and the waters filling the depressions are all that is left of an ancient Mediterranean. A strange feature of both bodies of water is that although they receive large rivers, especially the Caspian, into which the Volga, the Ural river and scores of streams from the Caucasus flow, both have for many years been getting shallower. Evaporation, for they have no outlet, exceeds the inflow. But, for some climatic reason probably, the sea of Aral and its neighbor, Lake Balkhash, have since 1891 been increasing in depth. Whereas the Caspian, like the Dead sea, is very salt, owing to the rate of evaporation, Aral and Balkhash are brackish only. These remnants of what was once a great sea opening into the ocean, as the Mediterranean does now, still contain marine fish and seals. Some of the latter survive in the Aral and Baikal lakes, having gradually become fitted for their habitat, though it is no longer salt, but merely brackish, and, in the case of Baikal, actually fresh water.—London Telegraph.

SECRETARY WILSON says it is the farmers who make the country rich; that in 1901 our farm exports amounted to $900,000,000—$3,000,000 for every working day; $125,000 an hour; $2,000 a minute, or $33 per second.

THE charges of heresy which were preferred against Dr. Borden P. Bowne of the M. E. Conference, have resulted in a practically unanimous vote of acquittal. Dr. Bowne is perhaps one of the most eminent theological and philosophical scholars that the church has produced and he is to be congratulated upon his vindication.

THE re-election of Col. John T. Mott as State Committeeman, has given eminent satisfaction to his many friends in this district, which also embraces Lewis and Jefferson counties. Col. Mott enjoys a more that local reputation for being a stalwart Republican and one who is ever keenly interested in the success of the State and National nominees of the party.

Amendment to City Charter Rejected.

A special meeting of the Common Council was held on Saturday evening for the purpose of giving the public an opportunity to be heard on the proposed amendment to the city charter. The measure was discussed by the members, the Democratic Councilmen determining that they had adopted the previous resolution, instructing Assemblyman Lewis to introduce the measure, under a misunderstanding.

The following resolution, introduced by Alderman Russell, was adopted, Aldermen Dilts and Brown voting in the negative:

Resolved, That the Common Council of the City of Fulton does not approve of the bill passed by the Legislature of the State of New York and entitled "An act to amend the charter of the City of Fulton relating to repairs of sidewalks and the paving of streets." Said bill also known as Assembly bill No. 1157 and introduced by the Hon. T. D. Lewis.

DIED.

Julia Gleason, aged 18, died on Saturday at the home of her mother, Mrs. John Gleason after a brief illness. Her father was buried last week and the doubly bereaved family is receiving the sympathy of their friends. The funeral services were held from the Catholic church on Wednesday morning and interment was made in St. Mary's.

Mrs. Melisa A. Smith, aged 84, died on Wednesday at the home of her daughters, in Cayuga street after a long period of ill health. The deceased was born in Lenox, Mass., and came to Volney with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Zenas Clark, when she was 8 years of age, coming from Albany on the packet boat then running from Albany to Oswego. They settled on the farm now owned by R. H. Holenbeck four miles east of Fulton. She was educated at the Fulton Female Seminary where Miss Maynard, now Mrs. George Salmon, was Principle and where the foundation for many lovely and worthy characters was laid. Mrs. Smith was brought up by a christian mother and early in life she was baptised in the Presbyterian church and was all her life a consistent, conscientious christian although she never became a member of the church. She was united in marriage on March 12, 1844 with Harvey W. Smith, and they removed to the Smith estate at the Sixteenth school district near where they lived until coming to make their home with their daughters in this city in 1857. She was the motner of five children, one dying in infancy and a son, L. E. Smith, who died in 1900 in Baldwinsville. Three daughters, Mrs. Helen Carrier and Mrs. Ida Walker of this city and Miss Belle Smith of Syracuse survive to mourn the loss of a loving mother. Two grandchildren, the Misses Mabelle and Bertha Smith of Syracuse also grieve at the demise of one who was more than a friend to them. She was essentially a home-lover and was never happier than when dispensing hospitality to her friends.

The funeral services were held on Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock from her late home, a large number of friends attending. The Rev. A. H. Grant was the officiating clergyman. Interment was made in the family lot in Mt. Adnah.

REPUBLICAN EDITORS

State Association Holds Convention in New York and Listen to Interesting Addresses by Prominent Officials.

Members of the Republican Editorial Association of the State of New York were the guests last Wednesday evening at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York, of Senator Thomas C Platt, who gave a dinner in Parlor DR, in their honor.

At Senator Platt's right was William A. Smyth, editor of The Owego Times, and ex-president of the association. To the left of the host sat William Barnes, Jr., of The Albany Evening Journal, and Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Republican State Committee. At the table with them were Senator Chauncey M. Depew; A. O. Bunnell, of The Dansville Advertiser, secretary of the association; Louis McKinstry, of The Fredonia Censor, the new president of the association; Elias Vair, of The Waterloo News; Charles S. Munger, of The Herkimer Citizen; J. P. Herrick, of The Bolivar Breeze, and Henry K. Williams, of The Dunkirk Observer. Some sixty other editors were grouped about tables in the room.

SENATOR PLATT'S ADDRESS.

When cigars and coffee had been served, Senator Platt arose to address his guests. He said:

It is not often that the opportunity has come to me to talk at one time to so large and representative a body of newspaper editors as has honored me with its company to-night. If I take advantage of this unusual occasion to be frank and reckless of speech, you will not fail to consider, in that spirit of toleration so characteristic of your profession, that it is the one privilege left to a newspaper reader to believe that he could run the paper much better than the editor does. In common with all the rest of your readers, I have often entertained that consoling reflection, though compelled to admit that my imagination had its limitations and my conscience its moments of tenderness. But for these deficiencies I might have become a member of your noble profession, for there has come over me now and again an intense desire to publish a few of my humble opinions. This desire has been especially acute when I have read what certain editors were saying about me, and have realized what I knew about them.

I never could understand what Job meant when he wanted his enemy to write a book. The easy access to printer's ink, which some of my enemies have enjoyed, has done much to darken an otherwise gladsome life. Not that I fail to appreciate the glories of a free and untrammelled press; it is the terror of tyrants and the scourge of the evil-doer. When one tries to say all that he really thinks about the liberty of the press, rhetoric fails him. And if it happens, as it sometimes does, in the lives of good men, that they can't come down to their breakfast tables any morning and pick up any newspaper without finding there whole columns of what they have not said, are not doing and have never thought of saying or doing, fastened irrevocably upon them, to their bewilderment and dismay, they are in sore need of rhetoric. Rhetoric, indeed is their only recourse.

Somewhere in "The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" Dr. Holmes remarks upon the different personalties which engage in every conversation between two individuals. He finds as many as six. There are John as he really is, John as he thinks he is and John as James thinks he is; then there are James as he really is, James as he thinks he is and James as John thinks he is. Here is large room, we must admit, for mistake, misconception and misunderstanding. But I think that Dr. Holmes left out of this group two other personalties, the most disturbing of all. They are John as he wants to make James think him and James as he wants to make John think him. These two are very different from all the others, the most inscrutable and perplexing of all. So, when an editor sits down to write a piece about one of his fellow-creatures, out from is pen there flow, not only the facts he thinks he knows, but the motive he wants the public to believe he entertains and the motive which, consciously or unconsciously, he really entertains. It is a mistake to think that editors are in all cases and at all times divinely inspired Once in a while, at least, they are moved by the same human considerations that enter into the hopes and fears of other men.

I have heard it said that the people do not take their opinions from the newspapers as unreservedly as they used to, but I think they do. There is, indeed, a more general and complete dependence on the part of the public upon the newspaper press than has ever before existed, counteracted, however, by a more effective political and social organization. Precisely the same agencies that have contributed to the efficiency of newspapers have brought individuals into closer association, and have rendered organization for all purposes more effective. When newspaper sentiment and organization are both working to a common end, the highest power that can operate in human affairs is evoked. No other harmony is of much value, no other discord much to be feared.

If Republican prospects are bright to-day, it is because in administration and in lawmaking the spirit of the Republican party has been so faithfully reflected that its newspaper press and its organization can work heartily together. The writers and the workers are united. The educational agencies of the party and those on whom the burden falls of bringing out the careless, the indifferent and the unwilling voter are resolute [illegible] purpose.

New York will be the great battlefield in the campaign of 1904. I have no confidence in plans to carry the country that do not include New York. Democrats, whether they are in favor of professing or suppressing the faith that is in them, look with one accord to New York to find their candidate. Their differences relate to the character of their candidate, not to his status. Their quandary is to discover whether it is better to try to throw dust in the eyes of the public by the choice of a sober-minded, highly respectable gentlemen, who can stand anything and stand for anything, or to try to unite all the elements of social discontent upon a candidate who frankly favors disorder and socialism. In either event they are looking to carry New York.

I approve of Judge Parker's plan not to say anything until he is nominated. When a candidate's political

Who Will Shoot the Squirrels?

"Let the boy have the gun and if possible let him learn to handle it. The squirrel who is eating the seeds out of the pears in the garden is fair game to start with. If he learns to shoot at the right thing in the right season never mind if he also learns to hit what he shoots at. The boy who has learned to handle a gun is the kind of a boy who knows when a gun is loaded and does not shoot his little brother by mistake, nor get the lockjaw from a toy pistol on the Fourth of July."

The above argument is along the line of that advance by the J. Stevens Arms & Tool Co., Chicopee Falls, Mass., makers of the famous "Stevens." "Equip the boys of the country with the Stevens rifle." says their catalogue, "and you will be the means of ridding the surrounding country of every flying and running nuisance that the farmer tries in vain to scare away by other means. And the boy will have his fun while doing it."

SAND BINDING.

Fixation of Wandering Dunes and Reclamation of Seacoast Lands.

By A. S. HITCHCOCK.

The question of sand binding on the coasts for the reclamation of now useless areas is receiving considerable attention of late. Sand hills or dunes occur along a sandy seacoast. The sand is constantly washed up by the waves and when dry is readily carried inland by the wind. Under the action of the wind the sand accumulates in ridges or hills of irregular contour and extent, depending upon the force and direction of the prevailing winds.

A typical wandering dune presents a gradual slope toward the wind and an abrupt slope on the lee side. The wind forces the sand up the slope, and it falls over the edge. The hill or ridge then travels in the direction of the prevailing wind at a rate depending on the force and constancy of the latter. Such a hill is called a wandering dune. As the dune recedes from the coast a new one may form at the beach. Upon the wandering or active dunes the sand is shifting to such an extent that vegetation does not establish itself.

The sand dunes of any considerable extent are rarely found along the seacoast in warmer regions, because the long growing season is more favorable to vegetation.

In many cases the wandering dunes encroach upon arable land, upon forest, upon valuable property, such as railroads and buildings, or upon rivers, harbors or other waterways. This usually indicates that there has been a recent change of conditions resulting in the formation of active dunes. Seaside resorts upon sandy beaches are often seriously damaged by the formation of dunes and blowouts upon various portions of the property.

There are large areas of sandy land consisting of dunes in various stages of fixation interspersed with portions of level and sometimes arable land. These level spots represent portions where the wind has swept away the sand down to moist soil, which usually has a definite relation to the water level. Such areas of dunes may include many square miles and are useless for agricultural purposes. It is thus seen that the fixation of dunes may be for two purposes—to protect property in the lee or to convert a useless area of waste land into a productive forest.

Fixation is most permanent when the dunes are covered with forest; hence forestation is the ultimate aim wherever possible. When the work of fixation is completed there will be a forest over the greater part, but a strip along the coast remains which must be permanently held in place by some other method, usually by the planting of grass.

Many methods have been employed at various times for binding the sand, but those now in use on a large scale are three: First, transplanting sand binding plants upon the dunes sufficiently thick to form a living cover; second, covering the entire surface with some inert material which prevents the wind from reaching the sand, and, third, covering the surface with a network of brush fence, which, while not preventing the wind from reaching the sand, lessens its velocity and prevents drifting.

Potato Blight.

According to the New York experiment station, potato blight has been very destructive in New York state during the past two seasons, and growers are considering more earnestly than ever before the feasibility of adopting some means of prevention. For years scientists and investigators have held that the diseases responsible for far the greater part of what is called "blight" are largely preventable and have advocated the use of bordeaux mixture as an easy, cheap and practical remedy for these diseases. As a result of spraying by five farmers an increase of sixty-one and a quarter bushels per acre was shown. In a test at Geneva there was a gain of eighty-three bushels to the acre for three sprayings and 118 bushels from five sprayings. On Long Island the gains were thirty-nine and a half and fifty-six bushels per acre from three and five sprayings respectively.

SOIL FERTILITY.

A Lively Interchange of Opinions Between Agricultural Scientists.

Bulletin No. 22 of the bureau of soils has been made famous by the attacks of agricultural scientists and the enterprise of the press of the country. Perhaps the most vigorous critic is Dr. C. G. Hopkins of Illinois, who in a recent address before the Association of Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations expressed the opinion that bulletin No. 22 "is commonly understood and certainly intended to mean that the use of farm manure, the growing of clover and other leguminous crops as a source of nitrogen or the application of bone meal or other fertilizers has little or no tendency toward permanent soil improvement and that even the effect which they do produce is due very largely if not entirely to improved physical condition of the soil, which effect, the bureau of soils believes, can be better obtained by 'a simple rotation and change in cultural methods,' and the statement is added that 'the effect due to cultivation is also more permanent than the effect due to fertilizers.' "

Professor Cameron, writer of the bulletin, now replies to the critics through Science. As to Dr. Hopkins' statements, he finds them "utterly at variance with the complete context and plain meaning of the bulletin." Professor Cameron says: "That the authors of the bulletin fully recognize the importance of the proper use of fertilizers is made perfectly plain by the following quotations:

" 'There is no question that in certain cases, and in many cases, the application of commercial fertilizers is beneficial to the crop. The experience of farmers, the enormous sums expended for commercial fertilizers and the many experiments carried on at the experiment stations prove that under certain conditions fertilizers are very beneficial in increasing the yield of crops. The fundamental idea under all this work, however, has been that of supplying plant food in an available form; that is, adding to the supply existing in the soil.

" 'It is significant that other conditions of growth have so much influence on the yield that in but very few instances, even after long continued experiments, has it been demonstrated that any particular fertilizer ingredient or ingredients are required for any particular soil and that even then the effect of the fertilizer varies so greatly from year to year that no specific law has been worked out, even for a particular soil, from which the fertilizing requirements could be deduced in any exact manner.' "

Potato Rosette.

Rosette of the peach has become familiar to fruit growers in Michigan of late years. Now the Ohio farmers and truckers are becoming acquainted with rosette of the potato. There is also a tomato rosette and a rosette of forcing house lettuce.

An efficient means of potato rosette prevention and one easily applied is the treatment of the seed potatoes before planting by immersion for two hours in a solution of formalin containing a pound of formalin in thirty gallons of water. The Ohio experiment station in recommending this treatment says it has increased the average size of tubers and has also reduced the proportion of the crop having fungus upon the tubers.

The Wet Weather Potato Disease.

A potato disease which appears to follow wet weather prevailed extensively in the fall of 1903 in several counties in Minnesota and was reported more recently from Michigan and from Maryland. It is characterized by a hard, black stain running in from various parts of the surface of the tuber, often involving nearly the whole tuber and seldom more than one centimeter deep. The losses in Minnesota amounted to thousands of dollars. It is thought that early digging would have prevented much of this.

Leaf Blight In Sugar Beets.

Where leaf blight has been prevalent in sugar beets in Michigan it has been noticed that the disease was much less severe where beets did not follow beets and also where the ground had been well fertilized with ashes, the strong, vigorous plants possibly being better able to resist.

"Let the dreaded gypsy moth of Massachusetts once enter the cotton belt and the cotton weevil as well as the planter will starve," said J. F. M. Farquhar before the Massachusetts Horticultural society, "for the gypsy moth loves cotton."

A DATE PALM ORCHARD.

Arizona's Attempt to Establish This Interesting Feature.

The Arizona experiment station is making a serious and apparently successful effort to establish date culture. Of all the recent investigations, now so popular, in the adaptation of tropical and subtropical fruits to this country this is one of the most interesting. According to the station's report, the older part of the orchard, consisting of an importation from north Africa planted in July, 1900, prospered satisfactorily last year. A few weak trees succumbed, but the average growth was vigorous. The number of new suckers increased from 321 to 422, sixty trees blossomed, and four varieties—Rhars, Deglet Noor, Amari and Arechti—produced fruit. Varieties from Egypt were planted in 1901 and from Arabia and Baluchistan in 1902.

While 277 out of 676, or 41 per cent, of the trees have died, the remaining 59 per cent include sixty-eight out of eighty-two varieties, or 83 per cent. Taken as a whole, therefore, the work thus far has been fairly successful in the establishment of varieties, but from a commercial point of view the loss has been heavy.

Allowing a loss of 40 per cent, it costs under favorable circumstances not less than $4 each to deliver twenty-five pound suckers from Africa in that region.

Because of such a cost of importation and the desirable character of many of the native seedlings many would prefer to plant seeds in the expectation of obtaining a small percentage of good, fruit bearing palms therefrom. The seeds may be made to grow promptly by first stratifying them for three or four months. This consists in burying them under about twenty inches of well drained moist sand or sandy soil and keeping them moist for the time stated. They will then be well softened and, being planted, will sprout promptly instead of waiting weeks or months before appearing above ground. Very alkaline ground should not be used to start seedlings, which are much less resistant to salts than mature trees.

The date palm scale has not yet appeared in the Tempe orchard, indicating the extermination of this menace to the palms by the hydrocyanic acid gas fumigation employed when the palms were received. A new enemy has been noted during the year in the burrowing "gophers" so common about irrigated fields. These creatures, encountering the succulent roots of the palm underground, follow them clear into the tree, oftentimes eating out the center, with fatal results. These depredations have been noticed only in sandy ground, which these animals most inhabit. The date palm orchard being on heavy soil has thus far escaped.

Good For the Dairymen.

Delavan, Wis.—Established in Walworth county, in one of Wisconsin's best dairy sections, is a new factory for the production of "milk powder" by the cold process reduction of milk. The company's propositions, as outlined to a meeting of several hundred farmers held lately at Delavan, promises well for the farmers. It is stated that at the New Hampshire factory of this company 2 cents a pound more than the market price for butter fat has been paid to patrons and that the company will pay the farmers here on a basis that equals the Elgin butter price, besides 20 cents a hundred for the skim milk as it comes from the scales. A new feature also will be the collection of the milk by the company in its own wagons sent out for the purpose.

A Farm Hands' Union.

Farm hands in Franklin county, Ia., have formed a union. Object—an eight hour day, $30 per month, with board and washing and some smaller additional items.

News and Notes.

State and national aid for the improvement of roads was an important topic at the good roads convention, and Senator Latimer of South Carolina made a strong address on national appropriation.

It was maintained by a farmers' institute speaker at the Kaukauna (Wis.) roundup that the sugar beet is very exhaustive to fertility of soil, and a system of crop rotation must be followed.

"Plant thick, but thin quick"—one of the wise sayings in forestry.

It is predicted by some of the close observers that more Irish potatoes will be planted this year the country over than ever before.

Indiana is agitating for better roads. Individual farmers, farmers' institutes and Purdue university are all interested in a movement to ask the legislature for improved roads.

A "bumper crop" seems to be the general expectation among the New England maple sugar makers.

The newly formed New England Grain Dealers' association, with headquarters in Boston, purposes to work for better freight rates and improved handling of western grains and feeds. Jay Chapin is the secretary.

True to His Friends.

An answer to an advertisement for a school assistant "capable of teaching the classics as far as Homer and Vergil" makes one of the best stories in the dean of Bristol's book, "Odds and Ends."

"Sir," the answer ran, "with reference to the advertisement which were in the Times respecting a school assistant, I beg to state that I should be happy to fill that situation, but as most of my friends reside in London and not knowing how far Homer and Vergil is from town, I beg to state that I should not like to engage to teach the classics farther than Hammersmith or Furnham Green, or, at the very utmost distance, farther than Brentford."

THE WEIGHT OF MONEY.

Deceptive Appearance of Metal as Well as Paper.

"The weight of money is very deceptive," said an employee of the treasury. "For instance, a young man came in here one day with a young woman. I was showing them through the department and happened to ask him if he thought the young girl was worth her weight in gold. He assured me that he certainly did think so, and after learning that her weight was 106 pounds we figured that she would be worth in gold $28,647. The young man was fond enough of her to think that was rather cheap.

"Another thing that deceives many people," he continued, "is the weight of paper money. Now, how many one dollar bills do you think it would take to weigh as much as one five dollar goldpiece?"

On a guess the visitor said fifty, and the clerk laughed.

"I have heard guesses on that," he said, "all the way from 50 to 500, and from men who have handled money for years. The fact of the matter is that with a five dollar goldpiece on one scale you would only have to put six and one-half dollar bills on the other scale to balance it.

"The question afterward was put to several people and elicited answers all the way from 20 to 1,000, the majority guessing from 300 to 500.

"Taking the weight of gold coins and bills given at the treasury, it was figured that a five dollar goldpiece weighs .296 of an ounce avoirdupois. The employee at the treasury who handled the paper money said that 100 bills weigh four and one-half ounces. That would make one bill weigh .45 of an ounce, and between six and seven bills would balance the goldpiece.

On the proposition of how much money one can lift, figures were obtained at the treasury. Where certain numbers of coins were placed in bags and weighed as standards, for example, the standard amount of gold coin is $5,000, which weighs 18½ pounds. Five hundred silver dollars weigh 35½ pounds, while $200 in halves, or 400 coins, weigh eleven pounds.

Two hundred pounds of coin money of various kinds is made up as follows: Silver dollars, $2,617; half dollars, $3,636; quarter dollars, $3,657; dimes, $3,615.80; nickels, $917; pennies, $295.61.

In one dollar bills the same weight would amount to $71,111.—Washington Star.

Weak Hearts

Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.

Mr. D. Kauble, of Nevada, O., says: I had stomach trouble and was in a bad state as I had heart trouble with it. I took Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for about four months and it cured me.

A Cold In the Head.

A hydropathic treatment of a cold in the head is more reliable than any other. It is as follows: In the morning after rising and at night before retiring wash the feet and legs as high up as the knees in cold water, then rub them with a rough towel and massage them till the skin is red and glowing. In addition to this cautiously snuff tepid water up the nose frequently during the day and sip with a teaspoon a glassful as hot as can be borne an hour before each meal and at bedtime. A few days is often quite sufficient for simple cases and obstinate ones yield if the treatment is prolonged. No medicines are required. If taken in the first stages of the disease a cold is broken up which might otherwise become a severe case of bronchitis, lasting many days or weeks.—Chicago News.

Her Test.

An Oregon newspaper man says he was once traveling in the back country of Oregon, and, going to a little inn for lodging, was surprised to see a large picture of Dr. Edward Everett Hale on the wall. The woman of the house explained it thus: "Well, you see, a good many strangers come here and want me to keep 'em, and I don't know anything about 'em, but if they know Edward Everett Hale's picture I know they're good for something and I let 'em stay."

Taking Desperate Chances.

It is true that many contract colds and recover from them without taking any precaution or treatment, and a knowledge of this fact leads others to take their chances instead of giving their colds the needed attention. It should be borne in mind that every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality, makes the system less able to withstand each succeeding cold and paves the way for more serious diseases. Can you afford to take such desperate chances when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds can be had for a trifle? For sale by H. C. Giesler.

The April American Boy.

The American Boy for April presents a front cover that will attract boys, it being a striking picture of a young Indian. And who has a better right to claim to represent young American, after all, than the Indian boy. The stories in this number are The Silver Mine, by Harriet Prescott Spofford; The Blue Dragon, by Kirk Munroe; Three Yankee Boys in Ireland, by the Editor, and Arty's Guardian, by Geo. H. Coomer. The editor in his "Just Between Ourselves" page talks of various things boys are asking about, some serious, some playful—but always interesting. Sullivan, head of the Department of Physical Culture for the World's Fair writes on Athletics at the World's Fair. J. Harrington Keene gives the closing chapter of How to Make Fly Tackle. Kyosui Inui, a Jap student in the University of Michigan, tells his views of the Russo-Japanese war. Hopton W. Hadley describes the game of Pushball. Walden Fawcett writes of Young Art Students. Part six of How to Become Strong teaches a boy how to sit and to sleep. Charles E. Dvorak, champion pole vaulter, tells boys how to do it. James G. Card, a Cleveland high school boy, writes of a trip he made to Washington, representing his class, to study the Government Day Allen Willey writes of the Boston High School Cadet Brigade. Then there are all the regular departments with the hundreds of items about the Order of the American Boy, Photography, Home, Church and School, Money Making, Debating, Stamps, Coins and Puzzles. 76 Illustrations. $1.00 a year. The Tomato.

The tomato has a curious history After the revolution of Santo Domingo many French families came from there to Philadelphia, where they introduced their favorite "pomme d'amour." Although introduced from South America as early as 1596 into England, it was looked upon with suspicion and its specific name, lycopersicum, derived from lykos (wolf) and persikon (a peach), referring to the beautiful but deceptive appearance of its fruit, intimates pretty closely the kind of estimation in which it was held. It is now, however, almost universally used.

Good for Children.

The pleasant to take and harmless One Minute Cough Cure gives immediate relief in all cases of Cough, Croup and LaGrippe because it does not pass immediately into the stomach, but takes effect right at the seat of the trouble. One Minute Cough Cure is pleasant to take and it is good alike for young and old. Sold by H. C. Giesler.

Many a man lays the foundation of his misfortune by knowing too many things that are none of his business.

Serious Stomach Trouble Cured

These tablets are guaranteed to cure every case of stomach trouble of this character. For sale by H. C. Giesler.

Have the Desire.

Make up your mind to be educated and you are already half educated. A strong desire to be or to do any particular thing, accompanied by effort, multiplies your power and throws wide the door of opportunity that leads to the accomplishment of your purpose.—Success.

SOFT CORE

Like the running brook, the red blood that flows through the veins has to come from somewhere.

The springs of red blood are found in the soft core of the bones called the marrow and some say red blood also comes from the spleen. Healthy bone marrow and healthy spleen are full of fat.

Scott's Emulsion makes new blood by feeding the bone marrow and the spleen with the richest of all fats, the pure cod liver oil.

For pale school girls and invalids and for all whose blood is thin and pale, Scott's Emulsion is a pleasant and rich blood food. It not only feeds the blood-making organs but gives them strength to do their proper work.

The Age of Hurry.

There is no backwater to which this impetuous tide of hurry has not penetrated, and if we try to find one wherein we may lie in a punt on pink cushions under a tree we are certain to be made restless by the long single hoot of a fussy steam launch or the short double one of a tearing motor car and instead of lying still we jump up and cry: "Oh, wait for me and take me! I'm in a fearful hurry to get there and do it with you!" And when we are taken in and have recovered our breath and are well on our way there to do it, we remember to ask where we are bound for and what we are going to do!—A Countess in London Outlook.

A Back Action Joke.

The traveling men of Maine are noted for the jokes that they are always springing on the public, but recently one of them got into trouble in an unexpected way. His parents celebrated their golden wedding, and the drummer had long planned to spend the day with them. But when the day arrived he found that he was too far from his old home to get back to it, so he sent a telegram to his father. He thought that it was a good time to get off a joke on the old man, so he merely sent the message, "Is marriage a failure?" He was somewhat taken aback when he got the reply, "Marriage is not, but the results sometimes are."

Held Bible and Rudder.

Some years ago Japan was neither so free nor so friendly with other nations as she is today. In those old days, when a foreign ship entered the Japanese ports, the captain was obliged to place his Bible and rudder in charge of the chief officer of the port and leave them there until he was ready to sail. Of course he wouldn't sail without either, and the Japs could easily keep tabs on the movements of all ships in their harbors.

I charge it upon your Masonic honor. If you are true Masons you are builders for God and under God, of His holy temple. Find yourselves in it as members of it; not without it as its belittlers or revilers. If you call God your father, go to that father's house as you would have your sons and daughters come to yours. If He is your father, speak His name with at least the same reverence and devotion which you expect and demand from your own children. Break down every wall of partition between you and the Almighty. What sort of builders can you be if you separate yourselves from Him by all possible means, never study the designs upon His great trestle-board, never seeking His will or His commendation, never calling upon His name save in cursing and oaths, never knowing the secret password which shall gain your admittance into the Holy of Holies, the sanctum sanctorum? What will all your Masonry avail you when the Great Architect shall demand of you, not the number of your lodge, but the stones which you have fashioned in loyal service for that spiritual building, that house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens?

Lastly, look to your integrity. Zeal is sometimes without discretion. Loyalty is often felt and shown only for things or persons without. Integrity finds its root and life within. It is the consciousness of the inner being. Elijah was jealous and loyal because he knew he was in the right. You must be a Mason, not only by the vows and appellations, the signs and grips and words (all of which are in a sense without the man), you must be a Mason within; a Mason in theory as well as practice; in intent as well as in manifestation; in the spirit as well as in the letter; in the daily walks of life as well as in the communications of the lodge; in the privacy of your inmost life before God as well as in the public confession of it before men.

Let the sublime teachings of Masonry be your guide and practice in all things; have duty to God upon your right hand and duty toward your neighbor upon the left. Then perform them because you know them to be right for you to do to others as well as that others should do unto you. Practice to the utmost that excellent gift of charity toward all mankind, but look well to the things which make or mar your own life. Remember that it is not Masonic to fashion it for the eye of man, but for the eye of God, who "sees not as man seeth." With the germ of a pure Masonic life planted within your very soul, then go forth to your duty and stand, as did Elijah, a witness to the truth, steadfast to the end. I am very grateful to my Reverend Brother, the Rector of Zion church for this opportunity to speak to so many of [illegible] Masonic brethren. I am conscious [illegible] more gifted member of our [illegible] might have charmed you [illegible] gifts of oratory and of eloq[illegible] I could not forget that I [illegible] of God, ordained to speak [illegible] and truth. Will you not bear with my plainness of speech, being assured that my heart has spoken in love for our art and with an earnest desire in an humble way to do you good? I am your brother; ye are my brethren; He is our Father; this is His temple. I have stood in it before Him and you and spoken according to the words of the prophet Elijah. He prayed, "Hear me, O Lord, hear me, that these may know that thou art the Lord God." I pray, "May the God of Peace, who brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus Christ, that great Shepherd of the Sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in every good work to do His will working in you that which is well pleasing in His sight."

in waiting a week on your tailor, when you can come here and walk off with a suit that fits as good as any "merchant tailor's," and embodies the snappiest styles and the handsomest materials?

Then think of the variety you have to select from. What merchant tailor can lay before you such a varied assortment from which to match your individual preference?

Added to all this, the price is very much lower than you would have to pay the tailor. Have you any objections to saving the difference?

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Regular Quarterly Session. Business of Importance Transacted -- Opening of New Street Proposed.

The Chamber of Commerce met in regular quarterly session last Wednesday evening and was presided over by President E. R. Redhead who stated that he retained the office of president because Mr. John Hunter, who had been duly elected at the annual meeting, declined to serve owing to the pressure of business engagements. At a subsequent meeting, the Board of Managers had insisted on Mr. Redhead's retaining the office for another term, and he had reluctantly consented because of a strict sense of duty, realizing that the existence of the Chamber of Commerce was vital to the best interests of the city, and on a distinct understanding that he would not be called on again to serve in like capacity.

Mr. Redhead, as chairman of the committee on a new post-office building, reported that he had communicated with Congressman Knapp in regard to the project and had received the following reply:

Mr. E. R. Redhead, president Chamber of Commerce, Fulton, N. Y.

My dear Mr. Redhead: I am in receipt of your communication of recent date relative to a new government building for your city. In reply, permit me to say that I will most gladly do anything that I can to accomplish the desired result. The situation, however, is this. There will be no Public Buildings bill passed at this session of Congress providing for any new work. Two years ago I introduced and re-introduced at this session, a bill providing for a new post office building in the city of Watertown, which is greatly needed on account of the dangerous condition of the present structure. That bill is before the committee, and I anticipate the committee will make favorable report on it at the next session of Congress, which convenes in December. In view of that, you will readily see that this bill would of necessity have to take precedence; a fact which I know you and the people of Fulton will appreciate and approve. With reference, however, to the building at Fulton, I will very gladly introduce at the next session a bill providing for that building, and during the Summer you had better send me such statistics as to what is needed there and the probable cost of a site, etc., as will enable me to frame a suitable bill for this purpose, and make presentation of its merits to the committee. You can be assured that I will do everything possible to accomplish the desired result.

Very sincerely yours,
CHARLES L. KNAPP.

Mr. Thomas Hunter, who had recently returned from Washington, stated that Congressman Knapp and he had discussed the post office building project. He was convinced that Mr. Knapp would do everything in his power to accomplish the wishes of the committee. It was agreed to give the committee an extension of time. The committee is composed of Messrs. E. R. Redhead, J. W. Rigley, G. B. Fairman, Thomas Hunter and J. C. O'Brien.

On request of Mr. D. S. Baldwin, Attorney W. S. Hillick called the attention of the Chamber to the blockading of Leitch street by the Lackawanna Railroad. Mr. Baldwin's grievance was that the action of the railroad almost prohibited his doing business at his planing mill and lumber yard, which was situated on the street west of the railroad. A letter had been received from the railroad officials denying that a crossing had ever existed at the place designated, but this proved to be erroneous. Mr. Hunter, as president of Board of Public Works, agreed to look into the matter and straighten it out. Mr. Baldwin alleged that unless immediate relief were obtained he would be compelled to remove his plant. Mr. Redhead thought it was the duty of the Chamber to follow up the matter and secure the relief asked for.

Several communications were read by Secretary B. W. Bennett from out-of-town parties, seeking new locations for their plants. Many of these companies required a subscription of stock and other inducements. The communications were referred to the Committee on Manufactures.

The necessity for the opening of a street between First and Second, and Rochester and Broadway, was presented on resolution, introduced by Mr. G. G. Chauncey, which read as follows: "That the Chamber of Commerce reque-t the Board of Public Works to give favorable consideration to the subject of opening a street through the property known as the Fish estate, between First and Second and Broadway and Rochester streets, immediately south of the Episcopal church." There was a concensus of opinion that such a street was an absolute necessity, and Mr. Redhead, in obedience to a resolution, appointed the following committee to circulate petitions and secure the necessary signatures from taxpayers: Messrs. G. G. Chauncey, F. H. French, George Johnston, F. J. Switzer and A. W. Wiltsie.

Mr. Redhead asked what was being done in the matter of installing a sewerage system for the west side, and Mayor Foster replied that surveys had been made and the plans were now in possession of the State Board of Health for their approval and acceptance. It is now thought possible to begin the work of costructing sewers before the Summer season closes.

On motion, the Chamber adjourned.

NOT THE LUCKY MAN.

The many friends of Charles D. Lathrop, formerly of this city but later of Russia, where he is agent for an American farm machinery manufacturing house, will be pleased to learn that he is reported to have struck it rich—and right in his cellar.

The report states that some time ago Mr. Lathrop concluded he would build a house in Russia and had a force of men excavating for a cellar. While at work, they struck an iron vessel and informed their employer of the discovery, and he immediately took charge of the find. The following day he opened the vessel and found that it was a queer shaped jar, full of gold coins, quite old, but of value and worth in the neighborhood of six thousand dollars.—Patriot.

The foregoing item has been copied in several papers in this vicinity and also by the Syracuse Post-Standard, The TIMES knew that Mr. C. D. Lathrop was not selling farm machinery in Russia, but was employed in a large publishing house in Hartford, Ct., and paid no attention to the alleged fortunate incident. A communication has been received from Mr. Lathrop, denying that he is the lucky man, and adding: "The only pot of gold that I have located, is the one at the foot of the rainbow. I have not reached it yet but expect to about the time I realize on this Russian discovery."

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS.

Oswego County Organization Holds Annual Session and Listens to Able Addresses.

The Oswego County Sunday School Institute held its annual session in the First M. E. church last Thursday. There was a large attendance and the meeting was called to order by the Rev. C. N. Thorp, president of the County Association, and brief devotional exercises were conducted by the president and the Rev. C. H. Jones. Reports were read by Mrs. R. C. Turner of Oswego and Mrs. Julia A. Bidwell of Mexico. In the absence of Mr. H. L. Howe, Mr. H. L. Stout of this city gave the statistical report for the year.

"The child and the religious life" proved a most inte e-ting feature of the afternoon session. Mrs. R. C. Turner and Miss Jessie Scott Himes of Oswego delivered instructive addresses, and the Rev. Anthony Peterson of Mexico conducted an inspiration service. "The emphasis upon spiritual education" by the Rev. Parley P. Wormer of Mexico was a special feature of the session.

Four simultaneous conferences were held. The Rev. C. S. Savage of Oswego led a meeting for pastors in the choir room. Mr. John Hunter of this city gave eminently practical suggestions to superintendents in the chapel alcove. Mr. E. R. Redhead conducted a large class of adults and intermediate teachers in the chapel gallery, and Mr. R. C. Turner of Oswego, in the primary room, led the "Round table for primary workers."

An especially interesting feature was the teaching of the Sunday-school lesson by the Rev. A. F. Schauffler, D. D., of New York, president of the State Sunday School Association.

During the afternoon session Miss Mabel Hodges of this city delighted the assemblage with a cleverly rendered contralto solo.

Dinner and supper were served in the Presbyterian Church. While the supper was in progress, a quartet composed of Messrs. H. A. MacFarland, B. W. Bennett, C. M. Allen and N. H. Gilbert rendered choice selections, and during the evening session in the First M. E. Church, Dudley Buck's Te Deum was most appropriately sang by the Presbyterian Church quartet under the leadership of Mr. N. H. Gilbert.

The evening session began with a praise service and an address of welcome by the Rev. John Richards of this city. This was responded to by the Rev. C. N. Thorp of Oswego.

An excellent address was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Schauffl r on "The importance of detail in Sunday school work."

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President, Rev. Charles N. Thorp, Oswego.

Corresponding secretary, H. L. Stout Fulton.

Treasurer, Watson A. Butts, Fulton.

Recording secretary, Miss Adella Albring, Hannibal.

Secretary home department, Mrs. Julia A. Bidwell, Mexico.

Secretary primary work, Mrs. Raymond C. Turner, Oswego.

Delegate to State Convention, Rev. C. N. Thorp; alternate, Rev. C. S. Savage.

Mexico was selected as the place of meeting.

The State Sunday School convention meets at Auburn, June 14-16.

Last Meeting of the Season—Club will Be Continued Next Fall and Winter. Election of Officers.

The meeting of the Current Events Club last Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Redhead, closed for the season a most interesting and instructive series, which the membership have found extremely enjoyable. The Rev. James Vincent, D. D., and Miss Dugin were the leaders. Dr. Vincent discussed foreign matters of importance, while Miss Dugin led the discussion on events which had transpired in this country.

Dr. Vincent, in his prelude, congratulated the membership on the successful completion of so instructive a series and hoped for a continuation of the existence of the club next season. He then reviewed the war in the far east; the entente cordiale which existed between England and France over the countries where they had suzerainty; the recent views of a celebrated English divine on the infallibility of the bible and vicarious atonement; the acquittal of Dr. Bowne by the M. E. Conference on a charge of heresy was also discussed.

Rev, W. L. Sawtelle, by request of Miss Dugin, gave a resume of the proceedings of the State Legislature and the important measures adopted, while Mr. Redhead reviewed the Mueller law recently enacted in Illinois and its relation to home rule and municipal ownership of transportation facilities, etc, in cities.

Miss Dugin gave a concise and comprehensive discourse on important happenings in this country, and a very pleasant reference to recent eulogies in influential English papers regarding American institutions, especially the educational features.

At the conclusion of the program it was decided to continue the sessions of the club next Fall and Winter. The following officers were elected:

President, E. R. Redhead; vice-president, John Hunter; second vice-president, Mrs. H. B. Emens; secretary and treasurer, W. E. Hughes.

Executive Committee—Mrs. George Chauncey, Mrs. E. R. Redhead and Mr. H. J. Wilson.

Prof. B. G. Clapp of Albany was present and acted as chairman.

The treasurer's report was read and accepted.

An adjournment was taken until the first Monday after the Fall election.

Rummage Sale.

The rummage sale at Mrs. Babcock's, No. 311 Rochester street, will be continued for two days longer.

"I Want My Range Put In At Once."

Although up to this date the season has been a backward one, it is safe to conclude that the very near future has in store for us some very warm weather. With its coming is certain to come a rush for gas ranges—this one, that one, and the other one will want his or her range put in "at once," something that will be quite impossible when the busy season really sets in, for we make it a rule to fill orders in turn and must in fairness to all adhere to that rule.

During the past few weeks we have in our advertisements pointed out what is to be expected—have gently urged intending purchasers to at least secure their ranges before other peoples' orders pile up on us—our note of warning has reached the ears of many and has, to a considerable extent, been acted upon, still, there are many, very, very many, who, for no good reason, are holding back, and who, if they delay until warm weather drives them to us, are doomed to disappointment as regards prompt service.

When They Are Sold.

There is another reason why this gas range matter should receive your prompt attention. It lies in the fact that our stock is getting low, in fact the $12 line is now very low. We sell these ranges at cost, they are regular $21 ranges, while they last you can buy them for $12, but when this lot is sold we do not know what we will have to charge for the next, we may have to pay more for them, therefore may have to charge more for them, that remains to be seen, you know what you can do now, but neither you nor we know what you can do later. Certainly you cannot do better.

Best Cough Medicine for Children.

When you buy a cough medicine for small children you want one in which you can place implicit confidence. You want one that not only relieves but cures. You want one that is unquestionably harmless You want one that is pleasant to take. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy meets all of these conditions. There is nothing so good for the coughs and colds incident to childhood. It is also a certain preventive and cure for croup, and there is no danger whatever from whooping cough when it is given. It has been used in many epidemics of that disease with perfect success. For sale by H. C. Giesler.

Pretty Customs of Japan.

Japanese ladies are like the French in their love of social intercourse and conversation. They pay fewer visits, but stay infinitely longer, always two or three hours and sometimes a whole day. They are received by the maid, who places a large silk cushion for them to rest upon, and much time is spent in detailed inquiries concerning each other's family. There is no special calling day in Japan. They visit when their fancy takes them, and they never go empty handed to a friend's house. The gifts are usually fruit or flowers or perhaps a fresh fish, and whatever they take is always daintily wrapped in a little box of paper or wood.

SPECIALISTS FAILED; CAL-CURA SUCCEEDED.

One Bottle of Dr. Kennedy's NEW Medicine, Cal-cura Solvent, Cured Mr. Fuller of Bladder Trouble.

"My case is so remarkable that I want to tell you all about it. I suffered from bladder trouble for about 25 years, and had tried all the doctors about here, and also some specialists in New York, without getting any help. Last August I bought a bottle of Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. Kennedy's new medicine. I had not been able to work at my trade (boiler making) for some time, but after taking one bottle of Calcura Solvent, I began work and have been working ever since. Cal-cura Solvent has done more for me in a month than all the doctors did in 20 years, and I don't complain of the doctors."—Martin Fuller, Matteawan, N. Y. All druggists, $1.00.

If the child does not attend school as required by the law, the district is likely to lose all its public money.

Every person in parental relation to a child between eight and sixteen years of age, in proper physical and mental condition to attend school, shall cause such child to so attend upon instruction or shall present to the school authorities of his district proof by affidavit that he is unable to compel such child to so attend.

A violation of this section shall be a misdemeanor, punishable for the first offense by a fine not exceeding $5 and for each subsequent offense by a fine not exceeding $50, or by imprisonment not exceeding thirty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

There are some especially charming outdoor features, such as "Porch-Parlors in the New South," "An Interesting Family of Racoons," "A Home-Made Water Garden" Mrs. Low's cooking articles and Miss Gould's "Fads and Frills" are as timely as always, and the fiction includes a strong Mennonite story by George Shook, a delicious Irish story by Seumas MacManus and a love-story by Julia Truitt Bishop. DEPEW STRIKES THE KEYNOTE Stirring Speech of New York's Junior United States Senator as Temporary Chairman of the New York State Republican Convention at New York City April 12, 1903.

The Republican state convention was held at Carnegie hall, New York, on Tuesday, April 12. Senator Depew was unanimously elected temporary chairman and received an ovation as he was escorted to the chair by the committee appointed for that purpose. The senator captured his audience at the start and was followed closely to the end. He spoke as follows:

Gentlemen of the Convention—I thank you for the distinguished honor which you have conferred upon me. The Republican party of the state of New York assembles in convention confident and aggressive. It is unanimous and enthusiastic in the support of its issues and its candidates. Since we last met, four years ago, death has removed the great leaders of that campaign. McKinley, the best loved of presidents [applause]; Hanna, the most extraordinary organizer and political leader of our period [applause], and Thomas B. Reed, who rescued the house of representatives from chaos and by his genius enabled it to transact public business [applause]—all fell in the prime of life and in the midst of their usefulness. Leaders may die, but the great party which followed them, after worthy tributes to their memory, passes on to grapple with and solve, as it has ever done, the problems which always arise in free governments, and to solve them in the interest of the people. [Applause.] The party of Lincoln and of Grant, of Hayes and of Garfield and Arthur, of Harrison and of McKinley, of Seward and of Blaine, leaves the memory of its great statesmen who have departed to the tender care of a grateful country. Their fame and their achievements are part of the best history of the republic. They have the singular record in partisan politics of receiving now an almost unanimous verdict from all parties that the measures which they promoted and which were enacted into laws were most beneficent and useful. [Applause.]

We bivouac only for the night and with the dawn take up our march to win and confirm still further and necessary factors, financial, industrial, commercial and colonial. Our opponents say that we must be judged in the coming campaign by the record of the McKinley and Roosevelt administrations. We accept the challenge, whether it be in what we had done or propose to do, or in meeting the as yet undecided issues and unknown candidates they promise. [Applause.]

There have been glorious decades in our national story from 1860 to 1900—saving the union, emancipation, reconstruction, the resumption of specie payments—all of which loosened the energies of the American people and bent American genius and industry to the development of our resources. The far seeing mind and the courage of our business men, the skill of our artisans, our farmers and our miners, have placed us in the front rank among the producing nations of the world. In the midst of prosperity never before equaled, of employment, markets and opportunities never before possessed, we tried the experiment for four years of a new policy. From the ruin which involved us all we emerged under McKinley and Roosevelt. [Applause.] Not only that, but more, we have repaired the disasters from 1893 to 1897. We have opened the closed factories and mills; we have built up new industries and removed every trace of the devastations of semi free trade and unsound currency. [Applause.] The distress from putting into legislation false theories may be greater in our commercial and industrial age than those which followed in the track of armies in former generations. The task of the Republican party when it came into power with McKinley and a Republican congress was to remove handicaps upon American enterprise and energy and furnish the bases for prosperity. The enactment of the Dingley law and the gold standard of value, in the wonderful results which followed in the south as well as the north, in the east as well as the west, was a fitting close to the contributions made to the greatness of our country and the happiness of our people by the Republican party from 1860 to the close of the nineteenth century. [Applause.]

There was one other measure required to enable the people to take advantage of conditions brought about by the Dingley tariff and the gold standard. A large proportion of our business men and corporations had gone down under loads of debt which could never be lifted during the panic times from 1893 to 1897. We cleared the way for them to take advantage of the situation by the enactment of a general bankruptcy law, a law which has not been a vital necessity at the close of any Republican administration. [Laughter and applause.]

It is the best tribute to the prosperity resulting from the measures which came after 1896 and to the inherent honesty of American business men that nine-tenths of those who were compelled to take advantage of this remedial measure have since, in their abundant success, paid principal and interest of their indebtedness. [Applause.]

But the nineteenth century closed, not only with phenomenal prosperity, not only with the balance of trade in our favor greater than the accumulated sum of all our previous history not only with the farmer, the manufacturer, the artisan and the worker happy and hopeful, but with all this accomplished notwithstanding a foreign war. In ninety days the conflict was over, and the republic was facing new and untried problems. It had the unrest of Cuba, which had lasted for three hundred years, upon its hands, the poverty of Porto Rico and chronic insurrections in the Philippines, but today Cuba holds an honorable place among nations, Porto Rico is lifted into healthful and prosperous conditions, insurrections have ceased in the Philippines, and their ten millions of people, with singular unanimity, are eagerly acquiring American education, liberty and law. This has been brought about by President Roosevelt. [Applause and cheers.]

The problem of four hundred years seemed about to be settled and the two oceans united by the canal across the isthmus. With the growth of our Pacific coast states and the possession of our islands across the ocean and the trade of the orient, the building of this canal became a necessity of paramount importance. All other measures dwindled into insignificance compared with the opening of this highway. The situation was intense and the changes dramatic. Colombia proposed to the United States a treaty called the Hay-Herran treaty, naming the terms of the concession and asking for its ratification by the United States. The French canal company conceded to the modification of their proposal which our commission had recommended. The accomplishment of the desired result depended only upon the formality of the ratification by the Colombian congress of the treaty proposed by their dictator and accepted by the United States when he had under the explicit terms of their constitution full power to make it. But the dictator, now president, had congress called together for that purpose and saw a superb opportunity of a holdup in the necessities of the United States. Day after day the warning went forth from Bogota from the representatives of the department of Panama and to Bogota from Panama itself that if the treaty was rejected Panama would reassert the independence which had been violently taken from her eighteen years ago.

The Colombian congress in their territorial isolation and subordination to their dictator and president failed to comprehend the gravity of the situation. While this treaty, the most important document in their history, was pending in their senate and house they adjourned for a day to have read to them the sonnets which had been written by one of their poetic deputies. [Laughter.]

The occasion, however, was not one for verses to Venus and the situation not an opera bouffe, for Theodore Roosevelt was president of the United States. [Applause.] When Panama fulfilled the threat known to all the world for months and successfully accomplished her revolution the president acted within his constitutional privilege with the directness, courage and wisdom characteristic of his whole public life. [Applause.]

He was under the mandate of a law passed at the last session of congress which authorized the purchase of the French canal properties, which appropriated $10,000,000 for immediate purposes and authorized the secretary of the treasury to borrow $130,000,000 more, which directed the president to make the terms for the building of the canal and then to begin. If he failed within a reasonable time to secure the concession, then he was to turn to Nicaragua and Costa Rica. But without any intervention or action on his part in the kaleidoscope of politics common to the Latin nations of Central and South America, the opportunity was presented, and he seized it. He might have let a war go on between Panama and Colombia; he might have commenced fruitless negotiations with Nicaragua and Costa Rica; he might have transferred the whole question to congress, weakly abandoning his executive responsibility, but the mandate of the American people was upon him to build the isthmian canal, and the congress by the unanimous vote of the senators and members of the house of representatives on the Republican side and a large number of senators and members of the house on the Democratic side have affirmed the wisdom and the constitutionality of his course. [Applause.]

It is an interesting question, Where have those of the opposition been during these epoch making times and where are they now? They were against the gold standard of value and some of them are still. They were against the tariff and all of them are now. They opposed our holding Cuba and insisted upon its immediately receiving independence when the wisdom of McKinley said, "We will take the time necessary for the Cubans to learn after three hundred years of tyranny the primary lessons of representative government and liberty. In the meantime we will by sanitation remove from our own country the peril of yellow fever which has so often come from Cuba and devastated us." [Applause.] Now they admit we were right. They proposed free trade to Porto Rico, which would have pauperized her and made her a beneficiary of the United States treasury. But the Republican majority devised a tariff of limited operations which has placed that island in a condition of prosperity never before dreamed of by its people. [Applause.]

They were opposed and are still to the retention of the Philippines, while the Republican administration has sent there a thousand schoolteachers, has spent millions in opening roads, has reclaimed the land from the orders upon a fair understanding and adjustment and then transferred it to the people under the operation of our wise homestead laws. The moneys spent in the Philippine Islands which have been of such incalculable value in the development of their resources and for the employment and wealth of their people have come from a taxation on themselves which has not been felt because of their prosperity. Under the Spanish rule all the taxes went to Spain. Under the American rule all the taxes are spent upon and for the people of the islands. The lessons of representative government of liberty and of law are being learned more rapidly among the tribes of the archipelago than among any such people ever before, and the peace and happiness which prevail are lessons in colonial administration to the governments which have been ruling colonies for centuries. [Applause.] The opposition stands for negation and allegation. Instead of having a live programme to present to the American people which will intelligently promise an improvement of existing conditions they are looking for issues among the debris and the scaffolding thrown aside by the Republicans after their beneficent structures have been completed. [Applause.]

I sat on Saturday in the house of representatives listening to the widely advertised "keynote" speech of the eminent orator from New York, Mr. Bourke Cockran. It could not be otherwise than eloquent and attractive from so distinguished a source. It received the unstinted applause of his Democratic associates. In lurid language he pictured the downfall of representative government from the usurpations of President Roosevelt; he told how the house of representatives, the sole authority for revenue bills, had been ignored by the executive and how the tyrannical precedents which had at times overthrown the English house of commons were revived in our age; he pictured the tyranny of Henry VIII., and he brought Cromwell and his soldiers in for the dispersion of parliament; he told the speaker of the house that unless this was instantly resented liberty in the United States had breathed its last. [Laughter.] I confessed to some alarm until I inquired what was the tyranny which had inspired such a magnificent defense of the palladium of our liberty. I discovered it was that the president, following the example of President Cleveland, had by executive order fixed the limit of partial and total disability for the veterans of the civil war. [Laughter.]

Mr. Cleveland and his commissioner of pensions had interpreted the pension act of 1890 to mean that it was within the power and the duty of the executive to state the age for partial and total disability when the veterans could receive a pension without examination. Cleveland had fixed total disability at seventy-five; Roosevelt had revived the tyranny of Henry VIII., had marched with Oliver Cromwell at the head of his army into the house of representatives and dispersed the members to their homes and arrested the calcitrant minority by reducing by executive order Cleveland's seventy-five years for total disability five years, or to seventy. [Laughter.] As I left the capitol with the pictures painted by this despairing eloquence and the appeal to the courage of the house to reassert its rights ringing in my ears I leaned apprehensively against the foundations of that superb structure, but found them still quite firm. [Laughter.] With his usual directness, and acting, as usual, under the advice of his attorney general, and the precedents heretofore established, the president cut the inextricable tangle of legislation and gave to the old soldiers, whose ability for manual labor had been impaired by age, the privileges of pension laws passed at the demand of a grateful people. [Applause.]

We are told that in this campaign the Democratic party will be united and that the differences which occurred in 1896 and 1900 will be healed. The eminent doctors who are diagnosing the disease and prescribing for the patient to bring about this result are the conservative President Cleveland on the one side and the radical William Jennings Bryan on the other. [Laughter.]

Mr. Bryan's prescription is the same as was administered in 1896 and 1900, free silver at 16 to 1, while Mr. Cleveland's is tersely expressed when he says, "Return to sanity." If Mr. Bryan's policy is adopted, then the business interests and the labor of the country will have no more to do with the ticket than they did in the two previous campaigns. If Mr. Cleveland's advice is adopted, which admits that the policy of his party in 1896 and in 1900 was insanity and its candidates were lunatics, how can we be assured that the return to reason is permanent, or when once in the possession of the goods they may not play crazy tricks with the assets of the country? [Laughter.]

In the senate last week a distinguished Democratic senator was put forward to make the keynote speech for the campaign in that body. He was surrounded by Senator Gorman, the leader, and all the wisdom of the minority. His speech was an assault upon President Roosevelt for his usurpation in the recognition of the Panama republic and in his pension order and a statement that the Democratic party would put forward at their convention issues and a candidate which would make the Republicans "fight for their lives." He was challenged to state the issues, but he admitted that could not be done except by the committee on resolutions and with the approval of the convention when it meets in July. [Laughter.] He was asked to name the candidate, and he said that the candidate as yet was simply qualities—qualities which would win—and that these qualities would materialize into the man at the convention. [Laughter.] It is now April and the Democratic candidate is only qualities. It is only three months' time to July, when those qualities are to materialize in a man. Surely by all the laws which we know and all the science with which we are familiar that candidate can never get through without the assistance of an incubator! [Uproarious laughter.]

Happily for our party, we are not waiting to be told what we are to believe by the national convention, nor is our candidate composed, as yet, of inchoate qualities. Every Republican in this broad land knows in what we believe and knows for whom he is going to vote. [Applause.] The campaign is to be conducted by the opposition almost solely against the tariff and President Roosevelt. We accept the challenge upon the Dingley bill and point to what it has accomplished. We will not make any general revision of its beneficent provisions, but as in the case of the Porto Rican, the Cuban and the Philippine tariffs, we will modify its practical application as its necessities require, but we will not have those modifications made by its enemies. [Applause.] Our Democratic friends admit that prosperity is greater than ever before, but they say that it is not due to the protective tariff, it is not due to the American markets for Americans, it is not due to the gold standard of value, it is not due to Republican policies and administrations, but that God has wrought it all. [Laughter.] Speaking with due reverence, if this be true, why is it that he gives prosperity only in Republican administrations and disaster under Democratic presidents? The broader and better view is that a merciful Providence gives to man the earth and the fullness thereof for his enjoyment according to the qualities which will enable him to succeed. Those qualities were exhibited in every Republican administration and the opposite in the only three Democratic administrations we remember—from 1856 to 1860, from 1885 to 1889, and from 1893 to 1897. [Applause.] The founder of the great banking house of Rothschilds was asked to what he ascribed his phenomenal success in the terrible competitions of his period when he started from such humble beginnings. His answer was, "I never would have business transactions with unlucky men." Then why should the American people think for a moment of abandoning conditions of unusual prosperity for partnership with the hard luck party. [Applause and cries, "They won't!"]

They say the president is rash. He was rash when as assistant secretary of the navy he paralyzed the bureau officers by ordering the navy to burn powder in target practice, but that rashness materialized in the highest conservatism when those gunners under Dewey sank the fleet at Manila bay in fifty minutes and Cervera's fleet at Santiago in sixty. [Applause.] All of his acquaintances said he was rash when he threw up a comfortable berth in the navy department to take upon himself the perils of the campaign of Cuba; that he was rash when at the head of his regiment he encountered volleys of Spanish bullets in battle; but that rashness displayed the qualities which make the American people both trust and love him. [Great applause.] He has probed deeply the great departments of the government and prosecuted and convicted those of his own household of faith who were found guilty. He enforced the law when dire predictions of disaster were made, and by doing so lost the favor of some of the ablest and strongest of our financial leaders, but the supreme court has sustained his action and the markets have rebounded with that phenomenal rise in the securities affected which demonstrates the judgment of the investors of the country.

The completion of the isthmian canal will bring the cities on the Atlantic coast nearer the orient than the ports of continental Europe or Great Britain. Its construction will revolutionize the commerce of the world and incalculably promote the position and prosperity of the United States. The president's advocacy of a large navy which will make us the second maritime power of the world is a wise and farsighted policy to meet the expansion of commerce which must come to us by the isthmian canal and the open door from American diplomacy. To ask for an open door for the surplus products of American industry with neither a mercantile marine nor battleships would be ridiculous, but when the greatest and strongest and richest nation of the world asks for an open door with a fleet commensurate with its power, necessities and rights, the answer will be a welcome without a shot fired or the peace of the world disturbed. [Applause.]

It is not now, but rather at our fall convention, that we speak upon state issues and the state administration. We are living today in the midst of the clamor and noise which always precede an adjournment, not about what has been done, but what it is claimed will be done. But when the legislature adjourns and the executive has acted we will enter cheerfully with our state ticket upon the fall campaign, confident of an approval of the able administration of Governor Odell. The greatest manufacturing state in the Union, foremost in finance and commerce and third in agriculture, will not lag behind in the great national procession led by Theodore Roosevelt in November. With a past unequaled in its splendor, a present unsurpassed in its beneficence, issues as clear as the sunlight and a candidate who represents better than almost any man in our history the vigorous life, integrity, ability and patriotism of typical Americanism, the Republican party will march once more to victory. [Long continued applause and cheers.]

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

THE NECESSARY MAGAZINE IN THE PRESIDENTIAL YEAR

The Review of Reviews is often called a necessity, in recognition of its usefulness in keeping readers "up with the times."

In Presidential election years the REVIEW OF REVIEWS is more than ever "the necessary magazine." Everybody wants to be truly and quickly informed about this or that public question that has forged to the front; to know about the new candidates and personal factors in politics, to have a complete picture at hand of the current movement of history.

In Dr. Shaw's editorials, in its authentic and timely contributed articles, in its brilliant character sketches, in its condensations and reviews of all the important articles of other magazines, and in its hundred a month of valuable portraits, witty cartoons, and interesting views, the REVIEW OF REVIEWS gives the much desired news of the world's and our own progress. "The World under a Field-glass" is the way one subscriber describes it.

Men in public life, like President Theodore Roosevelt, the members of Congress, and the great captains of industry, who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided it is "indispensable."

Lieutenant General Zilinski, whose name is also spelled Shilinsky, occupies the important position of chief of staff to General Kuropatkin, Russian commander in Manchuria. He is so highly thought of in Russian military circles that it is said the whole army rejoiced when Kuropatkin chose him for his present duty. General Zilinski has long been one of the best informed and most energetic members of the Russian general staff and has spent so many years in Siberia and Manchuria that he knows the country and the people well. Prior to his detail as Kuropatkin's right hand man General Zilinski was quartermaster general of the [illegible] army.

THE TIMES is indebted to the Hon. Chauncey M. Depew for an important public document.

OLNEY has carried two-thirds of the delegation to the St. Louis Convention from Massachusetts.

PROSPERITY is still blooming. Last month this country sent to Europe 45,000 tons of iron and steel.

JUDGE PARKER is afraid that Mr. Bryan will add to the nominating convention a little Palmer-Buckner side-show of his own.

THE President has ordered a great naval display on the coast of Europe this Summer. Our combined squadrons in the Mediterranean are expected to number sixteen warships.

SOME one has asked that a receiver be appointed for Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show. Troubles never come singly and Buffalo Bill has his share. Whether it is worse to be divorced or go into bankruptcy?

OUT in Minnesota the courts have decided that absolutely smoothe bits of metal, once coins, are no longer money, and street car conductors may refuse to take them. A dime is a dime only when it says it is.

A SON-IN-LAW of Bishop Potter, F. A. Clark, won the American cup for good riding at the races in Washington. One doesn't often see a bishop's son sitting astride a race-horse, going like the wind.

THE question of plural wives and forty-six children, collateral to the Smoot investigation, attracts wide attention wherever husbands are besieging the divorce courts to get rid of one wife.

A SHIP-LOAD of over 800 wild animals of all kinds, and some 1,000 birds of extravagant plumage, has arrived in New York. The contents of this Noah's Ark will be sent to St. Louis for exhibition.

RUSSIA'S announcement that correspondents using the wireless telegraph will be treated as spies if caught, is being resented by Great Britain and the United States. The determination is not likely to be acted on

THE paper trust has put in a general denial before the House Judiciary Committee, that it is a trust. It says such allegations are as thin as tissue paper and will not hold water any more than a paper bag. The publishers of newspapers have another opinion on the subject.

THE Health Officer of Washington has discovered a simple means by which the germs, or microbes of tuberculosis, pneumonia and typhoid fever may be destroyed. The world will be delighted to get this valuable knowledge, if it is not for sale in bottles.

THE civilized world mourns the loss of Verestchagin, the Russian battle-painter, who was a guest of Admiral Makaroff and perished with him in the destruction of the battleship. This artist was the greatest living painter of battle scenes. His work, moreover, was always in the interest of humanity—intended to make war seem as barbarous and ghastly as it is.

SENATOR LODGE went home to Massachusetts to be present at the Republican State Convention and prevent a reciprocity plank with Canada from appearing in the platform. This was strongly demanded until the Senator asserted that American exports to Canada have increased from [illegible],000,000 in 1867 to $133,000,000 in [illegible]. Such a fact was too much for reciprocity and it died a natural death.

BECAUSE the city of Chicago has decided to purchase the street railways [and] operate them on its own account, [there] are those who fear socialism is [on] the increase in this country. But [there] are two sides to every quesion. [In Conn]ecticut the city of Norwich [illegible] fighting in all the State [courts against] being compelled to buy [illegible] works and has lost its [case. The] Supreme Court of that [State dec]ided that not only must [illegible] but also pay a good [illegible] the franchise which [illegible] grasped.

THE Chinese exclusion treaty is about to expire. She now demands reciprocity and says if there is an open door it must swing both ways.

SECRETARY of War Taft is urging railroad building in the Philippines. Money would be forthcoming if five per cent. on the bonds were guaranteed, he says.

THE French Minister in Washington says: Our exhibition in St. Louis will be the best and largest we have made. It will be principally of the fine arts of which there will be 7,500 examples."

WITHIN a month more than twenty large commercial trusts have ceased to pay dividends and gone into bankruptcy. This would seem to indicate that the trust problem is solving itself.

Two million immigrants have arrived in this country within ten years. Yet seven great steamship companies are now cutting steerage rates, and passengers can come from Europe to New York for $12.

THE Czar's present plan is to send his Baltic war fleet around to the east by going north of Norway and Siberia and through the Behring Strait. He thinks the squadron can get to Port Arthur by the end of August, but it is a voyage full of peril.

EMERSON well says the poet is a prophet. Goethe, the prince of German writers, predicted the Panama canal in 1827. He said: "Merchants, as well as war vessels, should have quicker connections with the western and eastern coasts of America. It is entirely indispensable for the United States to make a passage from the Gulf of Mexico to the Pacific ocean, and I am certain that she will accomplish it."

You can secure $2 in checks with every $1 cash purchase for the next ten days at S. D. Wells, the First street shoe dealer.

DIED.

Harry Youngs, a former resident of this city, died at his home in Toronto, Canada, last week from Brights disease. The deceased left Fulton to accept a position as foreman in the Pease foundry. The funeral was held on Monday. The deceased is survived by his widow, a daughter and two sons.

The death of Thomas G. Somers, aged 80, occurred at the home of his daughter, Mrs. W. M. Hinsdale on the west side on Sunday morning after a long illness. He was one of the oldest residents of Granby and was well thought of by a large circle of acquaintances. The funeral was held from his late home on Monday afternoon, the Rev. Nelson Reynolds officiating. Interment was made in the family lot in Mt. Adnah.

Hoel Lawrence, aged 75, died at his home No. 318 Utica street, on Sunday morning after two years of ill health. He has been a resident of this city for sixty-eight years and was held in high esteem by all who knew him and there were few in this vicinity who did not. In fact he was well known throughout the State for his proficiency as a pattern maker which trade he had followed as his means of livlihood. He was an expert in his line of work and his services were sought not only in this city but in all sections of the State. The deceased was a regular attendant at the First M. E. church up to the time when impaired health prevented his leaving his home. In politics he was a staunch Republican and he was a charter member of Neahtawanta Lodge, I. O. O. F., and that lodge sent a magnificent floral emblem to express their sympathy and regret at his demise, and the members of the lodge attended the funeral in a body. The funeral services were conducted from the home this Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, the Rev. John Richards officiating. The beautiful burial ritual of the Order of Odd Fellows was invoked at the grave. The male quartette rendered appropriate music during the last sad rite. The deceased is survived by his widow, one son, Mr. William A. Lawrence of Syracuse, and a sister who resides in Wisconsin. Mr. Lawrence possessed the enviable faculty of making earnest friends and it can truly be said that he has not an enemy.

A choice selection of trimmed hats, tailored hats and hats for children may be found at M. E. Young's.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Prof. Guy F. Taylor is in New York.

Mrs. A. J. Snow is improving in health.

Mrs. F. P. Connell is entertaining her sister, Mrs Hine of Watertown.

Mrs. F. E. Weeden is gaining in health and is anticipating a trip to the seashore in the near future.

The High School has been vastly improved by the removal of the ugly wire fence which has surrounded the grounds for several years. Undoubtedly the lawns will be placed in fine condition also.

Bids for lighting the city have been asked for by the Board of Public Works and it is hoped that the Fulton Light, Heat & Power Company may secure the contract at a figure satisfactory to all concerned.

Mr G. A. Rappole has returned from a 10-days sojourn in Orleans County. He returned with the body of his uncle Mattison Rappole who was interred in Mt Adnah. The widow of the deceased is a guest at the Rappole homestead.

Mr. Elmer Taylor was surprised by a number of his friends at his home in Broadway on Friday evening in celebration of his birthday. A handsome chair was presented him as a memento of the occasion.

Mrs. William Hunter, it is now thought probable, will return to her home in this city from St. Joseph's Hospital, Syracuse, within two weeks. This is indeed glad tidings to Mrs Hunter's host of friends, who ardently hope for her complete restoration to health.

Neahtawanta Lodge, I. O. O. F., attended service in the First M. E. church on Sunday morning and heard a splendid special sermon by the Rev. John Richards which was most inspiring and instructive. The choir rendered appropriate music. The Times regrets that it was impossible to publish the sermon in full.

Mayor Foster, Chief Ross, Superintendent H. A. Allen and J. A. Morrill went to Geneva on Tuesday for the purpose of securing information relative to the cost of paving that city, as a basis upon which to estimate the cost to pave Third street. The plan calls for a pavement consisting of a bottom of concrete, evened and rolled, three inches in thickness, and covered by a bed of trap rock, crushed and rolled to a thickness of five inches, making eight inches in all. It is not thought that the cost will exceed $6 per running foot.

It is marvelous what a transformation has been wrought in the Fulton Steam Laundry by the new proprietors, Messrs. L. N. Gomon & Co. The interior has been newly papered throughout and new tubs installed, so that there is no question about the perfect cleanliness and sanitary condition. To better facilitate the getting out of first class work, a new 25-horse-power Ames steam boiler has been installed and a new machine for the turning of roll collars procured. Try the new firm. It will prove worth your while as they are in business to stay and will serve you well.

Special Notice.

The Board of Public Works of the City of Fulton, N. Y., have decided on its own motion, that the following sections of streets ought to be paved with macadam pavement, curb and gutter strip, with proper drains and storm sewers, viz: All that portion of South Third street, between the south line of Buffalo street and the north line of Cayuga street; also, all that portion of South Fourth street, between the south line of Division street, and the north line of Buffalo street, and the said Board of Public Works will hold a meeting at the office of said Board, in the Savings Bank building, to make a final determination in respect thereto, on Friday, May 6, 1904, at 8 o'clock p. m. Any person interested shall be entitled to be heard at such meeting in opposition to such improvement.

A HOUSE DIVIDED.

The Reason a Planned Goose Dinner Was a Failure.

Most persons have had the experience of walking with a friend out of step and trying to shift just at the moment when the friend also makes the attempt. This is an instance of thwarted harmony much like that which appears in a story told by a London journal of an elderly couple. They were childless and had never been united by the bond of other lives linked with their own. So they were always in a state of well bred disagreement.

On the subject of meals they disagreed thoroughly, and each usually suggested a dish for the Sunday dinner which the other did not approve. One Saturday the man came home from market with a basket.

"You needn't worry about tomorrow's dinner any more, Maria. I've got it."

"And so have I, George. You were so undecided"—

"Undecided! I told you what I wanted."

"Well, I mean you didn't decide as I did. So I bought a goose."

"Why, so have I. I told you I'd like a goose."

"Well, now we are agreed for once anyway."

"Yes, and I suppose we'll have cold goose and stewed goose for the next two weeks."

They relapsed into their usual silence.

Sunday forenoon the wife asked, "Do you want a little quince in the apple sauce with your goose?"

"Your goose, you mean?"

"No, I don't. It seemed so absurd to have two geese in the house that I [illegible]"

The following information will be found useful in making estimates:

The great Fair at St. Louis will open April 30th, 1904, and close November 30, 1904, and will no doubt attract a larger aggregate number than ever visited any previous World's Fair. The U. S. and governments of the various States are devoting twenty millions of dollars to the erection of handsome buildings, and filling them with exhibits, while foreign countries are represented to the number of forty seven.

The Democratic National Convention will be held in St. Louis July 6th, which will doubtless draw a larger number of visitors to the Fair on July 4th than would otherwise attend.

The Fourth of July attendance at Chicago was 283,273; Omaha, 38,618, Buffalo, 71,024.

Cut out carefully along this line and mail to us promptly.

I estimate, the number of paid admissions to the ST. LOUIS FAIR July 4th will be:

Desirable House to Rent.

House to rent on Buffalo street, between Second and Third streets. Inquire of Miss Mary O'Hare, at J. C. O'Brien's store.

Who Will Shoot the Squirrels?

"Let the boy have the gun and if possible let him learn to handle it. The squirrel who is eating the seeds out of the pears in the garden is fair game to start with. If he learns to shoot at the right thing in the right season never mind if he also learns to hit what he shoots at. The boy who has learned to handle a gun is the kind of a boy who knows when a gun is loaded and does not shoot his little brother by mistake, nor get the lockjaw from a toy pistol on the Fourth of July."

The above argument is along the line of that advance by the J. Stevens Arms & Tool Co., Chicopee Falls, Mass., makers of the famous "Stevens." "Equip the boys of the country with the Stevens rifle," says their catalogue, "and you will be the means of ridding the surrounding country of every flying and running animal that the farmer tries in vain to scare away by other means. And the boy will have his fun while doing it."

in waiting a week on your tailor, when you can come here and walk off with a suit that fits as good as any "merchant tailor's," and embodies the snappiest styles and the handsomest styles.

Then think of the variety you have to select from. What merchant tailor can lay before you such a varied assortment from which to match your individual preference?

Added to all this, the price is very much lower than you would have to pay the tailor. Have you any objections to saving the difference?

ITS WORK WELL DONE

The Legislature Has Adjourned With Many Wise Acts to Its Credit.

Taxes as Low as During the Last Two Preceding Years of Republican Rule.

Large Appropriations For Good Roads, Charitable Institutions and Public Schools.

The legislature has adjourned and the acts of the Republican state administration for the year are substantially completed and, therefore, the voters of the state are now in a position to understand the merits and demerits of the administration.

The governor and the legislature have succeeded in carrying out the pledge given by Governor Odell that no more direct state taxes should be imposed in the course of his administration. The reduction of state taxation to a nominal point has been brought about by strict economy in the making of appropriations and by the increase of the indirect taxation. Thus taxation of real estate for state purposes has been virtually abolished and those who pay taxes will understand now that their tax bills are for local expenses only.

The reduction of state taxation during recent Republican administrations can be clearly perceived by the table given below, showing state taxation for the last six years:

1899 (Roosevelt)	$12,640,228
1900 (Roosevelt)	10,704,153
1901 (Odell)	6,824,306
1902 (Odell)	748,072
1903 (Odell)	761,085
1904 (Odell)	898,141

The slight increase of taxation this year is due to the increased valuation of property in the state. If it were not for the constitution's requirements, no taxation whatever for state purposes would have been imposed. Since on Oct. 1, 1904, the beginning of a new fiscal year, there will be a state surplus of $7,000,000.

For Good Roads.

Despite the economy with which the state's affairs have been administered, liberal appropriations have been made for what seemed necessary purposes. Thus, the sum of $1,500,000 has been appropriated to carry on the work of the improvement of the roads of the state. Of this amount $1,100,000 will be used in the direct improvement of the roads. The counties will contribute a corresponding amount, so that $2,200,000 will be expended in direct improvement of the roads of the state during the coming year. The sum of $400,000 was appropriated for road repairing under the Fuller act. Both the appropriation of $1,100,000 and that of $400,000 are the largest amounts yet appropriated by the legislature for this purpose. The table given below shows the amounts appropriated by the Republican legislatures of recent years, with the approval of Republican executives, for road improvement:

1898 (Black)	$50,000
1900 (Roosevelt)	150,000
1901 (Odell)	420,000
1902 (Odell)	795,000
1903 (Odell)	600,000
1904 (Odell)	1,500,000

Aid to Agriculture.

In addition to these sums, which will go to aid directly or indirectly the agricultural improvement of the state, the sum of $250,000 was appropriated to establish an agricultural college at Ithaca. It is believed that this state agricultural college will be of great aid to the farmers in their efforts to establish a more scientific agriculture. Generous aid was also extended to the state fair, and in support of the state agricultural department, to the state agricultural experiment station, and in every other way in furtherance of the agricultural interests of the state.

For State Hospitals.

It is also noteworthy that large appropriations were made for humanitarian purposes. The per capita cost of maintaining the state hospitals for the insane was increased $11 a year. For new buildings and improvements to the state hospitals for the insane over $1,200,000 was appropriated. An increase was granted in the wages of the men employed in outside and mechanical departments of the state hospitals for the insane, the increase being from 15 to 20 per cent. The salaries of the nurses and attendants in the hospitals were also increased, which brought about an additional annual expense to the state of $233,000. The state charitable institutions of a minor nature were also liberally treated in regard to expenditures, many necessary amounts being authorized by the legislature.

The Schools United.

The legislature and the governor also accomplished the solution of a problem which has bothered administrations for many years—namely, the unification of the school systems of the state. A bill was passed abolishing the old board of regents and putting in its place a new board of only eleven members composed of former members of the board of regents thus abolished. This board was given supervision of a new department of education composed of the high schools, the colleges and the common schools of the state. In direct charge of this consolidated department there was put a commissioner of education with a term of six years. This commissioner was elected by the legislature. The man selected was Dr. Andrew S. Draper, formerly superintendent of public instruction of this state and later the successful president of the Illinois State university. Mr. Draper thus not only had experience in the educational work of this state, but also that of another state, and he has since shown at the very beginning of his administration that he intends to conduct the schools of this state in a nonpartisan spirit and with the obvious intention of raising the standard of scholarship in all the high schools and public schools of the state.

Anti-Gambling Bill.

The legislature passed a law which will give the district attorneys of the state power to convict persons with far more readiness than at present who conduct gambling establishments. The especial aim of this law was to suppress such establishments in the city of New York and give the authorities there ample power to deal with this form of vice.

The legislature further paid attention to the matter of the law's delays in New York city, carrying out the recommendations of a report made to it in which the postponement of law actions and their consideration was impressively pointed out. Bills were passed looking to the creation of additional courts for the first and second judicial departments, which it is believed will lead to far more speedy action in the disposal of lawsuits.

Saving Forest Lands.

The legislature also took up the subject of the acquisition of additional forest lands and the establishment of a definite and protective policy in buying such lands. A bill was passed making a large appropriation for increasing the state's forest preserve in the Adirondack region and the Catskills, and a bill which it is also believed will lead to the planting of trees in denuded regions.

Two bills amending the tax laws in important particulars were passed. They will save to the state many thousands of dollars when the franchise tax is collected, as they will remove an obstacle created by a decision of the court of appeals which declared the present system of taxing the capital stock for the past enjoyment of franchise privileges to be illegal.

An act for an amendment to the constitution was passed providing for additional justices of the supreme court and judges of the court of appeals and another amendment to the constitution providing that no justice of the appellate division of the supreme court shall, within the department to which he may be designated, exercise any of the powers of a justice of the supreme court other than those of a justice out of court.

Pension Bills Defeated.

Bills were defeated which would have provided for the pensioning of persons in civil offices and also for the pensioning of any judge of the court of appeals or justice of the supreme court who, having attained the age of seventy years, should be retired from office after having served continuously for more than sixteen years. Opposition was made to these bills on the ground that any bill pensioning officials would lead to the pensioning of far more than were included in the act which it was proposed to pass.

The legislature passed only one bill in relation to the canals of any importance. That was one for the appointment of three commissioners and appraisers of lands and structures needed for the new proposed barge canal.

For Rural Schools.

For several years the Republican administration has been paying close attention to the needs of the rural districts. A year ago an appropriation was made for the payment of the school bills of pupils at high schools who do not live in the districts where these schools are situated. Between six and seven thousand nonresident pupils took advantage of the law, and $200,000 was appropriated this year to pay this bill. The present legislature also passed an act appropriating $100,000 for the common school libraries of the state. The previous amount appropriated was $55,000.

A bill was passed making much more strict than formerly the laws in relation to the speed of automobiles in rural sections of the state.

For State Taxation.

The legislation of this year has thus been wholly in the interest of the people. Further, the legislature and the governor have clearly been economical, for, although the state is rapidly increasing in population and its needs are greater (witness the increased cost of roads and the increased cost of charitable institutions), nevertheless no increase whatever of state taxation has been made. "No state taxation" has become the motto of the Republican party, and it lives up to it.

MAN OF IRON NERVE.

How Colonel W. C. Greene Bluffed a Western Gun Fighter.

Colonel William C. Greene, president of the Greene Consolidated Copper company, who recently frustrated an attempt on his life in New York city by a remarkable exhibition of courage, developed the nerve and coolness which stood him in such good stead on the plains of the west.

Four times, it is alleged, James W. Goodman, a western miner, understood to have a reputation as a "gun man," pointed his revolver at Mr. Greene, each time declaring that he would shoot to kill. As many times Mr. Greene laughed and, looking coolly into the bore of the weapon, waved his newspaper as if brushing aside a matter of no consequence and said, "That is foolish."

General Greene, who is about fifty-three years old, has had varied experiences in the west, where for years he was a scout and Indian fighter. He has been shot five times and has on numerous occasions been in difficulties that required all his nerve to face and overcome.

The colonel's big copper mine and reduction plant, the third largest in the country, is at Cananea, Sonora, Mexico, about fifty miles south of the Arizona line from Bisbee. The camp is at the spot where Geronimo, the famous Apache chief, made his last stand against General Miles. Some of the employees at the mines took part in the campaign against Geronimo.

Colonel Greene was with the first survey of the Northern Pacific railroad. He left the survey and in 1870 staked out the land on which Fargo, N. D., now stands. Turning his attention to prospecting and cattle raising, he soon began to prosper. He studied mining as a science and located many valuable copper mines which have since been developed. Besides his mining interests, he now controls 1,700,000 acres of land and over 100,000 head of cattle. For several years Colonel Greene has lived in New York.

MIGHT HAVE BEEN EMPRESS

Princess Who Refused to Wed the Heir of Germany's Crown.

Princess Alexandra of Cumberland, whose engagement to the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin has just been announced, bears the unique distinction of having declined to become the bride of the crown prince of Germany.

It is known that Emperor William was anxious to arrange such a match, and his visit to Copenhagen last year was taken for that purpose, but the Duke of Cumberland, father of Alexandra, suddenly left the Danish capital just before the emperor's arrival. The emperor resented the duke's departure and characterized it as an affront. Neither Alexandra nor her father wished for an alliance with the house of Hohenzollern even though it would make her the prospective empress of Germany.

Princess Alexandra is the second daughter of the Duke of Cumberland, son of the last king of Hanover, George V., who was deprived of his throne by Prussia in 1866. Her mother was PRINCESS ALEXANDRA OF CUMBERLAND.

Princess Thyra of Denmark, sister of Alexandra of England, and the princess is therefore the niece of the British queen. She is twenty-two years old.

The house of Hanover has never renounced its claims to the throne of that kingdom, and Emperor William sought to effect a reconciliation by marrying his heir to the Hanoverian princess.

The English title of Cumberland is retained from the fact that when Queen Victoria ascended the throne of Great Britain and Ireland, Hanover, under the Salic law, went to the next male descendant of George III. of England, who was Duke of Cumberland and Brunswick.

Washington's Father.

My father, Augustine, has been described as a good planter and a man of energy. I apprehend that he was of a serious tendency, for Lawrence, my brother, once gave me to understand that most of the few books at Wakefield were religious, but whether this was so or not I do not know. Like some of the rest of us, my father had a high and quick temper, which, as he used to say, he had to keep muzzled. I remember being terrified at seeing him in a storm of anger because the clergyman who was to have baptized my sister Mildred was too much in liquor to perform the ceremony.—From S. EAGLE AND STURGEON.

The King of Birds and King of Fish In a Death Clinch.

We had been camped for a few days at a point on the upper reaches of the Pic river, waiting for a few of the party who were running a side line. A source of amusement was watching the descent of a large baldheaded eagle in the eddy back of the point.

He would strike the water with great force, coming down from an immense height. At times he would dive under the surface to reappear a moment or two later generally with a fish clutched in his claws, when he would fly (freighted with his fish) to a very high mountain, on the overhanging crest of which the nest with his mate and young were quite visible to us with our field glass.

I had noticed his success and journeys to the nest for two mornings. On the third morning a shadow coming across the sun's rays caused me to look up and there was the great bird at his usual hunt to supply the young eagles with breakfast. With his keen eye piercing the river depths he poised over a particular spot for a few moments and then shot down with the velocity of a cannon ball.

The waters parted and the eagle was lost to view. I watched and waited to see him emerge with his prey, but moments lengthened into minutes, and minutes into a quarter of an hour, but the surface of the water remained undisturbed.

What could it mean? Even if he had struck himself against some hidden rock and been killed the body would have floated to the surface. It passed my reasoning powers to solve the result of that plunge. Then far down, fully a quarter of a mile off, I saw the great bird struggling, either to carry off a heavy burden or to free himself from one. The waters were lashed into foam and the bird again disappeared, and all was still.

This lashing of the water and disappearing were repeated again and again, each time farther downstream. A bend in the river prevented my seeing the final result. Calling one of our men from the tent, we embarked in a canoe and started down the river to view the strange proceeding closer. When we had doubled the point below I saw lodged against the beach in a small bay something that did not look natural to the place. We paddled down and found it was my eagle fast fixed to a sturgeon fully six feet long. Both were motionless. The king of fish and the king of birds had met death.—Forest and Stream.

Hill, Arch Conspirator.

Weak Hearts

Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.

Mr. D. Kauble, of Nevada, O., says: I had stomach trouble and was in a bad state as I had heart trouble with it. I took Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for about four months and it cured me.

SPIRIT OF SOCIALISM.

This, Says Senator Platt, Gives Energy to the Democratic Campaign.

Senator Platt gave a dinner to the Republican Editorial association on the occasion of its recent meeting in New York city. In a speech which he made after the dinner he touched upon the underlying purpose of the Democratic party for the next national campaign. He said:

"Every political observer must have perceived that the spirit of socialism has taken possession of the Democratic party and has finally become its one clearly distinguishing motive. I want to impress upon you and, if possible, upon all of my fellow citizens throughout New York, that it makes no difference whether Hearst or Parker be the Democratic nominee—that which gives energy, purpose and character to the Democratic campaign will be the spirit of socialism.

"There is no uncertainty in the Republican party either as to its candidate or its principles. If there were uncertainty as to its candidate there would still be none as to its principles. They are definite and proved. Eight years of consistent and successful administration proclaim and illustrate them. Upon you devolves the duty of bringing them home to the people of New York, of proving their wisdom and of securing to them the support of the voters in your several communities. Nothing can take the place of the work that you will do. Conscience and judgment have always guided the American people in the selection of the high officers of their government, and to these noble monitors the appeal of the newspaper press, earnest, sincere and patriotic, will not be made in vain."

Taking Desperate Chances.

It is true that many contract colds and recover from them without taking any precaution or treatment, and a knowledge of this fact leads others to take their chances instead of giving their colds the needed attention. It should be borne in mind that every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality, makes the system less able to withstand each succeeding cold and paves the way for more serious diseases. Can you afford to take such desperate chances when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds can be had for a trifle? For sale by H. C. Giesler.

GREELEY IN THE ROCKIES.

The Way He Sobered Up a Boisterous Hotel Crowd.

In the "Memoirs of Henry Villard" there is a chapter in which the author describes a meeting with Greeley in the Rockies. The "Tribune philosopher," having met with an accident which crippled him for several weeks, was an unwilling guest at the Denver House, the only "hotel" in the city, a rude shack of a building, with canvas partitions, the greater part given up to the bar and gaming tables, and therefore not a place conducive to the quiet and repose of invalids. Mr. Villard noticed a change gradually taking place in the usually benign features of the philosopher his Christian virtues gradually losing control over him, until finally one day he lost his temper completely and swore at his disturbers "so violently that I dared not believe my ears." His wrath, however, did not culminate until the third night of his tortures. About 10 o'clock he got up and limped into the barroom, where he thus addressed the astonished tipplers:

"Friends, I have been in pain and without sleep for almost a week, and I am well nigh worn out. Now I am a guest at this hotel, I pay a high price for my board and lodging and am entitled to rest during the night. But how can I get it with all this noise going on in this place?"

"Then," adds Mr. Villard, "he addressed one of the most pathetic appeals I ever heard to those around him to abandon their vicious ways and become sober and industrious. He spoke for nearly an hour and was listened to with rapt interest and the most perfect respect. He succeeded, too, in his object. The gambling stopped, and the bar was closed every night at 11 o'clock as long as he remained."

A Democrat's Opinion.

There is not a franchise grabber, bond swindler or political lackey of a predatory syndicate paying dividends on watered stock that does not regard the Albany platform as an admirable example of sane, safe and conservative Democracy. From the standpoint of practical politics it is as great a failure as from the standpoint of honest Democracy.—New York Journal and American.

HE MISSED THE BEARS.

A Question That Rid President McKinley of a Beggar.

No one asking assistance was ever turned away empty handed from the McKinley door, and many were those who applied. One day a rather old man, with every appearance of belonging to the species hobo, called and asked for aid. He was given a small sum of money and, evidently thinking he had struck a soft spot, returned the following day and from then on went back every few days until finally, on what proved to be his last visit, the president came out while he was talking to a member of the household and, learning the man's errand, entered into conversation with him.

The man stated, in reply to the president's question, that he was a naturalized American citizen, but was born in Switzerland. The president asked if he had ever been in Berne, and he said he had lived there. The president then asked if he had ever seen the bears. This question rather stumped the old man, and he stammered that he could not understand. The president merely smiled and passed on.

Now, as every one who has any knowledge of Switzerland knows, the coat of arms of the city and state of Berne is a bear, and in a pit in the center of the city a number of live bears have been kept for years out of memory and are likely to be so kept for years to come, frequent bequests having been made for their comfort and many thousand francs being deposited in the banks of Berne for their maintenance. The old man, not knowing these facts, certainly could not have been from Berne and was a self convicted disciple of Ananias, and as he disappeared from the neighborhood it is to be supposed that some one must have shown him the joke.—Leslie's Weekly.

Good for Children.

The pleasant to take and harmless One Minute Cough Cure gives immediate relief in all cases of Cough, Croup and LaGrippe because it does not pass immediately into the stomach, but takes effect right at the seat of the trouble. It draws out the inflammation, heals and soothes and cures permanently by enabling the lungs to contribute pure and life-giving and life-sustaining oxygen to the blood and tissues. One Minute Cough Cure is pleasant to take and it is good alike for young and old. Sold by H. C. Giesler.

Game of Genteel Lady.

Do you know this game?

One player begins, "I, genteel lady, always genteel, come from the genteel lady, always genteel, beg leave to inform you that my ship has just come in from China laden with apricots."

The next player has to report, adding some object beginning with "b," such as biscuit, the next player one beginning with "c," and so on down the alphabet. If any one hesitates or makes a mistake, a twist of paper is stuck in her hair, and she is "one horned" instead of the "genteel" lady and for two mistakes the "two horned lady" and so on.—"Games of American Children."

Cost of Seeing the World's Fair.

From any point within 300 miles of St. Louis a person may travel to the World's Fair this year, view the wonders of the Exposition for three days and expend the same money he would pay in any other year for train fare alone. This is an absolute fact.

The Western Passenger Association has agreed on a ten day excursion rate, 250 miles or more from St. Louis, for one and one-fifth fare for the round trip.

TAXES.

A check upon extravagance in public expenditures, that the burden of the people's taxes may be lightened.—From State Democratic Platform.

Now, isn't that a nice plank for the Democrats to adopt? It is a fine generality. It looks well, it reads well, and it may take well, but just how the Democrats can get any particular glory out of that plank is a mystery. The purpose for which it is intended has been accomplished by the Republicans.

Can it be that the Democrats are unaware that they are not paying any state taxes save the thirteen one-hundredths mill rate required by the constitution for the canal debt?

Or is this plank intended as an indorsement of the Republican administration and Republican policy which made its consummation possible?

The Democrats come along at a late day with their tax burden talk in hopes that they can get some credit, but the people can't be fooled. They know who wiped out the state tax.—Schenectady Union.

Golden Advice.

First, if the soil is acid or sour, apply lime to it to make it sweet; second, if the soil is poor in nitrogen only, grow clover or some other legume which has the power to secure nitrogen from the air; third, if the soil is poor in phosphorus only, apply bone meal or some other form of phosphorus; fourth, if the soil is poor in potassium only, apply potassium chloride or some other form of potassium; fifth, always save and use all the barnyard manure you have and also all you can economically obtain from others, and make liberal use of green manures when necessary to maintain the supply of organic matter in the soil.—Professor C. G. Hopkins, University of Illinois.

Ignorance is the Mother of Mistakes, Blunders and bungles—the most expensive thing in this foolish world. There are millions of poor persons who might have been rich but for their blunders, and hundreds in their graves who might have been alive had they used Dr. David Kennedy's new medicine, Cal-cura Solvent, when they were first taken sick. Write to the Cal-cura Company, Rondout, N. Y., for a book and free sample bottle.

Unique California Map.

A unique exhibit at the World's Fair was prepared by the agricultural department of the University of California. It is a large map, so colored as to show the character of the various soils of the state. It gives a clear idea of the situation and the extent of the arable and untillable sections. In the localities that cannot be cultivated are shown the Sierras, the lava beds and the desert. The map indicates the location of the cultivable portions of the mountains and Mohave plateau and shows the nature of the foothills and valleys of that wonderful state.

A FUNNY GAME.

Seeing the Full Moon Often Fools the Little Girls.

Here is a funny game to play:

Stand facing a girl and say to her, "You can't make the same motions I am going to make."

"Then she will say, "Just see if I can't."

Now do this: Put your left hand forward, point the forefinger toward your face and make a circle around your face with it, saying, "I see the full moon."

Next point at each eye and say, "Two eyes;" then touch your nose, saying, "A nose;" then touch your mouth and say, "And a mouth."

Now let your arm fall and tell the girl to do exactly as you did and say what you said.

The point is this: She will be sure to do all the motions with her right hand instead of her left.

And you can promptly say, "No; you didn't do it right." She will ask you to go through the motions again and very likely will use her right hand again.

But suppose she is left handed? She will naturally use her left hand and get the trick right. So you should tell her, "Well, you can't do it again," and be sure to use your right hand when you show her again. When she tries to do as you did she will most likely use her left hand, and so you can say, "You're wrong this time."

This trick amuses everybody.

FISH FOOD NOT THE BEST.

Many Fallacies About a Diet on Sea Products Are Extant.

It is doubtful whether any given food in common use contains constituents which have a selective action, so to speak, on the property of ministering to one part of the body more than another. As a rule, when a food is assumed to have specific reparative properties—as, for example, a so called brain or nerve food—the fact really is that such food is easily and quickly assimilated to the body's general advantage; in a word, in such a case repair quickly overtakes waste and a real purposeful nutrition and restoration are accomplished. The administration of such elements as phosphorus or iron in medicine is, of course, a different matter, but these elements are evenly distributed in the materials of a daily diet.

It is often stated that fish is a food which ministers particularly to the needs of the brain, because it contains phosphorus. As a matter of fact, fish does not contain more phosphorus than do the ordinary meat foods, and it certainly does not contain it in a free state. The notion that fish contains phosphorus had no doubt its origin in the glowing phosphorescence of fish in the dark. This phosphorescence is due not to phosphorus at all, but to micro organisms. The belief, therefore, that fish is a brain food is just about as reasonable as the idea that because a soup is thick and gelatinous "it will stick to the ribs" or as sensible as the celebrated advice to Verdant Green to lay in a stock of Reading biscuits to assist his reading.

Fish, of course, is excellent food, partly because of the nourishing nature of its constituents and partly because of its digestibility. But it is in no sense specific for brain or nerve.—L[illegible]

WHY IS A SPECIAL ELECTION NECESSARY?

A petition is being circulated asking Governor Odell to call a special election for Mayor of this city.

There is little excuse for such a proceeding in view of the fact that a Mayor can be selected at the next general election in the Fall to fill the unexpired term made possible through the failure of our Democratic friends to place an eligible candidate on the ticket at our last city election.

If a special election were authorized an outlay of $1,500 would be necessary to defray the expense. Are the taxpayers willing to expend this sum at the dictation of a few who have a grievance, imaginary or otherwise, or who are anxious to carry through a pet scheme provided a change of administration could be secured through their machinations?

It would be a wise and economical policy to wait the proper time for a new election. November is not far distant, and the battle of the ballots can be fought to a finish at that time. In the meanwhile the city is not suffering. Its affairs are being properly conducted and there is no necessity for the spasmodic action of those who are behind the "scheme."

HIGH SCHOOL ITEMS.

The Oracle is in process of compilation, and a better number and larger edition than last month will be issued early in May.

The class of 1904 has selected for its class poet, Miss Lizzie McAllister; its prophet, Miss Maude Newell; and its historian Miss Hazel Gardner.

Miss Mary I. Blackstock of Auburn, N. Y., has been elected assistant instructor in Latin. She is a graduate of Mt. Holyoke college and has had five years' experience in this work.

Arbor Day, Friday, will be observed at the High school with appropriate exercises by the class of 1904. The vine oration will be delivered by Miss Anna Brennan; the tree oration by Miss Wilcox and a song, the words of which have been composed by Miss Lizzie McAllister, will be rendered by the class.

[illegible] Mary F. Cook has been granted [illegible] as instructor in Manual Training in Syracuse schools. Miss Loretta Briggs of Deposit, N. Y., a graduate of the Oswego Normal school, has been engaged to fill out the unexpired term. Miss Briggs commenced her work here on Monday.

There will be several changes in the High School faculty next year. Miss Mabel Chesley has resigned her position that she may enjoy a year's rest, and she has been reluctantly released by the Board of Education. She will be succeeded by Miss Mary Phillips, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Phillips of this city, who is a graduate of Cornell University and has been teaching in the Oneonta High school for several terms.

Prof. Archibald Lindsley has resigned his position to accept one as Principal of the Maysville school, and he will be succeeded here by Mr. George O. Moore of Syracuse University. Mr. Moore is a graduate of the Cortland Normal school and has had one year's experience as a teacher. Mr. Moore is most active in athletics in the University, and the local athletic association will have the benefit of splendid training from him.

The Class of 1904, with a membership of twenty-two, was formally organized on Wednesday. The following will receive their diplomas in June: Lena Bishop, Anna Brennan, Helen Brown, Gilbert Benedict, Edward Cook, Ella Davis, Mabel Dominick, Robert Hull, Hazel Gardner, Florence Hunter, Adelle Hubbard, Gertrude Johnston, Cora Kilbourne, Cassie Marsh, Lizzie McAllister, Glenn Morell, Maud Newell, Charles Pusey, Robert Reagan, Harry Scudder, Hattie Wilcox, George Washburn.

The Athletic Association held its election of officers on Tuesday evening when Mr. Henry Dibble was selected as president, and Mr. Grove Gilbert as treasurer. A committee composed of one member from the alumni, one from the student body and one from the faculty was selected as follows: Miss Mollie Cavanaugh, Mr. Harry Scudder and Prof. G. E. Edmunds. The Association is free from debt, has to its credit a splendid record for last year, and its friends are anticipating even a better record this year.

The dancing reception given by the A. K. A. fraternity in Church's hall on Friday evening was a most enjoyable affair. The hall had been prettily decorated with red and white bunting and American flags, and the electric bulbs were encased in Japanese lanterns, producing a mellow light. The guests were received by Prof. and Mrs. James Fairgrieve, Prof. G. E. Edmunds and Mr. Gilbert Benedict. Wilson's orchestra furnished delightful music for dancing, which was enjoyed until a late hour. Luncheon was served at the Boardman cafe.

The play "Our Regiment" which will be presented by the class of 1904 will be given on Class Night, and from the manner in which the rehearsals [illegible] we may expect a [illegible] will be as follows:

New Law Firm.

Attorneys W. S. Hillick and Herbert J. Fanning of this city have entered into a co-partnership, and on Monday they commenced the practice of law under the firm name of Hillick & Fanning. The young men comprising the firm are too well known in this city to need introduction or commendation from the Times. Mr. Hillick is city attorney and has enjoyed a good and increasing practice since opening his office, at No. 19½ First street, where the new firm is located. Mr. Fanning has been in the law office of Mead, Stranahan & Guile for several years and enjoys the confidence of our citizens. The young men are united in their determination to build up for themselves a substantial practice. In this ambition they have the hearty good wishes of all who know them, in which the Times sincerely joins.

Hospital Benefit.

The O L. G. club composed of the following members, the little Misses Mary Webb, Mary Hunter, Zelma Allen, Ruth Allen, Francis Allen, Marion Lake, Gertrude Lake, Barbara Gilbert and Katherine Wettengel, will have a sale of aprons, wash cloths, handkerchiefs, candy, etc., at the home of Mrs. A. Wettengel, in Buffalo street, on Saturday afternoon of this week at 3 o'clock. An autograph quilt will also be disposed of. The proceeds from the sale will be applied to the purchase and fitting up of a crib for the new City Hospital. The young Misses deserve and will undoubtedly receive a liberal patronage.

Just received! A fine assortment of rich cut glass at G. B. Farley's.

DIED.

In the death of Robert G. Post, Oswego has sustained a loss which she keenly feels. Mr. Post was one of the substantial business men of that city and this fact, coupled with his sterling qualities of mind and morals, made him an ideal citizen and one whose place it will be difficult to fill. He was actively identified with Oswego's largest interests and stood for the betterment of his home city. He will be sadly missed in his home, church and business circles

The sudden death of Margaret Kimber, aged 53, occurred at her home, No. 508 Worth street, on Friday afternoon. The deceased had not been feeling very well for a fortnight past but her death was wholly unexpected and came with cruel force to her daughters, Mrs. Mary Clarke of this city and Miss Anna Kimber of Rome. The funeral services were held from the late home on Sunday afternoon at 4.30 o'clock, Elizabeth Chapter, O. E. S., of which order the deceased was an esteemed member and at the time of her death she held the office of chaplain, attending in a body, and the ritual of the order was invoked at the grave. The Rev. John Richards was the officiating clergyman. Interment was made in Mt. Adnah.

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

A sweet and devoted mother has been taken from her home where she had made sunshine and harmony for many long years.

Mrs. Charlotte Baldwin Holden departed this life on Thursday morning, April 28. She had been in a state of great weakness for a long time, suffering from lung trouble, but up to the last, retained all her faculties, and was so patient, appreciative, gentle and grateful for all the loving attentions that were given her, that it was a delight to minister unto her wants.

She was born in Baldwinsville, June 6, 1818, and for the greater part of her long life of eighty-five years had lived in Fulton. [illegible] two of whom survive her, a son and a daughter; she leaves three grandchildren and nine great grandchildren.

She had been a devoted member of Zion church for more than forty years; always true and loyal to its interest, and as long as her health would permit she loved to worship within its walls.

The old arm-chair in the home is vacant, but the memory of the gentle mother will ever live in the hearts of those who are left, 'till they meet the united family beyond the river.

She never seemed aged, and her loving heart responded so fully to the wants of her children that they can but call her blessed.

Death has left an aching void which can never be filled by another.

The beautiful spirit of the mother remains while she is but translated to her upper and brighter home on high, where all her pain and all her sorrows are ended, and her tears are forever wiped away. Her Heavenly Father has a beautiful mansion prepared for her, and her life work made her fit for one of the stones in the great Temple being builded above.

We do not mourn. "God's will be done." He had given her a long and useful life and many blessings amid her sorrows. Her life was full of work for the Master, and her home, and the words, "Well done, good and faithful servant," are hers.

"Blessed are they who die in the Lord. Their works do follow them."

Funeral services were held at Zion church last Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

It is with feelings of infinite sadness that we chronicle the going out of another young life, and one which gave promise of a future rich in usefulness. When it was announced on Saturday that Henry T. Dibble was seriously ill at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. Abbott on Oneida street, a great deal of sympathy was expressed, but hope was given for his recovery, and the announcement of his death, which occurred at 5 o'clock on Tuesday morning stunned with its cruel force his friends in this city. It was not until Sunday that the hopelessness of his case was known and his parents, the Rev. and Mrs. S. T. Dibble, were summoned by telegram from Ogdensburg, where they had gone but two weeks before, leaving their son as well as usual, although his health had not been the most robust since last Summer, when he suffered an injury to his spine as the result of a fall from a 15-foot building at Thousand Island Park. He had disclaimed the statement that anything serious was the matter with him and the slight indisposition which he now and then experienced, had been laid to his rapid growth, as he was but 15 years of age, yet had the stature of a young giant. He was a student as well as an athlete and application to his studies perhaps did not aid him to gain strength, so that when this last call upon his vitality was made, it was not equal to the emergency, paralysis developed and death became inevitable. The deceased was born in Gouverneur, July 24, 1889, and came to this city with his parents when but 4 years of age, and this has been his home ever since. His cheery disposition, unselfish nature and loyalty to purpose, had made him a prime favorite and mourning is deep and genuine at his death. He was a student in the High school, a member of the First M. E. church and on Wednesday last he was elected president of the Athletic Association by his fellow members in the association.

The funeral services will be held from the home on Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock and from the First M. E. church at 3:30. Interment will be made in Mt. Adnah. Besides the parents, the deceased is survived by one brother, the Rev. W. W. Dibble of Vernon Centre, and a little sister, Emma.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

In as much as God, in His infinite wisdom, has seen fit to take from our midst our beloved friend and school mate, Henry Dibble; be it

Resolved; That we the teachers and pupils of Fulton High School, do hereby express the great love we have for one who by his natural ability won our admiration, by his studious application [illegible] respect, and by his cheery, merry-hearted, lovable nature endeared himself to all who knew him and be it

Resolved; That we do hereby wish to express our gratitude for the privilege of having known and of having been associated with one so true, so brave, and so manly; and be it

Resolved; That we extend to the grief-stricken parents and brother our deepest sympathy, knowing that, however great is our sorrow, they suffer the greater burden of anguish, and be it finally

Resolved; That a copy of these resolutions be sent to this family and that a copy be published in each of the city papers and in the school paper.

MABEL CHESLEY,
GLENN STREETER,
FRANCIS MORIN, Committee.

In Oswego on April 29, Mary J., daughter of John and Debra Edland, and wife of John R. Dowdle, aged 31, passed to rest. On Tuesday the funeral was held from her parents' residence, No. 102 East Seneca street and also at St. Paul's church.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to extend our thanks to the neighbors and friends who so thoughtfully aided us in the last illness and death of our beloved husband and father. To them we feel a deep indebtedness for words of comfort and deeds of kindliness. To the members of Neahtawanta, lodge, I. O. O. F., we would render especial thanks.

Lamentable Accident.

A lamentable accident occurred on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mr. George Rappole on the Emory road. John G. Rappole, aged 70, who was the guest of his son, George, fell from the barn loft to the ground floor, a distance of over twelve feet, breaking his neck.

Last Call ON $12 Ranges.

The $12 gas range is now almost a thing of the past with us, there being but SEVEN of them left in stock. When these SEVEN have been sold—which of course will be within the next day or two—there will be no more of these ranges with DOUBLE OVENS for $12. The time has therefore arrived for prompt decision and prompt action, and the question is do you or do you not want one of these regular $21 ranges for $12? If so, call on us without delay and secure it.

Only Until Further Notice Will We Pipe Free to Ranges.

Free piping is something we have been offering to all who might wish to buy ranges, and the offer is extended until further notice, but owing to the considerable expense incident to the laying of the service, the setting of the meter and the piping from meter to range, this "free" offer will not be continued indefinitely. This fact renders it doubly important that you give the gas range matter your attention, while the opportunity is open.

REASON NO. 3.

A third reason why you should not delay lies in the fact that the warm weather is upon us. Every day will see us busier and busier and less able to give customers as prompt attention as they may desire. We therefore further urge that you secure your range and take your place in turn.

An Open Letter.

From the Chapin, S. C., News: Early in the Spring my wife and I were taken with diarrhoea and so severe were the pains that we called a physician who prescribed for us, but his medicines failed to give any relief. A friend who had a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy on hand gave each of us a dose and we at once felt the effects. I procured a bottle and before using the entire contents we were entirely cured. It is a wonderful remedy and should be found in every household. H. C. Bailey, editor. This remedy is for sale by H.C. TEAL'S CORNERS.

John S. Teal, a well known and highly respected citizen of this place died at his home on Wednesday of last week, from cancer of the stomach. He had been in failing health for four years although able to oversee his work until December when he went to a Syracuse hospital for an operation which proved unsuccessful, and while he became well enough to return to his home, he has been slowly failing ever since. His wife, mother and sister were in constant attendance upon him, and everything possible was done to alleviate his suffering, but it was impossible to prolong life. He was united in marriage in 1886, with Miss Emma Terpenning of Ira, and his widow and three sons are left to mourn his demise. He was a successful farmer and was universally respected. The deceased was a christian, having united with the Lysander M. E. church several years ago. The funeral was held from his late home on Saturday, the Rev. C. A. Wilson officiating. A large number of sorrowing friends attended. Interment was made in Lysander cemetery.

MAKING MATCHES.

Hand Labor and Slow Methods When the Industry Was New.

The first really efficient lucifer match must be put to the credit of Mr. John Walker of Stockton-on-Tees, who in the year 1827 placed them on the market under the name of "Congreves," in compliment to Sir William Congreve, the inventor of the war rocket. These matches were sold for a shilling a box, which contained, besides a few dozen of the matches, a little piece of folded sandpaper, through which each splint of wood had to be drawn before it could be made to inflame. An original tin box, stamped with the royal arms and bearing the word "Congreve," is preserved as a curiosity in one of the London museums.

As in the case of all other industries, this one was initiated by hand labor alone. The splints of wood were no doubt originally dipped in the igniting composition one by one, but subsequently they were tied up in bundles and dipped en bloc, the workman giving each bundle a twist with his hands so that the end of each splint would be free to move to a certain extent and absorb a little more of the compound than it would if kept quite still. The next advance was to fix the splints in a frame so that each was separated from its neighbor, and this frame, containing about 1,500 matches, would be brought down on a marble slab upon which the composition was spread. The tipped matches, still in their frame, would then be dried in air for a few hours and afterward placed in a heated chamber to complete their desiccation. Manual labor is now almost wholly dispensed with in the manufacture of matches. The employment of yellow phosphorus for the charging of matches made the industry a very unhealthy one, and the workpeople, if not in the best of health, ran the risk of contracting a terrible disease known as necrosis of the jawbone, the vulgar name for which was "phossy jaw." With improvements in manufacture this evil has now been eliminated.—Chambers'.

When the Sap Rises

Weak lungs should be careful. Coughs and colds are dangerous then. One Minute Cough Cure cures coughs and colds and gives strength to the lungs. Mrs. G. E. Fenner, of Marion, Ind., says, "I suffered with a cough until I run down in weight from 148 to 92 lbs. I tried a number of remedies to no avail until I used One Minute Cough Cure. Four bottles of this wonderful remedy cured me entirely of the cough, strengthened my lungs and restored me to my normal weight, health and strength. Sold by H. C. Giesler.

Great Excitement.

There was a flurry among the local agents of the excise bonding companies, a few days ago over a report that agents of the companies in Fulton were writing the bond for $10 whereas the local price was $13. An agreement had been entered into by the local agents fixing the price as stated. When the report came from Fulton it was feared that there might be a grand rush for that place on the part of the Oswego dealers.

One of the agents therefore made an investigation and learned that the report was true, but that it applied only to Fulton dealers, the price of the license there being less than that for Oswego.

One bonding agent here had written several bonds for Fulton men at the Oswego rate prior to the news from Fulton but whether or not he returned the difference between the rates, is not known. Therefore however, $10 was the price for Fulton dealers, and $13 for Oswego men.—Palladium.

Whooping Cough.

"In the Spring of 1901 my children had whooping cough," says Mrs. D. W. Capps, of Capps, Ala. "I used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy with the most satisfactory results. This remedy keeps the cough loose, lessens the severity and frequency of the coughing spells and counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. For sale by H. C. Giesler.

There is one rational way to treat nasal catarrh: the medicine is applied direct to the affected membrane. The remedy is Ely's Cream Balm. It restores the inflamed tissues to a healthy state without drying all the life out of them and it gives back the lost senses of taste and smell. The sufferer who is tired of vain experiments should use Cream Balm. Druggists sell it for 50 cts. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York, will mail it.

The "War Extra" in Japan.

The Japanese press is showing a rapid evolution toward Western models. The events of the present war are responsible for "extras," which are sold in the streets by newsboys, or rather newsmen, in true American fashion. The newsmen are bare-limbed, with a tenugui, or sort of napkin, around the head, and a small bell at the belt, which rings as they run. The special news supplement, or "extra," is known as the gogwai. The text in a Japanese newspaper, or any other periodical, begins at the first line at the head of the right column and reads down. The first line gives the name of the paper, the date, the price, postal instructions, etc.; the second line, the "catch heading's" of the extra. The reading is done vertically, just as in the title. The interesting and significant portions are emphasized by black points at the side, which serve the purpose of large type or italics.—From "What the People Read in Japan," in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for May.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 4, 1904.

ATTORNEY GENERAL KNOX has decided that the exclusion of the Chinese is valid according to law after the treaty with China expires. China can go and do likewise and exclude both Americans and their merchandise. Sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander.

HON. ROBERT B. ROOSEVELT, uncle of the President, says he has the highest appreciation of his nephew personally, and of his unselfish and unquestioned devotion to the public good. And Mr. Roosevelt is an old-time Democrat.

THERE is to be established at St. Louis a home for unprotected and respectable girls who may go to that city to attend the fair. Miss Helen Gould has given $1,000 towards the project. Notices will be posted in the railway trains pointing out how to find the home.

CONGRESSMAN BURKE COCKRAN having had poor success in Albany, N. Y., pleading for Tammany hall in the Democratic State Convention, returned to Washington, and last Saturday discharged a whole broadside of oratorical guns in the House. The effect was startling. All the mines and torpedo boats of the Republicans were in action at once, and there was a small Port Arthur conflict.

A JUDGE has been found in Iowa who holds that Dakota divorces are invalid. He claims that a residence in Dakota, for the statutory period, is insufficient evidence of a bona fide change of residence. No one claims that it is. The party seeking a divorce remains long enough to comply with the statutory law.

REPUBLICANS of Maine are enthusiastic over President Roosevelt. Once it used to be said: "As Maine goes so goes the Union." They share in the feeling which is common throughout the country of respect for the President's courage, and patriotism; and commend the wisdom with which he has conducted our home concerns, as well as those in the far East.

THE emigration of Americans from our Northwestern States into the Northwest territory of Canada is becoming a matter of considerable concern. The land proves to be very fertile. It is stated that the increase in cereals there from 1898, when it was 9,000,000 bushels, reached, in 1893, 33,000,000 bushels. It is not surprising that farmers are crossing the border.

DR. E. E. HALE, the 84-year-old chaplain of the Senate, returned last week to Boston, to occupy his own pulpit in the South Congregational church. He had thoroughly enjoyed his stay in Washington and said the most pregnant week of all was the second one in January when the great peace conference met, and many notable speeches were made by General Miles, Carnegie, the Cardinal, and other gentlemen.

AT last W. J. Bryan has taken the advice of his friends and "hired a hall. This he did in Chicago a few days ago, paying all the expenses, and throwing open the doors to the public. When the crowd collected he proceeded to debate, define, defy and demolish the Hill-Parker Democratic platform of the New York State convention. He said it is "ambiguous, uncertain, evasive and dishonest." This is about as bad as it could be and shows that the Democratic flying machine badly needs a steering apparatus.

PRINCE PU-LUN, a cousin of the Emperor, Hwang Hsu, of China, arrived in Washington on Saturday. He was met at the depot by the [illegible] minister, accompanied by Col. [illegible], who represented the President. He was rapidly driven to the [illegible] Hotel, preceded by a mounted policeman on a bicyle, and followed [illegible] others on the same machines. [illegible] kept the road clear by shouting [illegible], bakers and automobiles [illegible] way and keep out of the road. [illegible] wore a long peacock feather [illegible] cap, and appeared to be a [illegible] genial young man. As [illegible] reached his hotel a big yellow flag was run up with a picture of a terrible dragon trying to swallow the sun. While in Washington the Prince will receive much official attention, both by the President and other government chiefs. It is deemed to be good policy to treat him with politeness and hospitality if we wish to cultivate closer commercial relations with China.

THE Canadians have done a wonderful thing; bored a tunnel through the rock under the Horseshoe falls of Niagara, opening it at a point behind the falls where a great volume of water pours over. Other magnificent views have also been obtained by branch tunnels. Rooms have been fitted up in the tunnel, with glass ends, so that one can take an ice cream, a cigarette, or a hand of whist, behind the wonderful falls, sitting on a sofa, high and dry, and at the same time study the submarine wonders of the greatest cataract on the globe. What a place for love-making during the dog days!

LIFE INSURANCE MEN CONVENE.

An Enjoyable Banquet Given by the Officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, Under the Management of R. B. True & Co., Syracuse, to Their Collaboraters in Central New York.

One of the important events in Syracuse during the past week was a complimentary dinner given at the Yates on Thursday evening, by the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, to over one-hundred of their field men working in the twenty-nine counties of Central New York, which have been under the management of R. B. True & Co., their managers, at Syracuse for more than thirty years.

After a superb menu had been disposed of and coffee and cigars were passed, Second Vice-President Gage E. Tarbell of New York was introduced by Mr. R. B. True, as the first speaker of the evening, and in his rousing address the "Majesty of work," was emphasized, which is one of the important factors of success in any line of work, particularly that of the insurance agent. It is important to state that Mr. Tarbell began his remarkable insurance career as an agent of R. B. True & Co.

Mr. Tarbell was followed by Dr. W. R. Bross, medical director of the Society; Dr. Franklin C. Wells and H. L. Rosenfeld, also from the home office in New York, and by Mr. George E. Brainard, well-known in this section, being a native of Oswego county.

The spontaneous enthusiasm and applause which greeted the speakers, particularly during Mr. Brainard's talk, emphasized the unswerving loyalty of this body of men, not only to the society which they have the honor to represent, but to Mr. True and Mr. Brainard, under whose efficient management they are privileged to work, furnishing abundant evidence that they certainly expect to keep the Equitable business in New York State, where it has been for many years—far in excess of any other company doing business in the State.

The Big Circus Coming.

The announcement that Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows wil exhibit in Syracuse on Tuesday, May 17, will be received with more than usual interest by the people of this neighborhood. The Ringling Brothers have a name that stands for all that is new, novel and entertaining in the circus line, and the management announces that this season the show has been enlarged to such an extent that a whole extra train is used in addition to the four trains of last season. The show is now transported from place to place in eighty-five seventy-foot cars, constructed especially for the Ringling Brothers. In connection with the circus proper, in which the arenic performance is marvelous, the Ringling Brothers are this season presenting the beautiful and sublime spectacular production of Jerusalem and the Crusades. This pantomimic play necessitates the use of 1,200 actors and actresses and of almost three hundred horses. It is presented on the largest stage ever used for exhibitional purposes. Special excursion rates have been arranged for on all lines of travel by Ringling Brothers and those who desire to go to Syracuse, where this great circus exhibits can do so at a comparatively small cost. This will be the only point in this vicinity where the circus will exhibit this season and no one should miss the opportunity to see it. Watch this paper for additional announcements.

The officials who visited Geneva last week for the purpose of informing themselves as to the best paving for Third street and the relative cost of the different materials, returned home delighted with what they saw and very strongly in favor of macadam as the best pavement for the street. A public hearing will be given in the City Hall on Friday evening of this week.

It is now confidently expected that the D. L. & W., R. R., company will re-lay the planking at the crossing in Leach street which Mr. D. S. Baldwin finds necessary to the successful conducting of his mill. It is thought the action will not be much longer deferred as it is undeniably a hardship for Mr. Baldwin and the railroad officials who have looked the matter over, seem disposed to be fair.

in waiting a week on your tailor, when you can come here and walk off with a suit that fits as good as any "merchant tailor's," and embodies the snappiest style and the handsomest materials.

Then think of the variety you have to select from. What merchant tailor can lay before you such a varied assortment from which to match your individual preference?

Added to all this, the price is very much lower than you would have to pay the tailor. Have you any objections to saving the difference?

Black rot has been very destructive upon the cabbage and cauliflower in New York State and any means of relief, even slight, will be welcomed by growers. Recent investigation by the Station at Geneva have proven that the germs of the disease may be carried over Winter on the dry seed, a fact previously doubted by scientists, and that these germs may produce the disease when inoculated into healthy plants. It is, therefore, a wise precaution to disinfect the cabbage seed, as removing one possible source of infection. This can be done very cheaply, easily and safely by soaking the seed for 15 minutes in corrosive sublime solution, 1 to 1,000 strength. Full details of this investigation will appear in Bulletin No. 251 of the Station, which will appear soon, and which will be sent without cost to any one applying to the Director at Geneva for it.

The St. Louis World's Fair

Magnitude and Beauty of the Exposition, Which Is to Be Opened on April 30

WHEN President Roosevelt from his desk in the White House presses the electric button that will set in motion the machinery at the St. Louis world's fair on April 30, the largest, most comprehensive and beautiful exposition in the history of nations will be formally opened.

The exposition, which will celebrate the acquisition of the great Louisiana territory by the United States, in magnitude, cost and interest outstrips all its predecessors. Heroic work has been done by President David R. Francis and his corps of assistants to make everything ready, and when the gates are swung open to the public the exposition city will be practically completed.

PRESIDENT D. R. FRANCIS.

Its enormous size may be best illustrated by comparison. There are 1,240 acres in the site, which means a tract nearly twice as great as that occupied by the Columbian exposition at Chicago, four times the Pan-American site at Buffalo and almost four times the Paris exposition of 1900. The exhibit palaces have under roof about 130 acres. At Chicago eighty-two acres was the space occupied by exhibits. The city of St. Louis appropriated $5,000,000 for the exposition, and St. Louis citizens and corporations subscribed $5,000,000, making $10,000,000 from St. Louis. The congress of the United States appropriated $5,000,000, and later made a loan secured by the gate receipts of $4,600,000, which, with additional appropriations for buildings and special exhibits, brought the amount the United States government has invested in the Louisiana Purchase exposition up to $11,288,000. State appropriations amount to about $6,500,000 and foreign governments appropriated about $6,000,000. Fully $4,000,000 has been expended on the Pike, which brings the total cost of the exposition, without counting value of exhibits, up to nearly $40,000,000.

The site is a tract nearly two miles long and about a mile and a half wide, but one finds most of the principal attractions in the center of the exposition. Here is the Plaza of St. Louis, and this leads to Art hill, crowned by the noble Hall of Festivals. This hall is flanked by a majestic colonnade a quarter of a mile in length, and in front and adorning the slope of the hill are the cascades, with their sculpture, plants and flowers all reflected in the bosom of the Grand basin, which lies at the foot of the hill. The effect of this reflection is exceedingly beautiful in the sunlight of the day, and at night, when the electric illumination is turned on, the scene is simply indescribable. Still, some attempt may be made to explain how the enchanting effects are produced. The stage whereon the prime glories of the fair are created is an arc shaped hill, measuring 1,900 feet from tip to tip of the horn, with a depth of 110 feet from summit to base. From the base of the hill to the opposite side of the central lagoon is a distance of 1,500 feet. The Grand basin itself has a diameter of 600 feet.

At night it is intended that this whole territory of the cascades shall be treated simultaneously with light effects.

This scene is at the center of the fair, and the buildings containing the exhibits, etc., are spread out on all sides. Behind the colonnade and Festival hall is the Art palace, costing $1,000,000 and containing paintings and sculpture and other objects of art valued at several millions of dollars. In front and spread out between the avenues which radiate between the Grand basin and cascades like the ribs of a fan are eight great exhibit palaces, all in the same general style of architecture, which makes a harmonious picture, and all ranging in size from 500 to 1,300 feet in length, the largest of these, the Palace of Transportation, being almost a quarter of a mile long and having four miles of railroad tracks within its walls. These buildings, with the colonnade and cascades and Festival hall and Art palace, make the central picture. They are known as the palaces of Liberal Arts, Manufactures, Varied Industries, Transportation, Machinery, Electricity, Education, Mines and Metallurgy. A striking exhibit in the Palace of Mines is the statue of Vulcan, fifty feet high and weighing fifty tons, which is cast in iron from Alabama. This immense figure stands in one of the main aisles.

To the left of the main group as one faces the cascades and standing on the slope of a hill is the noble structure erected by the United States government. Still farther up the slope is the really imposing Missouri State building, and disposed attractively in the wooded portion of the world's fair site lie over forty other buildings erected by state governments, many of them strikingly handsome. This is called the Colonnade of States. Terminating this colonnade are two ornate buildings surmounted by statuary. Their design is exceedingly graceful and conforms to the style of the colonnade and Festival hall. They are used as restaurants, and from them one may view the fountains of the cascades while enjoying luncheon or dinner.

IRON STATUE OF VULCAN, FIFTY FEET HIGH.

On the other side of the central group one finds most of the foreign pavilions, the vast Agriculture building, over 1,600 feet long; the Horticultural building, the Temple of Fraternity, the reproduction of Jerusalem, the Forestry and Fisheries building, Administration building and Hall of International Congresses.

At the exposition will be gathered the most cosmopolitan population ever assembled at one time, and it will come from all the four corners of the earth. Not only is the exposition to attract visitors from all parts of the United States, Canada, South America, Europe, Asia and Africa, but the permanent population of the world's fair for the exposition season is to be made up of the most motley assemblage ever got together.

The immense Philippine reservation is inhabited by nearly 500 of Uncle Sam's new subjects, including both the civilized Filipino and barbarian from the savage tribes of north and central Luzon.

A detachment of 500 Boer fighters has arrived, and a Patagonian king and his suit journeyed all the way from the southern end of South America to England and thence to the United States in order to participate in this gathering of the nations.

ALL EYES ON ESOPUS

Democrats Are Guessing if Judge Parker Will Do For a Candidate.

Hill, Belmont, Sheehan—Are They the Names to Conjure With?

The action of Hill and the Democratic convention in instructing New York's delegates to the national convention to support Judge Parker has turned the eyes of Democrats of the entire country toward Esopus, the home of the chief judge of the court of appeals.

Ever since the convention there has been a discussion of the methods of the convention and its platform as widespread as the continent, and the question has been and still is, Will the country accept Judge Parker at the estimate put upon him by the men who dominated the convention and made the platform?

Hill of course was the ruling spirit. With him were August Belmont, the traction magnate and agent in this country of the Rothschilds, and William F. Sheehan.

Judge Parker is still clothed with the dignity that wraps about a chief judge, and he says nothing. His views on the issues of the campaign, on the great questions which confront the nation, are unknown.

Some Fear Wall Street.

The impression is growing that Judge Parker's candidacy is backed chiefly by men who represent what is termed the Wall street interests. Hill, they think, will take any end of any game if it promises power and influence for him. They admit that he has discredited himself. The whole country knows that he has no fixed principles. It did not shock his sense of decency to put into his party platform last year the socialistic coal plank, which proposed federal seizure and control of anthracite mines, and this year to switch to the opposite extreme and declare that "corporations chartered by the state" must be subject to regulation by the state and "no centralization."

Mr. Belmont, it is well known, stands for Wall street, and by some it is regarded as significant that Mr. Belmont and Judge Parker were in conference a few days before the convention, discussing, it is reported, the planks of the platform. There is still talk that Mr. Belmont will be either treasurer or chairman of the Democratic national committee if the Hill programme goes through.

The platform and Hill and Belmont are all the guarantees the Democrats in distant states have as to Judge Parker's availability. Democratic senators at Washington do not commit themselves to the creed of this state's Democracy. It is reported that they think they see an intention to let the Sherman antitrust law become a dead letter and abandon any attempt at federal supervision of monopolies. In the absence of anything to the contrary they attribute the sentiments of the platform to Judge Parker.

May Be Fun Ahead.

What will happen at St. Louis is a question. It is predicted that when the delegates from all over the country find that Hill, Belmont and Sheehan are the moving spirits from this state, that James T. Woodward of Wall street and Harry Payne Whitney, the young traction magnate, head the list of electors and that a candidate suitable to these men is what New York puts forth for them to swallow there will be those who have been trying to make an issue that the "peepul" will stand for will make Rome howl.

Massachusetts has instructed for Olney; Wisconsin has a favorite son in the person of E. C. Wall; Missouri is going to vote once for her Senator Cockrell; Hearst has scattering delegates in several states; in Illinois the old Altgeld legions are said to be rampant; Pennsylvania has not instructed, and her delegates are controlled by J. M. Guffey of Pittsburg, who is reported to favor McClellan; Gorman is lying low and ready for anything that will help Gorman; the solid south, except Texas, professes to be willing to follow New York, and so the situation is entertaining and one which Republicans, who are to a man for Roosevelt, may view without any alarm.

Hill the Dictator.

Cordially hated by many, mistrusted by others and loved by none, his policy really representing a small percentage of the Democratic voters of the state, Hill has dominated the state convention and the caucuses which preceded it. He is the Democratic dictator of the state even more than when he was governor or senator.—Jamestown Post.

COUSIN OF THE CZAR

GRAND DUKE CYRIL, WHO WAS WOUNDED AT PORT ARTHUR.

Third In Line of Succession to the Romanoff Crown—The Russian Submarine Boat Petr Kochka—General Zilinski, Chief of Staff.

The Grand Duke Cyril, who was wounded in the disaster to the ill fated battleship Petropavlovsk, which caused the death of Vice Admiral Makaroff, is the eldest son of the Grand Duke Vladimir, uncle to the czar, and therefore in the line of succession to the Russian throne. As the present czar has no sons, only the Grand Duke Michael, Nicholas II.'s brother and heir apparent, and Grand Duke Vladimir stand between Cyril and the Romanoff crown.

GRAND DUKE CYRIL.

The Grand Duke Cyril, who is only twenty-eight, has already served in both the army and navy of Russia, and is considered an efficient officer in both branches of the service. He is a captain in the Fifty-second infantry regiment and was for a time an officer on the cruiser Admiral Nakhimoff. Emperor William of Germany some time ago appointed him on the staff of the German navy and gave him the order of the Black Eagle.

The young grand duke has a strong yet good natured face and inherits the enormous physical strength of the Romanoffs. He has traveled a great deal and visited the United States in 1898, remaining in this country a month or so. While here he conducted himself with great decorum, attracting much less attention than did his younger brother, Grand Duke Boris, who came here in 1902. Boris stirred up quite a tempest in a teapot at Newport by leaving the dinner table at which he was being entertained because his hostess' butler served her before giving the grand duke his soup.

The Grand Duke Vladimir and his wife, who was born Princess Marie of Mecklenburg, play a conspicuous part in Russian society. They are rather easy going and devote most of their time to pleasure, although Vladimir holds or has held some high commands in the Russian army. They had no end of trouble with their daughter Helen before she married the son of the king of Greece. It is said that among her other achievements she blinded her governess for life by throwing vitriol at her one day when the governess had corrected her for some fault. Her parents had to give the woman a handsome pension.

who can not stand the shocking strain of laxative syrups and cathartic pills are especially fond of Little Early Risers. All persons who find it necessary to take a liver medicine should try these easy pills, and compare the agreeably pleasant and strengthening effect with the nauseating and weakening conditions following the use of other remedies. Little Early Risers cure biliousness, constipation, sick headache, jaundice, malaria and liver troubles. Sold by H. C. Giesler.

Weak Hearts

Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.

Mr. D. Kauble, of Nevada, O., says: I had stomach trouble and was in a bad state as I had heart trouble with it. I took Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for about four months and it cured me.

Kodol Digests What You Eat

HILL'S NEW BIG FOUR.

Democratic Delegates at Large as Sized Up by Their Own Party.

Fortunately Judge Parker is not bound by the timidities of the Albany platform. He can, as Mr. Cleveland did in 1892, make his own platform on the great living issues, and he must do so if he is to carry New York. No doubt he appreciates the fact that nothing can hurt him more with the people than a suspicion that his election is desired by those gentlemen in Wall street who oppose Roosevelt because of his attack upon illegal trusts and monopolies.

The selection of the four delegates at large was another mistake. The names are disappointing. They will command neither respect at home nor influence at St. Louis. Mr. Hill is a "narrow gauge" politician, with a long series of blunders and failures to his discredit. Ex-Senator Murphy, a protectionist and one of the perfidious manglers of the Wilson tariff reform bill, is a "has been." Mr. Ridgway is known politically as simply an unimportant member of the Brooklyn local machine. As for Mr. Ehret, he is a "successful brewer" without education, destitute of political knowledge, experience or standing—a mere money bag.

To add to the incongruities between the platform and the men selected to represent it, the name of James T. Woodward, the astute president of the Hanover bank and a prominent member of the Morgan gold syndicate that bedeviled President Cleveland's administration—a combination which the World had the pleasure of smashing—appears as the first presidential elector at large. Why and wherefore Woodward?—New York World.

A Cure For Piles.

"I had a bad case of piles," says G. F. Carter, of Atlanta, Ga., "and consulted a physician who advised me to try a box of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. I purchased a box and was entirely cured. It is splendid for piles, giving relief instantly, and I heartly recommend it to all sufferers. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is unequalled for its healing qualities. Eczema and other skin diseases, also sores, cuts, burns and wounds of every kind are quickly cured by it. Sold by H. C. Giesler.

The Thoughts That Filled the Maiden and the Old Lady.

It was 9 o'clock in the evening, the night of the great dance in the assembly room.

She was almost ready. A few final touches, a little readjustment before the mirror, and then, beautiful and stately, she stepped out into the hall and slowly descended the stairs.

She was very young, but her calm, serious face, her ease and perfect poise and other certain little gestures of surety in herself indicated that she was not new at the business of the evening. Somehow there was a touch of sadness to her face.

As she passed down the stairs she paused in front of the library, with her party wrap over her arm. In the library, her face half shaded from the evening lamp, sat an old woman. Her silver hair was smoothed back from a forehead that time had not spared from wrinkles.

She looked up from the book she was reading with a bright smile.

"Off again, my dear?" she said.

"Yes, grandma. It's another dance. I had to go. But it's so tiresome."

She sat down wearily and gazed for a moment absently into the flickering fire on the hearth. There was a brief silence; then the old woman spoke:

"My dear, you do not seem yourself tonight. Of what are you thinking?"

Her granddaughter looked up.

"Of the past," she said, with a sigh. And then she said as she rose and gathered up her wraps:

"But, granny, you seem unusually cheerful tonight. Of what, pray, are you thinking?"

And the old woman replied, "My dear, I was thinking of the future."—Twentieth Century Home.

Hill, Whip in Hand.

Here you are, Bryan Democrats, anti David B. Hill Democrats, it is up to you now to face a situation as disagreeable to you as it is dangerous to the whole country. The defeated and discredited ex-Senator Hill, the politician of politicians, the corporation lawyer, the defeated candidate for governor, one time repudiated by the better element of his own party, now in the saddle, whip in hand, completely in control of the Democratic party in New York.—Northern Tribune.

Rheumatic Pains Relieved.

The prompt relief from the severe pains of sciatica and rheumatism which is afforded by Chamberlain's Pain Balm, is alone worth many times its cost. Mr. Willard C. Vail, of Poughkeepsie, N. SHADES OF OLD HICKORY!

What Would He Say of the Hill-Belmont Outfit, Anyway?

Shades of old Hickory! What would he think of fixing on a candidate because he was inoffensive and had no known opinions? What would he think of the Democratic party of the greatest state of the Union being controlled by a deal between a financier like Mr. Belmont and a political trimmer like Mr. Hill, who now appears as the apostle of conversatism after at the last convention out-Bryaning Bryan with his socialistic coal plank? It was a curious coincidence that the same Mr. Raines of Rochester who two years ago, as chairman of the platform committee, projected that coal plank for Hill upon a startled convention, yesterday, as Hill's temporary chairman, indulged in sonorous periods about the Democracy's conservatism and devotion to state rights. We are perfectly prepared to believe that Judge Parker is a man of principles, whatever they are, but it is evident that these men who appear as his champions have no principles. They shout socialism when they think an industrial crisis makes such an appeal promising and are all for property and the poor well lost when Mr. Belmont tells them that Wall street is disgruntled with the president and may be won over by a milk and water platform.—New York Tribune.

FORAKER ON ROOSEVELT.

Every man knows that nothing but death can prevent the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt. Nothing else should prevent it.

He succeeded President McKinley under the most embarrassing circumstances. The policies upon which we had entered were then not only still on trial, but they were on a trial of such character as to make their solution difficult and doubtful.

Only a strong, vigorous man who had a clear conception of the necessities of that situation could have taken up the work that dropped from the hands of McKinley and prosecuted it with the success that has characterized the efforts of Mr. Roosevelt.

We hear it said that he is unsafe, that he is one of unsound judgment, that he is emotional, that he is too quick on the trigger; but what thing has he done that justifies any such criticism?

His administration of public affairs in the Philippines has been without fault. His treatment of Cuba has met with unqualified approbation. His recognition of the republic of Panama was justified by the precedents and has been sustained with great unanimity by both the senate and the people.—From the Speech of Senator Foraker Before the Vermont Republican Convention.

While there has been no mention of submarine boats in the reports of the naval battles around Port Arthur, it is not unlikely that this new engine of naval warfare may be given a trial before the conflict is over.

So far as known Japan has no submarines, but it is believed that Russia has two or three of them in the east. Early in the winter an entirely novel type of this class of vessel, named the Petr Kochka, was launched at Cronstadt, and several others were being pushed to completion with all speed.

The most original feature of the Petr Kochka is the fact that she was built in nine sections, presumably with the idea of her easy transportation over the Siberian railway to the Pacific. The Petr Kochka is seventy-seven feet long, fourteen feet beam, has a displacement of twenty tons and carries a crew of twelve men. Her motive power on the surface is a petrol engine, and while submerged she is driven by an electric motor. The three center sections contain the propelling mechanism, and the stern and forward sections are cut away at the top and bottom and are fitted with planes for raising and lowering her. The armament consists of two Whitehead torpedoes. The Petr Kochka was built from designs made by Lieutenant Kolilbassieff of the Russian navy.

WHARFAGE FREE AT ST. LOUIS

Twenty Miles of River Front For Water Craft at World's Fair City.

Free wharfage will be given to all boats landing at St. Louis during the World's Fair. Traffic Manager Hilleary of the Exposition and Joseph P. Whyte, harbor and wharf commissioner of St. Louis, have decided on the locations assigned to the various kinds of boats.

Yachts, steam launches and all boats propelled by their own power have been assigned wharf space between Choteau avenue and Biddle street. These streets, running east and west, form the boundary lines for the central business district of the city.

House boats have been assigned wharf space north of Biddle street and south of Choteau avenue.

St. Louis has a river front of twenty miles. The Broadway line of the Transit company parallels the river from the city limits on the north to Jefferson Barracks on the south. At no point are the cars more than five blocks from the Mississippi river. The World's Fair may be reached for one fare by transferring to any of the eight lines that cross Broadway and reach the Exposition grounds.

No charge will be made for wharfage. Application for space should be made to the harbor and wharf commissioner at the City Hall, on Twelfth street, between Market street and Clark avenue.

Pretty Customs of Japan.

Japanese ladies are like the French in their love of social intercourse and conversation. They pay fewer visits, but stay infinitely longer, always two or three hours and sometimes a whole day. They are received by the maid, who places a large silk cushion for them to rest upon, and much time is spent in detailed inquiries concerning each other's family. There is no special calling day in Japan. They visit when their fancy takes them, and they never go empty handed to a friend's house. The gifts are usually fruit or flowers or perhaps a fresh fish, and whatever they take is always daintily wrapped in a little box of paper or wood.

PREVENT APPENDICITIS

What Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. Kennedy's NEW Medicine, did for Mr. George A. Owen.

Appendicitis is prevented by the prompt use of Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. Kennedy's new medicine. When the bowels are not performing their functions regularly and constipation results then there is danger of an attack of appendicitis. The proper treatment is to strengthen and at the same time cleanse the bowels. For this purpose Cal-cura Solvent has been found extremely certain and thorough.

Mr. George H. Owen, of Hardenburgh, N. Y., was advised by four physicians to enter a hospital and have an operation for appendicitis performed, but he heard of Cal-cura Solvent and used it with the most gratifying results. All symptoms of appendicitis were removed and he has been in perfect health ever since. Mr. Owen's attack was unusually severe and dangerous and he is confident Cal-cura Solvent saved his life. $1.00; all druggists.

The Joy of Owning A Gun.

"A boy gets out of owning a gun all the joy there is in it," says a well-known writer in the Illustrated Sporting News. "There are mighty few pleasures, anyway, that a man can have that a boy does not have on a smaller scale, but more intensely.

"Some boys are hungrier for guns than others—that is partly a matter of what there is handy to shoot—but I never knew a boy who did not want a gun, and did not delight in it when he got it. It is not because of any innate murderousness in the boyish disposition but merely because the gun means power, suggests the relaxation of apron strings and is an exceedingly important and interesting piece of mechanism."

Such opinions have been offered by writers the country over. The movement for this "gun education" of the American boy was begun by the J. Stevens Arms & Tool Co. of Chicopee Falls, Mass., makers of the famous "Stevens" firearms. The catalogue of this company is a mine of information on gun owning, and makes excellent reading for grown-ups as well as for the boy. It will be mailed free.

WEEKS & CO TRUNKS

COWS TRAINED FOR THE TEST

Jerseys at the World's Fair Are Expected to Show That They Are Superior to All Other Breeds.

The herd of Jersey cows assembled at the World's Fair at St. Louis to represent the Jersey breed in the universal dairy test has been inspected and has been pronounced in perfect condition and ready to start upon their six months' grind on a day's notice.

W. R. Spann of the Burr Oak Jersey farm, Dallas, Tex., was the inspector, and he was thorough in his work. He passed a week on the Exposition grounds, and much of the time was spent in and around the Jersey cattle barn, and the condition of each individual of the herd of forty cows was definitely ascertained.

Never was more intelligent and careful treatment lavished on animals. No athlete was ever better trained for a contest requiring the development of speed, skill and endurance than has been this herd of Jerseys. When it is known that this herd is to compete with selected herds of Holsteins, Shorthorns, Brown Swiss and Devons, and the herd making the best score for the production of butter, milk and cheese is to establish the standing of the various breeds, the importance of the cows being in perfect condition may be understood.

For a solid year the Jerseys have been in constant training. Twenty-five cows will participate in the contest. Cows were selected from the best herds in the United States.

Dr. J. J. Richardson, president of the American Jersey Cattle Club, under whose auspices this entry is made, toured Europe and visited the famed Isle of Jersey, where the breed originated. He was seeking the best cows, but returned satisfied that Europe could show no cows that were better than those bred in America.

Though only twenty-five cows will participate in the test, forty cows were selected. They were assembled at Jerseyville, Ill., a year ago. This is near St. Louis, and the cattle have become acclimated. Last December they were removed to St. Louis. The cows are the property of individual members of the club and are loaned for the term of the test. C. T. Graves, a breeder at Maitland, Mo., was selected as the superintendent to have charge of the cattle, and he has been highly complimented by Dr. Richardson and Inspector Spann for the wonderfully fine condition in which he has placed the herd.

A series of model dairy barns have been built for the breeds competing in the test. The barns are octagonal in form, and are so arranged that the cows are in the center and a wide promenade permits visitors to pass around and view the cows as they stand in their stalls.

The milking and feeding are to be done in plain view of the public, and representatives of the various herds will at all times have access to all the barns to see that no sharp practices are indulged in.

The test not only consists in showing the amount of butter, milk and cheese produced, but the cost of production is taken into consideration. Every ounce of food given each cow is weighed and carefully recorded. When the cows are milked, the milk is conveyed to a model creamery in the Agricultural building, where it is tested and made into butter and cheese and where all records are carefully kept.

The Jersey cattle participated in a similar test at Chicago during the Columbian Exposition and carried off first honors.

Superintendent Graves is sanguine over the result of the present test. He says that the Jerseys have always demonstrated their superiority over all other breeds when placed in competition, and this time they will show to better advantage than ever. Not only is the Jersey milk richer in butter fat than the milk of any other breed, says Mr. Graves, but it can be produced at a less cost. The Jersey cows are the smallest of the standard breeds, and he asserts that they consume less feed. They assimilate their food, and it is converted into milk and butter and is not used in building up and sustaining a large carcass.

"We are going to make all other breeds take to the woods after this test," said Mr. Graves. "A few days ago I was testing some of our Jersey milk, and my hands were all sticky and greasy from the enormous amount of butter fat the milk contained. Mr. Von Heyne, who is in charge of the Holsteins, sent over a quantity of his milk for me to test. Of course, from a commercial standpoint, there was no comparison between the milk, but it was a pleasure to test his milk, for when I got through there was no grease on my hands. After this I will have a bucket of Holstein milk around handy to wash my hands in after testing our own rich Jersey milk."

The test begins May 16 and continues 120 days.

"BULLDOG OF THE NAVY."

Vice Admiral Skrydloff, Who Succeeds Makaroff at Port Arthur.

Vice Admiral Skrydloff, who has been appointed by the czar to succeed Vice Admiral Makaroff as commander in chief of the Russian naval forces in the far east, is an officer of great determination and iron will, characteristics which have won for him the sobriquet of the "Bulldog of the Navy." Before receiving his new appointment Skrydloff had been stationed at Sevastopol, where he was in command of the Black sea fleet.

Next to Vice Admiral Makaroff, the new commander of the eastern fleet is the most popular man in the Russian navy. He is considered a very able sailor and the best strategist in the naval service of the czar. But with all his skill and courage it would seem that Vice Admiral Skrydloff can accomplish little with his new command. The loss of the battleship Petropavlovsk and the crippling of the battleship Pobieda leave the Russian naval force in the far east so inferior in strength to that of the Japanese that it is practically useless. It is also stated that Russia has no intention of sending the Baltic squadron to re-enforce Skrydloff, as it is deemed necessary to keep it in readiness for contingencies in home waters.

Born 1831. Died Saturday, May 6, 1904

DIED.

Isaac Darrow, aged 73, passed to rest at his home on the river road on Friday after ten years of semi-invalidism, the major portion of which he was suffering greatly with heart trouble. The deceased was born in Floyd, Oneida county, and came to Fulton thirty-four year ago to take the management of the then Gardner & Seymour mill, which position he held until declining health prevented his participating in life's activities. He was united in marriage when about twenty years of age with Miss Sempronia Kelly, who with three sons survives him. The deceased was one of our best known citizens and was highly respected. He was a member of the old volunteer fire company and for several years held the office of chief. The funeral services were held from his late home on Monday afternoon, the Rev. John Richards officiating. Appropriate music was rendered by the male quartette. Interment was made in Mt. Adnah. The widow and three sons, Messrs Delevan A., Francis M., and Frederick I., are left to mourn his loss, Sarah, the only daughter, dying several years ago.

Mrs. Julia Tyler, aged 80, died at her home in Lysander on Saturday, and the funeral was held on Monday. The deceased was a sister of Mr. D. M. Perine of this city.

Mrs. Nancy Thompson, aged 87, died at the home of Mrs. Catherine Henting in this city on Monday. The funeral services were held this morning. Interment at Granby Centre.

Russell M. Loomis of Glens Falls, a son of John Loomis, a former resident of Fulton, where he was engaged in the grocery business, was accidentally drowned last week in the St. Maurice River, Canada.

M. S. Hungerford, who formerly conducted the Lewis and Clark hotels in this city, died at his hotel in Oswego on Monday, after a prolonged illness, although he had only been confined to his bed for a short time. The deceased was a member of the Elks, Knights of Pythias and the Masonic fraternities.

Charles Mudge, M. D., aged 72, died at his home in Phelps on Thursday after a brief illness. The deceased was born in this city and was an uncle of Mrs. H. L. Lake. The funeral was held in Phelps on Tuesday under the auspices of the Masonic Lodge, and the remains were brought to this city for interment, Post Schenck G. A. R., having charge of the burial service.

Maria A. Howell, widow of the late Orlando Howell, died at her home in Oswego Falls on Monday after a brief illness. The deceased who was 76 years of age, had been a resident of Fulton for over 50 years. The funeral services will be held from her late home on Thursday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, the Rev. John Richards officiating. Interment in Mt. Adnah.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, It has pleased the Great Grand Master of the Universe to remove by death from this community and this earthly fraternity of the I. O. O. F., our friend and brother, H Lawrence, and

Whereas, Brother Lawrence was a good citizen, a tender husband and father, the oldest and one of the most earnest, untiring, unselfish and respected members of the lodge; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved family of our deceased brother our heartfelt sympathy in this their hour of affliction.

Resolved, That we, as brothers and Odd Fellows, hold Brother Lawrence in tender remembrance; that our charter be draped in mourning thirty days; that these resolutions be published in the local press, and a copy thereof presented the bereaved family.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, It has pleased God in His infinite wisdom to again enter our chapter and another link in our chain has fallen away in death. On April 29, Sister Margaret Kimber departed this life after a very brief illness. Our deceased sister was an active, zealous and devoted member of our order. She leaves behind her a bright record of fidelity to its principles and devotion to its welfare. Her earthly troubles are past. Her place among us and in her home is vacant. She has drawn aside the curtain that veils the great unknown and rest has come to her. She has gone to her reward.

Resolved, That the sudden removal of such a life from our midst leaves a vacancy and a shadow that will be deeply realized by every member of our order; therefore,

Resolved, That we tender our sympathy to the hearts that have been bereaved by the death of their dear one, in this the hour of their affliction.

So let her sleep, that dreamless sleep,
Our sorrows clustering round her head;
Be comforted, ye loved who weep,
She lives with God; she is not dead.

Resolved, That our altar and jewels be draped in morning for thirty day.

Resolved, That these resolutions be recorded on the minutes of our order; that a copy be presented to the family of our deceased sister and copies printed in the local papers.

THE WIZARD OF OZ.

Musical Extravaganza Will be Presented at the Richardson, Oswego, May 19—Special Train from Fulton.

"The Wizard of Oz," the new musical extravaganza, which appears at Richardson Theatre, Oswego, Thursday, May 19th, has been running all Winter and Summer in New York to audiences that tested the capacity of the Majestic Theatre at every performance. The new spectacle abounds in wonderful stage effects that are said to eclipse anything ever seen in this country. One marvel of stagecraft in "The Wizard of Oz" is the transformation at the end of the first act, in which a field of poppy flowers in full bloom are metamorphosed through a change of seasons from Summer to Winter. This novel transformation is the invention of Stage Manager Julian Mitchell, whose reputation as the producer of all the burlesques and extravaganzas at Weber & Field's Music Hall, New York City, guarantees that "The Wizard of Oz" will be something unique and enchanting. One of the leading New York critics described the beautiful poppy scene in the following glowing terms: "This scene," he writes, "is as perfect and as harmonious as the rainbow. The stage is dark at first and then we see rain falling gently, and through the rain we discern faintly at first a field of gorgeous poppy flowers of gigantic size. The rain ceases, the sun rises, a golden glow fills the atmosphere and emphasizes the scarlet of the flowers, which now raising their heads in the grateful sunshine are discovered to be young and graceful women. Then the shadows fall, darkness covers the scene and the snow comes down, and when light breaks again the flowers are wilted and withered and we find ourselves in the heart of Winter. Too much praise can hardly be given to Julian Mitchell, who conceived this picture in his imagination, nor to the celebrated artist, Walter Burridge, who made it actual."

There at least half a dozen stage pictures in "The Wizard of Oz" that are equally beautiful and unique.

The company is composed of seventy-five people, with orchestra of eighteen musicians.

Prices, 50 and 75 cents, $1 and $1.50.

Gas Range Weather

and the Woman in the Kitchen.

We have all been wishing for beautiful, so-called, "gas range" weather, now that we have had a taste of it every woman who owns a gas range is congratulating herself, and every one who does not is naturally wishing that she too owned one, for working over a hot coal or wood range, when the temperature outside is away up in G, is not the most enjoyable occupation imaginable.

Surely every wife and mother is entitled to a few of this life's comforts, doubly entitled to them when there is money to be saved by having them. Any user of a gas range will attest that it is cheaper to cook and bake with gas than with either coal or wood, besides what comfort, what a saving of time.

Our Aim.

We aim to make it possible for every family in Fulton to use a gas range, to that end we offer to lay mains on streets on which there are none, we offer free piping from mains to ranges, we offer ranges at cost, and even offer to sell them on easy terms to people who may find it more convenient to obtain this greatest home comfort in that way. The chance is a great one, it is open only for a limited time, while it lasts it means a great saving to all who buy ranges, but a heavy expense to the gas company. If you are interested in the gas range question, and are thinking of getting one, call and see the ranges and make a choice, by doing so promptly you will give us a chance to fill your order before the very busy season is fully on.

Crowds Going to the Circus.

Intense interest has been aroused in this community by the announcement that Ringling Brothers' immense circus is to exhibit in Syracuse on Tuesday, May 17. Several big excursions will go from this vicinity and local people will be well represented at the big show. Those who go from here should make every effort to arrive in time to see the magnificent new free street parade, which is given in the morning preceding the opening performance. Three miles of parade glories are divided into thirty sections and each section is a show in itself—a parade such as the world has never seen before. In this wonderful display are shown 108 beautiful dens, lairs and cages of rare wild animals, a herd of forty big and little elephants, 650 horses, and over 1,000 people. One section of the procession is devoted to magnificent and costly floats, representing Germany, Russia, England, France, India, Persia, Scotland, the United States and other countries The performance that follows, which includes the superb spectacular production of Jerusalem and the Crusades, is the most magnificent display of arenic wonders ever presented by any amusement enterprise in America. The menagerie is filled to overflowing with rare beasts and birds, including the only baby elephant bred and successfully raised in the United States, the only rhinoceros in captivity and the last living pair of giraffes.

There is one rational way to treat nasal catarrh: the medicine is applied direct to the affected membrane. The remedy is Ely's Cream Balm. It restores the inflamed tissues to a healthy state without drying all the life out of them and it gives back the lost senses of taste and smell. The sufferer who is tired of vain experiments should use Cream Balm. Druggists sell it for 50 cts. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York, will mail it.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 11, 1904.

IT is only a question of time when the old silver dollar of our fathers will be scarce and valuable, since Congress has decreed that they be recoined into subsidiary coin.

ON the last day of April the United States transport, Thomas, sailed for Manila with $17,000,000 in silver coin for the Philippines. This is a partial new solution of the silver question.

IT has been discovered in Baltimore that the last Winter in that city was the coldest in eighty-seven years. It was also the hottest ever known in its history; at least it had the biggest fire.

AT a recent meeting of French manufacturers it was decided that there is no cotton like the American, and they propose to use it. They refused to join England and Belgium in their effort to down American cotton.

IF the torpedo proves to be the coming naval weapon of warfare, as some experts anticipate, England and her big fleet may be injured under the fifth rib. It will be remarkable if all the big war ships are to turn turtle and become obsolete.

THE New York School Board has finally decided that the teachers may marry and still continue to teach school. That has long been the custom in Utah. In fact in some Utah households a teacher is so much married he can set up a select school of his own under the family roof-tree.

IN the House of Representatives there are 206 Republicans, and 177 Democrats. A net change in fifteen districts would give the Democrats control of the House, provided it was the right kind of change. But "safe and sane" as the Democrats think they are, it cannot be done.

THERE was a time when Russia thought that to fight the Japanese would be like snuffing out a candle. Now they announce that the Japs are too alert; that they attack in the night; that their guns have enormous range, and that they have a host of infernal inventions which the rest of the world does not possess.

ONLY three years ago Judge Alton B. Parker wrote: "I have no ambition whatever for political office, whether executive or legislative." He appears to be a philosopher which the result of the next election will not disturb in the least.

ENGLAND has what may be called a "rum aristocracy." The discovery has been made that in that country there are 167 peers, 129 members of Parliament, and 880 titled persons, who are financially interested in the liquor trade. And yet there are honest and well-meaning people in that country who work and preach for temperance reform.

No matter what happens some people are always happy. A clergyman in Bridgeport, Conn., recently said to his congregation that he was glad he was so sorry to leave them. A Philadelphia paper says there is no reason to regret the loss of the surplus in the Treasury as it is really a gain.

A GIANT rice trust has been formed in some of the Southern States, to control the cultivation of that cereal and boom the market. Steps have been taken in Texas to fight the unlawful combination. The great trick is to induce Americans to live on a diet of rice after the manner of the Chinese.

FROM the 5th to the 10th of September the International Arbitration Conference will be held in St. Louis. The American committee has the neat little sum of $50,000 with which to entertain the delegates and pay fo their transportation. To show them how anxious we are for universal peace it is proposed to have a battle ship in New York harbor to welcome those who come from Europe. Later on they will be carried to Washington to shake hands with the President.

Prof. Losey Presents Othello.

The reading of Othello by Prof. F. D. Losey of Syracuse University, in the City Hall on Wednesday evening, under the auspices of the federation of literary clubs of this city, was a delightful treat and one thoroughly enjoyed by the representative audience present.

Prof. Losey has been a deep student of the Shakesperean plays and his interpretation of the different characters in Othello was nearly faultless. He more especially charmed his listeners with his conception of Iago, and he brought out with exceeding fineness the character of Othello as he conceived it. If he made Othello's crime appear more pardonable than would the casual reader, it was because careful of his character had revealed its fuller strength to him. Perhaps one may never have the privelege of listening to a more conscientious portrayal of this great, if not the greatest, of Shakespere's plays, than that given by Prof. Losey, and the inspiration which prompted the committee to invite him to appear before the clubs and their friends, was indeed a happy one.

The speaker was introduced by Mr. E. R. Redhead, whose guest he was during his sojourn in this city.

The proceeds from the entertainment will be applied to the Public Library fund.

Daughters of the American Revolution

The regular monthly meeting of the local chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, was held at the home of Mrs. C. J. Bacon in Oneida street on Monday afternoon. There was a large attendance of Daughters and a most interesting afternoon was spent. Regent, Mrs. James Vincent, was a delegate to the thirteenth Continental Congress held in Washington, D. C., in April and she gave a concise report of the workings of that body. The Misses Adelaide and Alice Schenck also attended the Congress, and they and Mrs. Frank Foster read papers on the work accomplished. Mrs. Bacon served her guests with ice cream on china plates a century old and the silver spoons with which the cream was eaten, were in use over 100 years ago. The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of Mrs. Frank Foster, June 6

A "silver shower" will be given on Friday afternoon, May 27, from 3 to 5, at the home of Mrs. James Vincent on Rochester street. The proceeds will be used to purchase a clock for the city hospital. Each Daughter will have the privilege of inviting six ladies. It will be in the nature of an informal reception, and a brief musical program will be rendered during the refreshment hour.

in waiting a week on your tailor, when you can come here and walk off with a suit that fits as good as any "merchant tailor's," and embodies the snappiest style and the handsomest materials.

Then think of the variety you have to select from. What merchant tailor can lay before you such a varied assortment from which to match your individual preference?

Added to all this, the price is very much lower than you would have to pay the tailor. Have you any objections to saving the difference?

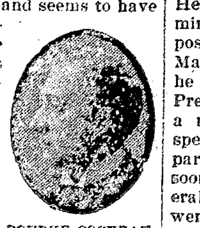
People Talked About

BOURKE COCKRAN, the New York lawyer, orator and congressman who recently had a sensational colloquy in the house with Representative John Dalzell concerning the allegation that Cockran was paid to make Republican speeches in 1896, has the biggest head and the greatest voice in congress. He was born in Ireland, and seems to have inherited the eloquence of old time Irish orators. He is also a master of repartee and a hard man to beat in debate. In the Chicago convention years ago, when Cockran made his celebrated speech in opposition to the nomination of Grover Cleveland, he fairly excelled himself in the use of biting satire and sarcasm. One of the delegates, William U. Hensel, attorney general of Pennsylvania, seemed annoyed by Cockran's speech against Cleveland and resented the threatening attitude of Tammany Hall. So he said to Cockran:



BOURKE COCKRAN

"Pennsylvania comes here for Grover Cleveland, but Pennsylvania does not come here to make any threats against the Democratic party."

"Pennsylvania threaten the Democratic party?" roared Cockran in reply. "Why, at the last election Pennsylvania gave a Republican majority of 200,000. In God's name, what threat can Pennsylvania make to the Democratic party?"

Hensel joined as heartily as any one else in the peal of laughter that followed this outburst.

Representative John Dalzell of Pennsylvania, trusted counselor of three speakers, Reed, Henderson and Cannon, and opponent of Bourke Cockran, is a veteran congressman of nearly a score of years' experience in Washington. Despite his long term of service he always has stage fright for hours before he makes a speech. "That reminds me," he said the other day, "of an incident that occurred years ago. President McKinley and I were waiting at a hotel to be driven to a hall where we were both announced to speak. Mr. McKinley sat calmly smoking his cigar, while I was pacing up and down just as I am now.

JOHN DALZELL.

"'Major,' I said, 'don't you ever get nervous before speaking? You are as cool as a cucumber, and I'm as nervous as the valedictorian of a young ladies' seminary.'

"'My dear Dalzell,' he replied, 'the difference between us is this: You have got your speech in your head, and I've got mine in my pocket.'"

Representative Jacob Ruppert of New York tells this anecdote about Dalzell. One day Ruppert was talking with a bright faced page about ten years of age.

"Who had you appointed?" Mr. Ruppert asked.

"Mr. Dalzell of Pennsylvania," the youngster answered.

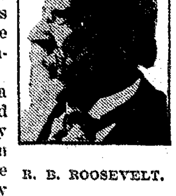
"I suppose when you grow up you are coming to congress to succeed Mr. Dalzell?"

"Well, I'd hate to crowd Mr. Dalzell out," answered the page hesitatingly.

Robert B. Roosevelt, uncle of the president, who recently declined to allow his name to be placed on the Democratic electoral ticket of New York, has all his life been a Democrat and a figure of national prominence in the party.

In declining the honor of presidential elector Mr. Roosevelt stated that, while he was opposed to the policies of the Republican party, he had every confidence in the ability and integrity of his nephew, to whom he was warmly attached. He also said that his duty to his family prevented him from arraying himself against its most distinguished member.

Always interested in public affairs, Mr. Roosevelt has frequently been chosen by his party to places of trust, and during the last campaign of Grover Cleveland he was treasurer of the Democratic national committee.



R. B. ROOSEVELT.

He comes from a distinguished and wealthy family which has lived in New York since 1648. For many years he practiced law, but fish culture and politics have been his chief pleasures. In 1871 Mr. Roosevelt was elected to congress, and during part of Mr. Cleveland's first administration he represented this country as minister to the Netherlands.

Mr. Roosevelt bears the distinction of being the only man living who was a member of the reception committee which welcomed the Prince of Wales, now King Edward VII., to New York in 1860. He was also a member of the reception committee during the visit of the Russian Grand Duke Alexis in 1871.

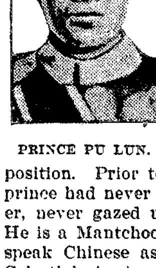
The president's uncle is a gentleman of the old school, rich, contented and a philosopher. He is a noted angler, a good story teller and numbers a host of friends on both sides of the Atlantic. He is the author of various valuable works upon fish culture.

Russell B. Harrison who is fighting the will left by his distinguished father, Benjamin Harrison, president of the United States, was not pleased when his father married a second time, and he and his stepmother, formerly Mrs. Mary Scott Lord Dimmock, who is also his cousin, are not on the best of terms. Major Harrison has had a varied experience as mining engineer, newspaper man, cattleman, electric light and trolley magnate, soldier and lawyer. He held several minor government positions prior to May 12, 1898, when he was appointed by President McKinley a major in the inspector general's department. He was soon after assigned to the staff of General Fitz-Hugh Lee, with whom he went to Cuba after the surrender. He was provost marshal of the Seventh corps, in which position he is said to have made a fine record. He was later sent to Porto Rico, where he was summarily but honorably dismissed from the army.

RUSSELL HARRISON.

When he was provost marshal of the military camp at Jacksonville in 1898, Major Harrison rigged up a shower bath for the benefit of soldiers who became intoxicated. One night a big Texan who was brought in saw the major standing near by clothed in spotless white duck. In a second the Texan seized the hose and turned it on the major, who was drenched to the skin. On another occasion the major was about to arrest a soldier in citizen's clothes. The soldier claimed to be a plain man of peace and said he had never been in the army. Suddenly Harrison shouted "Attention!" The "civilian" braced himself up and put his heels together with his hands at his side. "I think you are a good enough soldier to be with your regiment," said the major with a laugh, "and you'll be there tomorrow."

Prince Pu Lun Tsee, who might have been emperor of China and may be yet, is one of the distinguished visitors to America just now. The prince is president of the Chinese commission to the Louisiana Purchase exposition and was recently received by the president in Washington and entertained at breakfast by Secretary of State John Hay. He travels in great style, with a suit of sixteen attendants; wears, among other things, a yellow jacket and a three eyed peacock feather, and has been kotowed to all his life. He is only thirty years of age, is both nephew and cousin of the present emperor of China and would now be emperor himself but for the plotting of the dowager empress. He is the first member of the royal family of China to leave the empire and participate in an instructive demonstration of the world's progress as typified by the St. Louis exposition. Prior to his present trip the prince had never seen an ocean steamer, never gazed upon the ocean itself. He is a Mantchoo Tartar and does not speak Chinese as it is spoken by the Celestials in America and in southern China. Even Chan Man Shang, the San Francisco millionaire, could not speak five words the prince could understand, it is said. Wong Kai Kah, a Yale graduate, is his secretary and interpreter.



PRINCE PU LUN.

Justice Henry Billings Brown of the supreme court of the United States, who has happily recovered the sight of his right eye, which for a time it was feared would follow the left into total blindness, has for many years been a familiar figure on the streets of Washington. Before his sight became impaired Justice Brown vied with Justice White as the walker of the court. He was born of a good family in Massachusetts, graduated from Yale, attended law lectures at both Yale and Harvard and in 1860 went to Detroit. He is fond of telling that he had but one letter of introduction when he went to New York. "Only one," he says in telling the story. "Think of that!"

JUSTICE BROWN.

"But to whom?" the listener always asks.

"It was from Rufus Choate to Joseph Choate," Mr. Brown replies without a smile. Finally it dawns on the listener that the dignified jurist is chaffing him. What more could a young lawyer have asked than a letter from Rufus Choate to Joseph Choate?

Justice Brown will be eligible for retirement on account of age within two years. It is now believed that owing to the continued difficulty with his eyes he will make use of the retirement provision. Unless other causes intervene this will produce the next vacancy in the court, and Governor Pennypacker of Pennsylvania is mentioned as one of the conspicuous candidates for his seat.

His Remedy.

"What can I do for my little boy," asked mamma, "so that he won't have to eat between meals?"

"Have the meals flicker together," replied the greedy young man.—Glasgow Evening Times.

BY A KEEN OBSERVER.

Ex-Secretary Long's Impressions of the Workings of Woman Suffrage.

Hon. John D. Long, recently a member of President Roosevelt's cabinet, is not afraid that women will compromise themselves by exercising the right of suffrage. At a hearing recently given by the committee on election laws of the Massachusetts legislature, on Governor Bates' recommendation that women be enabled to vote for city and town officers, Mr. Long said in part:

"I was in Colorado and saw an election there. My daughters and their grandmother voted. I watched them, and as I saw the process the whole argument about contamination vanished utterly into thin air. The election in that Colorado city was as orderly as in Hingham or in any ward of Boston. I have a tender feeling toward my own; I should object to any infringement on the delicacy of their lives, but they were not put to half so much notoriety or exposure as they would have been in a street car, or at a concert, or in getting into this room. My daughter, who is now working as a physician in the New York slums, comes in contact with the saddest elements of a great city. The exposure to which she was subjected at the election in Colorado Springs was nothing to the exposure which she faces now and of which I am very proud.

"It is sometimes said that a woman ought not to vote because she cannot fight. This is not true; she can. Some women lately have shown themselves pretty heroic against invading burglars, while some men have run away. A vote has nothing to do with fighting; it is the expression of an intelligent opinion. Besides, we are not going to have much more fighting.

"It is said that women do not want to vote. Well, not half the men vote. You cannot drum them up to vote even in exciting elections. Most men do not want to vote, but if it is a question of right it would not be just to deprive me of a vote because some other men do not want it. It has been said that the best way to repeal a bad law is to enforce it. If the majority of women really do not want to vote, give them full suffrage, and they will at once elect men who will repeal it.

"There is no argument against equal suffrage on the ground either of right or of expediency. It takes little or no time. The ordinary man does not give three hours a year to the exercise of suffrage. There is nothing in it to impair the nature of women. It has been tried in the election of school committees, and who is conscious of the slightest effect which it has had in absorbing the time of women or of unsexing them or of affecting their domestic relations?"

ON A SOUND BASIS.

Arguments For Woman Suffrage Are Built on a Foundation of Reason.

Our cause is based upon the fundamental principles upon which our national government rests, that "taxation without representation is tyranny" and "governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed," principles which were not created by our government and which it has no power to abrogate or destroy, but are as old as humanity and will endure until humanity ceases to exist.

Suffragists have never assumed that the possession of the ballot is an end in itself, but a means to an end, which is the development of the individual through the responsibility of citizenship and the education which compels the voters to think and form opinions upon subjects outside of their own personal interests.

That a number of men and women perpetrated frauds at a recent election in the city of Denver does not in any degree affect the justice of equal suffrage. The hysterical effort of a portion of the public press to claim that "women were the leaders in these frauds" and that "they participated in them in greater numbers than men" would be grotesquely absurd if it were not pitifully true that the majority of people unthinkingly accept these wild exaggerations and distortions as if they were facts and base their opinions upon them.

Had this been the first time that voters had "repeated," "stuffed the ballot boxes or accepted or given bribes at elections there might be some show of justice in claiming that the participating of women had something to do with the corruption, but the fact that long before ever women voted wholesale use of tissue ballots, the voting of graveyards, lodging houses and poor farms and every possible form of intimidation, and even assassination, were employed in carrying elections would prevent any honest thinking person from claiming that woman's presence in politics was responsible for the election frauds in Denver.

Freeing Enthralled Minds.

The old fashioned Chinese thought his wife was not beautiful unless she had little feet on which she could not walk. Some of the young Chinese are learning that it is pleasanter for a man to have a wife who can walk by his side. Formerly men thought it desirable that a woman's mind should be cramped. The modern man is beginning to find out that it is more satisfactory to have a wife whose mind can walk side by side with his.—Gail Laughlin

THE MULTICOLORED STAR.

How to Make and Operate This Interesting Toy.

The multicolored star producer is an arrangement that any boy or girl can make and is a toy that is decidedly interesting. This is how to make it:

Fold a large, square piece of pliable cardboard in the center, like the cover of a book. In the center of this folded cardboard punch a hole with a strong pin, insert the point of a compass and draw a circle on the front and back of the folded paper three inches in diameter. In each of these two circles draw a triangle—one with the point upward, the other with the point downward. Cut these triangles out with a sharp knife. Open the cardboard almost flat and stand it upright on the table a short distance from a white wall or a large sheet of white paper. Place two candles in such a way that the two shadows of the two stars cover one another. This is done by moving the candlesticks sideways, or, if the candles stand too low, by putting books underneath the sticks. If you hold a glass containing a solution of red ink and water or green paint and water or a colored tissue paper spanned over a wooden frame between the flame of the candle and one of the triangles the star on the white wall or white sheet of paper will appear in three colors—the center white, while the points show the color of the fluid or the tissue paper and their supplementary colors. For red the supplementary color is light green; for green it is red, and for yellow it is violet.

Weak Hearts

Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.

Mr. D. Kauble, of Nevada, O., says: I had stomach trouble and was in a bad state as I had heart trouble with it. I took Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for about four months and it cured me.

A LABOR SAVING DEVICE.

Stone Age Methods In States Where Women Are Denied the Ballot.

To my mind the ballot is simply one of our many modern labor saving inventions. It is the easiest way. The ballot is nothing but an improved sledge hammer, a modern battering ram that enables us to wage the battle of life and observe its amenities at the same time.

In the ten years that women have been voting in Colorado I believe they have done at least five times as much as all the rest of the nonvoting women in the United States put together, and I base this modest claim upon the record of our statute books as compared with those of other states. For women stand relatively for the same thing everywhere, and their first care is naturally and inevitably for the child. Whatever we have done, other women wish to do. In many states they have tried and failed. The only difference is that they are using stone age methods, while we have those of the twentieth century.

No one who knows anything about our statute books will attempt to deny that Colorado women have revolutionized the attitude of our state toward the child. Two-thirds of their work has been for the children. But at this point let me say one word about what women have done. I have no desire to exalt Colorado women at the expense of Colorado men. The ballot box is not a dividing line; on the contrary, we have infinitely more interests in common than ever before. Indeed, the relation of men and women in Colorado reminds me of the English scrubwoman's eulogium on her lord and master, "Ah, my man's that good he's more like a friend than a 'usband!" We are in a minority by ourselves, and should hardly succeed in anything very bitterly opposed by our brothers.

A Cure For Piles.

"I had a bad case of piles," says G. F. Carter, of Atlanta, Ga., "and consulted a physician who advised me to try a box of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. I purchased a box and was entirely cured. It is splendid for piles, giving relief instantly, and I heartily recommend it to all sufferers. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is unequalled for its healing qualities. Eczema and other skin diseases, also sores, cuts, burns and wounds of every kind are quickly cured by it. Sold by H. C. Giesler

"THREE FISHERS."

The Incident Which Moved Kingsley to Write the Poem.

Charles Kingsley wrote the "Three Fishers" as a result of the many sad sights he had seen at Clovelly. One day of horror in particular lived in his memory, a day, as he described it, "when the old bay lay darkened with the gray columns of the waterspouts, stalking across the waves before the northern gale, and the tiny herring boats fleeing from their nets right for the breakers, hoping more mercy even from those iron walls of rock than from the pitiless howling waste of spray behind them, and that merry beach beside the town covered with shrieking women and old men, casting themselves on the pebbles in fruitless agonies of prayer as corpse after corpse swept up at the feet of wife and child, till in one case alone a single dawn saw upward of sixty widows and orphans weeping over those who had gone out the night before in the fullness of strength and courage." These scenes lived ever in his mind.

But the "Three Fishers" was written as a result of one of the strangest incidents in the stormy career of the preacher-author. In 1851 he preached a sermon in a London church on "The Message of the Church to the Laboring Man." At its close the vicar rose and denounced him. Bishop Blomfield forbade Kingsley to preach again in his diocese until, having read the sermon and seen its author, he withdrew the edict. The same night upon which he delivered his discourse Kingsley went to his home weary. There had nearly been a riot in the church. Sick at heart, he retired to his study. When he reappeared he handed to his family his immortal song, "as though it were the outcome of it all," as his wife said.

Pastimes In Japan.

In Japan to get up parties to behold the freshly fallen snow or the cherry blossoms or the maple trees in their autumnal glory or to go to the flower shows is as de rigueur as are our dinners, cotillons and theater parties. Mushroom hunting is a fashionable pastime, while in the house harp playing, verse writing, embroidering and tea drinking are the most absorbing occupations. The most pretentious entertainment is the tea ceremony. It is very formal, and there is much elaborate performance connected with it, difficult for a foreigner to comprehend.—Good Housekeeping.

WOMEN NEED THE BALLOT.

Fulfillment of Their Reform Duties Requires the Right to Vote.

The contribution of woman to the work of prison reform has been so valuable that her co-operation in every branch of penology is now regarded as a necessity.

We need in penology the help of women in doing not only what we know ought to be done, but also in finding out what ought to be done and in solving knotty and unsettled questions.

In the field of penology woman needs the ballot as she needs it in other fields, not as an end, but as a means; as an instrument through which she can express her conviction, her conscience, her intelligence, her sympathy and love. Questions in philanthropy are more and more forcing themselves in legislation. Women are obliged to journey to the legislature at every session to instruct members and committees at legislative hearings. Some of these days we shall think it absurd that women who are capable of instructing men how to vote should not be allowed to vote themselves. If police and prison records mean anything they mean that, considered as law abiding citizens, women are ten times as good as men. Why debar the better and enfranchise the worse? In the field of commercial and political competition women may demand the ballot as a right, but in the field of philanthropy and reform she needs it for the fulfillment of her duties.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its best work. An Open Letter.

From the Chapin, S. C., News: Early in the Spring my wife and I were taken with diarrhoea and so severe were the pains that we called a physician who prescribed for us, but his medicines failed to give any relief. A friend who had a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy on hand gave each of us a dose and we at once felt the effects. I procured a bottle and before using the entire contents we were entirely cured. It is a wonderful remedy and should be found in every household. H. C. Bailey, editor. This remedy is for sale by H. C. Giesler.

Zoological Nomenclature.

The buffalo in the United States is a bison; the partridge of Michigan and pheasant of Pennsylvania and other states is a ruffed grouse; the rabbit, so plentiful in the market at times, is a hare. Both species of grouse, the ruffed and the pinnated, are called pheasant, partridge and patrige, and the pinnated grouse is universally referred to as the prairie chicken. Prairie chicken is not a bad name for the pinnated grouse, for it is original and does not confound it with other birds, but it is not right to use the names partridge and pheasant when referring to our grouse, for these are the correct names of European specimens.

When Onions Are Odorless.

How many times has every flat dweller entered his home only to cry out in disgust because the odor of the onion or the turnip or something else has permeated the entire six or seven rooms?

"Let's stop having such things for dinner," he suggests to his wife. "Why, it's mortifying to invite a friend to dine when one knows this sort of atmosphere is going to knock him down as soon as he enters the door."

As a matter of fact, there is no need for excluding the onion or the other offending eatables. The simplest way in the world to solve the difficulty is this: Have the cook put into the cooking vessel with your onions just a piece of stale bread about as big as your fist. Somehow or other the bread absorbs the odors, and you don't know onions are on your menu until you sit down at the table.—New York Times

Whooping Cough.

This remedy keeps the cough loose, lessens the severity and frequency of the coughing spells and counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. For sale by H. C. Giesler.

[illegible] Apart Now.

From what he supposed was a safe distance the professor watched the ante-election riot. A brick carelessly thrown came in his direction.

"Who would ever think," he moralized, retreating to a still safer distance, "that the words 'polite' and 'politics' come from the same root!"

For the professor simply can't help shedding information even in the most unpropitious surroundings.—Chicago Tribune.

"WONDERFUL" IS THE WORD.

How and Why Cal-Cura Solvent, Cures Rheumatism, Blood and Urinary Diseases.

It is a wonderful discovery, this new medicine, that swiftly removes Stone, Red and White Gravel, from the Kidneys and Bladder, avoiding the intense suffering produced by these foreign bodies, and often rendering a dangerous surgical operation unnecessary. Cal-cura Solvent does this. The greatest work of Cal-cura Solvent, is that it prevents the formation of stone and gravel by dissolving uric acid and phosphatic sediments, thus purifying the blood and correcting all those uric acid conditions of the stomach which are responsible for the formation of uric acid or gout poisoning and rheumatism. Dr. David Kennedy said: "I consider Cal-cura Solvent the crowning achievement of my life. It will not disappoint."

City Hospital News.

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Hospital Association met at the home of Mrs. L. F. Joy on Friday afternoon to discuss the best plan for expending the $114 realized from the whist and flinch party given several weeks ago. It was decided to expend it in house furnishings in which the Hospital stands greatly in need. Few perhaps realize that beside the furnishings for the different rooms, a complete housekeeping outfit is needed and this the Ladies Auxiliary is endeavoring to provide. The bedrooms have all been furnished by different societies. Mrs. Abram Emerick, Mrs. W. G. Morton and Mrs. G. C. Webb comprise the Supply Committee and donations of money for this purpose would be gratefully received by them. Any one desiring to contribute articles of furniture, bath towels, curtains, &c., should confer with some member of the Supply Committee and they would tell them what articles would be most acceptable. Cash donations of ten cents even would aid the good work and assist in making the Hospital a permanent feature.

The rooms at the Hospital are completed awaiting the arrival of the furniture and very soon patients can be admitted.

President Bacon of the Association reports two cash donations of $50 each for the cause. A splendid operating table contributed by Dr. W. A. Hall of Minneapolis, Minn., has also been received.

O. L. G. Club Benefit Sale.

The sale held at the home of Mrs. A. Wettengell on Saturday afternoon for the purpose of raising funds with which to provide a crib and furnishings for the Hospital, was a success, the members of the O. L. G. club realizing $25 as the result of their labors. There were three tables containing salable goods, two of fancy articles made by the little Misses under the direction of Mrs. G. G. Chauncey, and one of home made candy A punch bowl was also liberally patronized.

Traits of Turkish Nomads.

The Yuruks assert that human souls return into the bodies of animals and that the spirits of the latter take also a human form and appear at determined epochs. This is certainly the reason why they are so kind to animals. A Yuruk loves his horse as much as his family. The horses have their place under the tent, and it is not uncommon to see them warmly wrapped in a magnificent robe when the Yuruk and his children are covered with rags.

Some other customs attest also a pagan origin. In the orient everybody knows that the Yuruks worship certain trees and rocks. These facts yield sufficient evidence that monotheism is by no means the essential dogma of their religion.

After the Baby's Trade.

A gentleman who recently advertised the birth of a daughter tells me that he has received in consequence almost enough stuff to stock a general shop. The outcome of his advertisement includes samples of a dozen or more different foods and preparations of milk, several consignments of different soaps, samples of well known brands of tea and other well advertised goods, not to mention specimen photographs from sundry firms desirous of depicting the features of the little stranger. He mentions that the only article that would be really useful in his household under the circumstances not received up to the present date is a baby carriage.—London Truth.

The Joy of Owning A Gun.

"A boy gets out of owning a gun all the joy there is in it," says a well-known writer in the Illustrated Sporting News. "There are mighty few pleasures, anyway, that a man can have that a boy does not have on a smaller scale, but more intensely.

"Some boys are hungrier for gun than others—that is partly a matter of what there is handy to shoot—but I never knew a boy who did not want a gun, and did not delight in it when he got it. It is not because of any innate murderousness in the boyish disposition but merely because the gun means power, suggests the relaxation of apron strings and is an exceedingly important and interesting piece of mechanism."

Such opinions have been offered by writers the country over. The movement for this "gun education" of the American boy was begun by the J. Stevens Arms & Tool Co. of Chicopee Falls, Mass., makers of the famous "Stevens" firearms. The catalogue of this company is a mine of information on gun owning, and makes excellent reading for grown-ups as well as for the boy. It will be mailed free.

HEART PROVERBS.

He that hath no heart ought to have heels.

A happy heart is better than a full purse.

What comes from the heart goes to the heart.

He who hath most heart knows most of sorrow.

A cheerful countenance betokens a good heart.

No estate can make him rich that has a poor heart.

The heart's testimony is stronger than a thousand witnesses.

A glad heart seldom sighs, but a sorrowful mouth often laughs.

The heart is the hidden treasure of man; the tongue is the gate to the treasure.

A good heart is the sun and moon; or, rather, the sun, for it shines bright and never changes.

There never was a heart truly great and generous that was not also tender and compassionate.

"Royal Oak Day."

May 29 is celebrated in many parts of Great Britain as "Royal Oak day," it being the anniversary of the restoration of Charles Stuart to the throne in England as Charles II. The celebration is not what it formerly was, having died out entirely in many of the southern counties of England. The day was formerly commemorated not only as the day of "restoration," but on account of the marvelous escape of Charles, who, after the battle of Worcester, climbed into an oak tree and hid from his pursuers among its branches. On "Royal Oak" those who celebrate wear sprigs of oak in their hats and use the leaves for various decorations.

POPULAR UNCLE JOE

SPEAKER CANNON, WHO MAY BE NAMED FOR VICE PRESIDENT.

Growing Sentiment In Favor of Man From Illinois—Prospect of Change Does Not Please the Old Statesman. His Quaint Wit.

Speaker Joseph G. Cannon, who has suddenly loomed up as a very strong possibility for the vice presidential nomination, is the most popular man, both among the leaders and the rank and file of the Republican party, yet mentioned for the honor of a place on the ticket with President Roosevelt.

The sentiment for Mr. Cannon seems to be both spontaneous and widespread, and the impression is gaining ground that his selection as the candidate for vice president would be far from displeasing to the administration.

On the other hand, Speaker Cannon is deeply concerned over the growth of opinion in his favor. The position of speaker, with its great power, second only to that of the president, is vastly more to his liking than that of presiding officer of the senate. The house of representatives, with its close contact with the people and incessant activity, offers peculiar attractions to a man of Mr. Cannon's temperament.

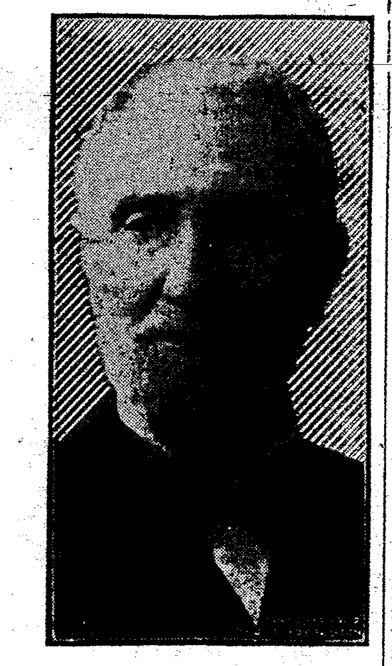
Notwithstanding Mr. Cannon's objection, if his party names him he will undoubtedly accept, for no man can decline the nomination for vice president, once it has been made, and hope to remain in public life.

Speaker Cannon is above all else a plain man. He doesn't like fuss and pretension, and when on the floor of the house he used to roll up his sleeves in the heat of debate and pound his desk with his fist. Many are the tales told of Speaker Cannon, some true and some not, but Uncle Joe never denies any of them.

"William," said Speaker Cannon to William Alden Smith of Michigan, the day after Smith nominated Cannon for president in a speech in the house, "that was very kind of you to nominate me for president."

"I'm glad you liked it," smiled Smith.

"Yes, William, and when I get to be president you can have John Hay's job.



SPEAKER JOSEPH G. CANNON.

You needn't bring any testimonials or use any influence. Just go right up to the state department and take your seat."

When the Philippine bill was put on passage a short time before the close of congress, the speaker said:

"All in favor will please say 'Aye.'"

There was a gentle piping of "Aye" on the Republican side.

"All opposed say 'No,'" continued the speaker. There was a thunderous burst of "No!" from the Democratic side.

"The 'noes' seem to make the most noise," said the speaker calmly, "but the 'ayes' have it and the bill is passed."

Personally Mr. Cannon is the most genial and companionable of men, and his company at dinners is eagerly sought. He can tell good stories with any man in congress, and if absolutely necessary can sing a song, after a fashion. Nothing pleases him more than to get around a table with congenial friends. He smokes big black cigars almost constantly, and when not smoking has an unlighted cigar in his mouth.

Of late years Speaker Cannon has spruced up a bit, but even now he is no fashion plate. He is a small man, about five feet and a half and slightly built. His shoulders stoop, and his arms hang loosely. He might be dapper if he tried, but externals do not bother Uncle Joe.

With a continuous service of nearly thirty years in the house of representatives, Speaker Cannon, the most original type in American politics, is all powerful in the councils of his party. During the past quarter of a century he has been an active and a vital factor in the enactment of all the important legislation that has found a place on the statute books.

Mr. Cannon is rich, he and his brother owning several banks in Illinois and [illegible] He also has large land holdings in Nebraska and elsewhere in the west. Money is no object to him. He meets everybody on the same footing, and every man is a man to him until the reverse has been proved. He is as plain spoken and democratic at a banquet where the president and the cabinet are guests as he is in the company of his cronies in the cloakrooms. Speaker Cannon is a native of North Carolina and is sixty-seven years old.

WORLD'S FAIR HOTEL ACCOMMODATIONS.

St. Louis Hostelries Prepared to Handle Vast Throngs—Prices Not to Be Increased—Hotel Inside of the Exposition Grounds With a Capacity For 6,000 Guests.

Ample hotel accommodations have been provided for the World's Fair visitors at St. Louis both within and outside of the Exposition grounds.

The Exposition management has organized a free information service. A pamphlet has been issued for gratuitous circulation explaining many of the conveniences that have been provided. A list of all the hotels, with rates, is contained in this pamphlet. The entire city has been canvassed, and many thousands of private householders have arranged to receive visitors. These houses are in every section of the city, and the rates at which guests will be received is a matter of record on the books of the bureau.

The Inside inn, a hotel on the Exposition grounds, has a capacity for 6,000 guests. The Exposition management has control of the rates, which have been fixed at from $1.50 to $3.50 per day, European plan, including admission to the grounds. On the American plan the rates range from $3 to $5 per day. The hotel is 400 by 800 feet and is three stories high.

There are more than 150 established hotels in St. Louis, and a signed agreement has been made between many of their managers with the Exposition officials that rates shall not be raised during the Exposition period. Many new hotels have been built on sites adjacent to the Exposition grounds, and the published fixed rates warrant the assertion that no one need pay exorbitant rates for accommodations either at hotels or private houses.

Among the new hotels may be mentioned the Hotel Napoleon Bonaparte, which stands at Clayton avenue and Skinker road, overlooking the Exposition grounds. This hostelry will accommodate 5,000 persons. The rates, European plan, are from $1 to $5 per day. The Grand View hotel, south of the Exposition, on Oakland avenue, has a capacity for 5,000 guests, and the rates are $1 to $1.50 per day, European, and $2 to $2.50 per day on the American plan. The Kenilworth, on West Park boulevard and Billon avenue, has a capacity of 1,500 guests, with a rate of $1.50 per day.

The above mentioned are a few of the new hotels that have been erected near the Exposition grounds for the accommodation of World's Fair visitors. All told there are about twoscore. All are within easy walking distance, and all are situated on high ground, with comprehensive views of the grounds. All of the structures are well built, and in some of them the most luxurious quarters are obtainable. The rates are established and will not be increased during the Exposition.

THE UNIVERSAL EXPOSITION

The Achievements of Individuals and Nations Faithfully Recorded by This Encyclopedia of Society.

By FREDERICK J. V. SKIFF, Director of Exhibits, World's Fair.

"The wisdom of all ages is none too great for the world's work." In this single salient sentence, uttered in his famous address at Buffalo in September, 1901, President McKinley described the object and the result of expositions.

A modern universal exposition is a collection of the wisdom and achievements of the world, for the inspection of the world, for the study of its experts, by which they may make comparisons and deduction and develop plans for future improvements and progress. Such a universal exposition might well be called an encyclopedia of society. It constitutes a classified, compact, indexed compendium of the achievements and ideas of society in all phases of its activity, extending to the most material as well as the most refined. It offers illustrations covering the full field of social performance, from the production of the shoes on our feet and the pavement beneath them to a presentation of the rarest and most delicate creations of the brains and hands of men in what are called the fine arts of civilization.

The Universal Exposition in St. Louis in 1904 will be such a social encyclopedia in the most comprehensive and accurate sense. It will give to the world in revised and complete details "a living picture of the artistic and industrial development at which mankind has arrived" and will actually provide "a new starting point from which all men may direct future exertions." It will present for the inspection of specialists in all lines of industrial and social endeavor and for the public an assembly of the best which the world has done and has to show in industry, art and science, and, what is very important, it will offer these achievements of society, these trophies of civilization, in a highly selected, accurately classified array.

The creators of the St. Louis Exposition have had the experience of all previous great expositions by which to plan and effect its high organization. The continuous and repeated burden of the message of experience handed down by all expositions has been more perfect, more effective classification and arrangement of exhibits.

The classification of the St. Louis Exposition has been prepared to present a sequential synopsis of the developments that have marked man's progress. On its bases will be assembled the most highly organized exposition the world has yet seen.

The St. Louis classification is divided into 16 departments, 144 groups and 807 classes. These grand departments in their order will record what man has accomplished at this time with his faculties, industry and skill and the natural resources at his command in the environment in which he has been placed.

At the head of the Exposition classification has been placed Education, through which man enters social life. Second comes Art, showing the condition of his culture and development. Liberal Arts and Applied Sciences are placed third, to indicate the result of his education and culture, illustrate his tastes and demonstrate his inventive genius, scientific attainment and artistic expression. These three departments equip him for the battle and prepare him for the enjoyments of life. The raw material departments, Agriculture, Horticulture, Mining and Forestry, show how man conserves the forces of nature to his uses. The Department of Manufactures will show what he has done with them; the Department of Machinery the tools he has used. The Department of Transportation will show how he overcomes distances and secures access to all parts of the world. The Department of Electricity will indicate the great forces he has discovered and utilized to convey power and intelligence. And so through the several departments to Anthropology, in which man studies man; and to Social Economy, which will illustrate the development of the human race, how it has overcome the difficulties of civilization and solved problems in which society is involved.

Last is placed physical culture, in which man, his intelligence having reached the supreme point, is able to treat himself as an animal, realizing that his intellectual and moral constitutions require a sound physical body to prompt them to the proper performance of their function.

Education is the keynote of the Universal Exposition of 1904. Each department of the world's labor and development will be represented at St. Louis, classified and installed in such manner that all engaged or interested in such branch of activity may come and see, examine, study and go away advised. Each of the separate sections of the Exposition will be an equivalent of—or, rather, will be in actuality a comprehensive and most effective object lesson in—the line of industrial and social achievement and progress which its presents.

SKILLED IN DIPLOMACY.

Viscount Hayashi, Who Represents the Mikado In England.

Viscount Tadasu Hayashi, Japanese minister to the court of St. James, to whom belongs much of the credit of bringing about the Anglo-Japanese alliance formed in 1902, is one of the ablest and best educated statesmen of the island empire.

It is not so many years since Viscount Hayashi was spending his days in a wooden cage, being brutally treated and undergoing all the horrors of an eastern prison life. He was born at Sakura in 1850 and in 1866 was one of a party of students sent by the shogun's government to be educated in England. In 1877 he joined in the revolt of the daimios known as the Satsuma rebellion. The rebels captured several fortified towns, but their success was of short duration, and they retired to the mountains. The troops of the mikado gave them no rest, and, after alternate victories and defeats, Saigo, the commander, was left with only about 600 men.

With this force Saigo made a forced march of 150 miles and captured a government stores depot. This plan was originated by Baron Hayashi. On Sept. 24, 1877, the government troops attacked the rebel position, and of the 600 men only thirty survived. Hayashi, who was among the number, was imprisoned at Hakodate for a year and a half.

He was finally released by command of the mikado, and since then his fortunes have steadily risen until he is the foremost diplomat in the Japanese service. In 1889 he was appointed governor of Kobe and from 1891 to 1895 was vice minister of foreign affairs. He was then sent as minister to China, later being transferred to St. Petersburg, and since 1900 he has represented the mikado in England. He was created a baron in 1896 and raised to the rank of viscount two years ago.

NEW MUSIC FOR WORLD'S FAIR

Three Compositions by Famous People. Band Tournament.

Musical people and all who appreciate good music may thank the World's Fair for three notable compositions, written upon the invitation of the Exposition management. These are the "Hymn of the West," by the most distinguished living American poet, Edmund Clarence Stedman, the music for which was written by Professor John K. Paine, who is at the head of the music department of Harvard university; "Louisiana," a march by Frank Vanderstuken, leader of the Cincinnati Orchestra; a waltz, "Along the Plaza," by Henry K. Hadley of New York, who has won his laurels long before this as writer of operatic and other musical compositions. This music will be heard publicly for the first time upon the opening of the Exposition on Saturday, April 30, and frequently thereafter in the musical programmes of the greatest of world's fairs. These are the only official compositions.

Thirty thousand dollars will be given in prizes for the best bands at a tournament to be held during the Exposition. All through the World's Fair the musical feature will be prominent. The most famous bands of the world are under contract to participate during considerable periods. Among these are Le Garde Republicaine band of France, the Royal Grenadier band of England, the American National band, Sousa's band and others.

Not What She Expected.

Mr. Ferguson put on his slippers and threw himself on the lounge. "It's so delightful to be at home again," he said. "I think I never appreciated it more than I do tonight."

"It's delightful to hear you say so, George," cooed Mrs. Ferguson.

"Yes; those confounded new shoes have tortured me nearly to death today!"—Chicago Tribune.

UNCLE SAM'S WONDERS

All Executive Departments Send Treasures to the World's Fair.

Display Installed In the Largest Governmental Exposition Building Ever Constructed — Precious Documents — Relics of Famous Statesmen and Soldiers. Working Postal Exhibit.

The United States Government building at the World's Fair occupies an elevated site just south of the main picture of the Exposition. The great central dome of the Government building is visible from the very center of the Fair, looking across the picturesque sunken garden that lies between the Palaces of Mines and Metallurgy and Liberal Arts.

The hill slope in front of the Government building is terraced with broad stairways almost completely covering the slope. The building is 800 feet long by 250 feet wide and is the largest structure ever provided at an exposition by the federal government. It is distinguished from all the other large buildings at the Exposition by the steel truss construction, the entire roof being supported by steel arches, forming a splendid domed ceiling.

In this building are installed the exhibits of all the executive departments of the government. The building is a vast storehouse of an endless variety of treasures dear to the heart of every true American. Precious documents are to be seen here, and the autographs of our great men of the past are on display. Relics of famous statesmen and soldiers, carefully preserved through generations, are exhibited. Each governmental department has installed an exhibit showing its official character and mode of operation.

Entering the Government building from the eastern end, the visitor sees at his left a railroad postoffice car. This is not a mere coach standing idle, but is one of the most improved mail cars, in which men attached to the United States railway mail service are actively engaged in "throwing" the mails. Here you will see the postal clerks at work, just as they work while speeding along a railroad track.

A curious collection of old time relics from the postoffice museum at Washington illustrates as no verbal description can do the crude beginnings of the postal system. One of these relics is an old fashioned stagecoach that once carried United States mails through a portion of the Louisiana purchase territory. President Roosevelt, who once inspected it, examined with a rough rider's interest the bullet holes which stage robbers and mountain brigands shot through its stiff leathern curtains. Generals Sherman and Sheridan and President Garfield rode in this old coach during the strenuous days of frontier life. Among the collection of documents showing the primitive postal methods in vogue in the early days is to be seen the old book of accounts kept by the first postmaster general, Benjamin Franklin, all written by hand. There is a rare collection of stamps, including ancient Filipino, Porto Rican and Cuban stamps. The postoffice department's exhibit occupies 12,469 square feet.

Across the aisle, at the right, is the exhibit of the new Department of Commerce and Labor, occupying 1,966 square feet. This exhibit shows what the new executive department stands for and what it is accomplishing. Mr. Carroll D. Wright, United States Commissioner of Labor, had charge of the preparation of the exhibit. Charts arranged by him, showing the rapid growth of the nation in agriculture, arts, manufacture, population, etc., are of special interest to sociologists and all students of the labor problem. The Census Bureau exhibit is made in this section. It shows the tabulating machines used in compiling the census reports. The Lighthouse Board, also operating under this department, shows the great revolving lenses in lighthouses, with other interesting appliances.

The space in the projecting northwest corner of the building is devoted to the Library of Congress. The edifice which houses this library at Washington is held by many architects to be the most beautiful building in the world. Its interior decorations, by Elmer Ellsworth Garnsey, furnish one of the chief delights of a visit to the national capital. A large model of this splendid building is a feature of the exhibit. The decorative features of the interior are reproduced in their original colors.

The next exhibit on the right hand side of the central aisle is that of the Interior Department, occupying 11,792 square feet. In this large space the visitor finds so many things of compelling interest that he is loath to leave. The Patent Office exhibit belongs to this section. There are models of many machines that have borne an important part in the development of the nation's industries. The earliest form of every device of human invention, so far as possible, is shown here. For instance, you may see the actual sewing machine that was the first contrivance of its kind every constructed; it was patented in 1846 by Elias Howe. The first typewriter, patented by C. Thurber in 1842; the model of the first cast iron plow, patented by Charles Newbold in 1797; the first screw propeller, invented by Robert Hook in 1680; and many other "first" things are to be seen. The model of Abraham Lincoln's celebrated device for lifting steamboats off shoals is shown here. The first harvesting machine, made in the year 150 B. C., is one of the most ancient exhibits at the Exposition. There is also a model of the first steam engine, made in Egypt in the same year.

Every foot of the 200,000 feet of floor space in Uncle Sam's World's Fair building is occupied by exhibits of surpassing interest, and every phase of the people's welfare is shown.

CURIOUS THINGS FROM CHINA

The Most Magnificent Beds Ever Seen Are Part of the Celestial Empire's World's Fair Exhibit.

The Chinese exhibit at the World's Fair is filled with pleasing surprises. Some of the most magnificent articles of furniture are a part of this wonderful display. The carving and inlaying of ivory, bone and wood illustrate the marvelous skill of the Chinese.

Models included in this interesting exhibit show the homes and home life of the Chinese, their weddings and funerals, Chinese tea house, restaurant and shop, Chinese weaving and some of the beautiful silks and wearing apparel of the Chinese and their methods of manufacturing them.

One feature of the exhibit is two magnificent Chinese beds, each of which has the appearance of being a small house of great beauty. One is a summer bed, the other for winter. The summer bed is hand carved and inlaid with ivory and bone figures and landscapes exquisitely carved and so skillfully joined as to appear a part of the wood. The bed and furniture are of carved bamboo. The bed consists of an anteroom, with tables, chairs and tea stands, and in an inner room, which is the sleeping apartment, there is a couch with coverings of gauzy silks.

The winter bed is still more elaborate. It consists of three compartments. The first contains four chairs, a tea poy and a chest of drawers. This is the sitting apartment. The second is the dressing room, and the third is the sleeping apartment, or the couch itself. The furniture is of rosewood inlaid with ivory carving of birds, flowers and trees. The couch is covered with silks of the finest texture and in gaudy colors. The sleeping compartments are lighted with Chinese lanterns of silk hung at the outer entrance, while the light enters through gauze panels, hand painted and in forms of rosewood inlaid with ivory figures.

A table and dish made of highly polished ash, with exquisitely carved bamboo figures inlaid, are shown. The work is so artistically done that each article seems to have been made of one piece of wood.

There is also a large display of Chinese lanterns made of silk, gauze and other light material and some made of beads artistically arranged with glass centers. The silk and gauze are beautifully hand painted.

There are models of some of the great Chinese temples, theaters and arches, showing elaborate carving in wood and ivory and two large elephant tusks exquisitely carved.

BEATING GOLD LEAF

THE WAY THE SQUARES OF METAL ARE WORKED UNDER THE HAMMER.

Gradually Reduced In Thickness Until the Sheets Are Transparent and So Fine That 300,000 of Them In a Pile Would Measure but an Inch.

A local sign writer was in the window of a large F street establishment putting gold leaf on the outlines of letters he had made with a stencil. The curiosity of a reporter was aroused as to how these tiny sheets of gold were reduced to such minute thinness. A visit to the establishment of one of Washington's largest sign writers and a talk with the proprietor brought forth the following:

"I learned the gold beater's trade in Rochester some years ago. Imagine a slab of gold measuring eight inches in width, ten inches in length and half an inch in thickness being reduced to 2,520 sheets of gold, each five inches square and almost transparent, and you get a vague idea of the queer industry known as gold beating.

"Imagine a square of gold three-hundredths of an inch in thickness, and you will appreciate the brawn and brain making for the result, and then reflect that the word 'beating' means just 'beating'—for no power other than the strength of a man's arm is used in the process—and you will have been mentally initiated into the mysteries of a silent art.

"Few persons are familiar with the work for several reasons: First, there are less than twenty-five gold beating establishments in the country; second, it is an exclusive industry, and few, either manufacturers or laborers, are admitted to its secrets, and, third, the trade is limited. Therefore it is a most interesting study.

"The gold beater buys direct from the government assay office, where the gold is weighed, stamped and guaranteed. A fraction too much of alloy would cause it to pulverize or part into fragments. Twenty-three carat gold is used exclusively. Usually the gold comes in nuggets weighing fifty-five pennyweights and valued at $55 each.

"After the gold has been received it is placed in a crucible and made ready for the beating about to follow. It is molded into a shape which will fit into the only power machine in the place, which compresses the gold into a ribbon ten yards in length, one inch in width and one thirty-second inch in thickness. Out of this ribbon are cut 220 squares of equal size.

"The work of reducing is begun. To each workman is given twenty-five squares, and these he places between the leaves of a book. This book is a 'kutch' paper and is sealed with a patent envelope device which prevents the loss of particles of gold, a precaution made necessary by the many turnings and floppings of the book in the process. A sixteen pound hammer is used, and the beater is compelled to work uninterruptedly for twenty minutes to gain the desired measurement.

"Wielding a sixteen pound hammer for a few seconds only is exhausting work for the uninitiated, but the beaters hammer away as if it was boys' play. They must grasp the end of the hammer farthest from the head, which increases its weight, but the benches they use are so constructed that they cause a small rebound of the hammer.

"When the 'kutch' book is opened twenty-five sheets are taken out, and each sheet of gold is cut into four pieces. Its thickness has been reduced in the operation from one thirty-second of an inch to one one-hundredth of an inch. Twenty-five of these squares are put into a book called the 'shodder.' The 'shodder' is not a paper, but a skin, and it is said that certain intestinal parts of 500 oxen are required to make a package or book of twenty-five papers. The 'shodder' is made in England by a secret process. It is the most exclusive industry in the world.

"Like the 'kutch' book, the 'shoder' book is sealed and handed to the artist, who is required to pound it ninety minutes with a twelve pound hammer. This reduces the thickness, and when it is taken out of the book each leaf of gold is again cut into one inch squares. This time the gold is so fragile that a metal knife blade, no matter how sharp, would break the edges; so a knife with double blades is used, requiring only two strokes to cut a square.

"Now comes the last beating. Each square is again put into a book called a 'mold.' Forty minutes' beating is required to give this the proper size. When the leaves of gold are removed they are transparent, but perfect in shape and unbroken. It would require 300,000 of them to make one inch in thickness.

"The last operation is to send them to the booking room, where women remove the gold leaves and place them in wax paper books ready for sale. The leaves are so delicate that they can be handled only with bamboo sticks. So adhesive is the gold that if a leaf is broken in removing it is easily patched without a trace of it being apparent to the naked eye."—Washington Star.

Story of a Widow's Mite.

Here's a "widow's mite" story. A widow in West Bromwich, England, obtained a farthing in a breach of promise action she brought against a faithless sweetheart. She put it in the window of her tobacco shop with a printed warning to trusting women to beware of "Mizpah" rings, and inviting men to come and buy "breach of promise cigars" and "widow's mite cigarettes." The result was such a big business that the police had to stand by to keep the pavement clear, while nineteen men, mostly widowers, came and offered themselves in marriage.

"PURIFYING POLITICS."

How a Weak Argument Is Used Both Ways Against Woman Suffrage.

When it was reported that the recent election frauds in Denver were committed mainly by women, the opponents of equal rights said this proved that women ought not to vote. When it turned out that the frauds in question were committed mainly by men, with only a very small sprinkling of women, the opponents shifted their ground and now say that equal suffrage is a failure because the women have not prevented all men from cheating and completely "purified politics."

Politics might be purified completely by adding to the electorate a body of angels who not only never cheated themselves, but were able by magic power to keep everybody else from cheating. That would be very convenient, but unluckily it is impossible. On the other hand, politics may be purified to some extent by adding to the electorate a large body of voters among whom cheating is comparatively rare. That is what has happened in Colorado.

The female population of Colorado is 244,368. During the first ten years after equal suffrage was granted only one woman was convicted of illegal voting, while a great number of men indulged in it. In the recent Denver case ex-Governor Adams of Colorado says in the New York Sun that out of 5,000 fraudulent votes only about 100 were cast by women. And yet the canard has been spread broadcast that "the women did it!"

The "indirect influence" of women is much vaunted as a purifying power by the opponents of equal rights, but it has not completely purified politics in the states where women do not vote. The election frauds in New York, Philadelphia, St. Louis, etc., have been much bigger and more chronic than in Denver. In Colorado woman suffrage has not completely purified politics, but it has had a good influence as far as it has gone, and no one bears more emphatic testimony to this than Hon. John L. Shafroth himself.

Ellis Meredith of Denver, at the recent national suffrage convention, illustrated the situation by a story. She said: "A chronic toper was brought to the hospital with a bad case of delirium tremens. The doctor examined him carefully. The man asked, 'Can you cure me?' 'No,' answered the doctor, 'but I can reduce the size of the snakes.' Equal suffrage has not cured the corruption of politics, but it has distinctly reduced the size of the snakes."

ALICE STONE BLACKWELL.

BEHIND TIME YANKEES.

How Other Nations Lead Us in an Important Movement.

The Minneapolis Times, after commenting upon the action of the English house of commons in voting 182 to 68 in favor of full parliamentary suffrage for women and the approval of this action by the Italian chamber of deputies, says: "Still it comes with a little queer sensation—this news that orthodox England is really thinking in parliamentary thoughts about giving woman a vote on candidates for the house of commons. By good rights the United States should have led in this question. And here we are even behind Signor Rossi of Italy in recognition of the right of women to the suffrage."

Yes, according to the fundamental principles of our boasted free republic, the United States should have taken the lead in this question, but the fact is we are, and always have been, behind many of the other civilized countries of Europe in recognizing the political rights of women.

Women have voted for many years in England and her colonies upon the same terms as men for everything except members of parliament. In Australia and New Zealand women have full suffrage upon the same terms as men, and it looks now as though it would not be long before England would follow the lead of her more progressive colonies.

The rights of the women taxpayers have always been recognized in almost every country except the United States.

Verily, the United States has yet to learn the meaning of justice in its application to women.

ELNORA MONROE BABCOCK.

Are Our Women Inferior?

Restriction of suffrage implies inferiority on the part of the class denied the right. All professed reasons against woman suffrage are merely allegations of inferiority, whatever the pretense may be. I do not believe all women hopelessly inferior to all men. I believe in woman suffrage. The right of an intelligent and self respecting woman to vote should not depend upon the lack of intelligence and self respect of the woman who is contented with the legal status which is a constant insult and which brings in its train a long series of handicaps. Taken mentally, morally or industrially, a disfranchised woman is not a fit mother of a voter, for she cannot wisely teach that of which she knows nothing.—Edward H. Winston.

Merit Proved by Opposition.

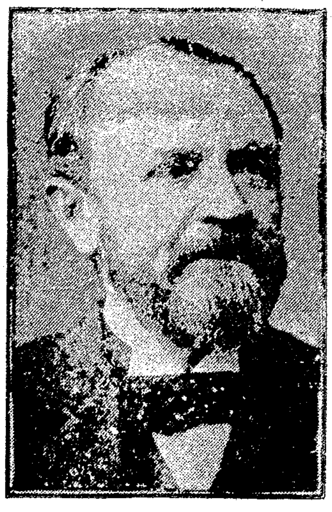
All genuine reforms have found opponents, even among those who most needed the benefits to be conferred by success. In the present aspect of the woman suffrage movement in the state of New York history simply repeats itself. The opposition as thus far developed on the part of some women with whom to rule or ruin is a necessity of their nature is necessary to complete the parallel between them and their prototypes as portrayed on the pages of history and should be accepted as the sign manual of merit in the movement honored by such opposition.

PHIPPS, PHILANTHROPIST.

Steel Magnate Who Gave a Million to Fight Consumption.

Henry Phipps, the multimillionaire who fought his way to fortune alongside of Andrew Carnegie, is nearly as munificent in his gifts to the public as his former partner, although his generosity does not run to libraries.

The noblest benefaction of Mr. Phipps, and one destined to produce the greatest amount of good for humanity, is the institution he established in Philadelphia for the study, treatment and prevention of consumption. The institute, which is named for Mr. Phipps, is to be so complete and comprehensive in its outfit that it will undoubtedly become the headquarters of the army engaged in the crusade against tuberculosis. The medical director of the Henry Phipps institution is Dr. Lawrence F. Flick of Philadelphia, the great tuberculosis expert. It is expected that the institute will be completed next year. It will have an income of over $30,000, and it is the intention of Mr. Phipps to expend more than a million in making it the best of its kind in the world.



HENRY PHIPPS.

Henry Phipps resembles his friend and ex-partner, Andrew Carnegie, in that he began life with practically nothing. He was born in Philadelphia, but at an early age went to Allegheny City. In his youth he entered the employment of a firm of iron dealers, and in the course of six years became a partner.

He subsequently went into partnership with Thomas M. Carnegie, a brother of Andrew, and for several years the firm operated the Union iron mills in Pittsburg. Since 1872 Mr. Phipps has been fully identified with the growth of the organization which has been successively known as the Carnegie-Phipps company, the Carnegie Steel company and as the United States Steel corporation.

He retired from business about four years ago, and spends his time between his residence in New York and Beaufort castle, his place in Scotland. At the close of the South African war he gave $100,000 to relieve distress among the Boers. Last year he gave $150,000 to found an agricultural college in India, and he has made several large benefactions in Pittsburg.

THE PALACE AT SEOUL.

Terrible Tragedy Recalled by Its Recent Destruction.

The recent burning of the palace of the Korean emperor at Seoul recalls the tragic death of Queen Tai Wen Koon, which occurred within its walls a few years ago.

The queen, a very clever woman, was a partisan of the Russians and the Japanese decided on her removal. One night a mob broke in the palace gates, fought its way to the queen's pavilion and slaughtered her in the presence of the emperor. Her body was carried to a grove in the palace grounds, drenched with oil and burned, and the ashes were scattered in a lily pond in the palace yard.

The next day the little finger of the ill fated queen was found in the casement of the door of the room where she had been murdered. This little finger was all that remained of the queen, and the king decided that it should have a proper mausoleum. He erected a pagoda in the lily pond to mark the spot where the ashes had been thrown, but the real burial ceremony was held over the little finger.

PALACE AND LILY POND, SEOUL, BEFORE THE FIRE.

After being buried twice, the sorcerers and geomancers decided that the place was not propitious, and, though $70,000 had been expended by the poverty stricken country, the earth doctors were told to find a more suitable place for the tomb. They finally made a decision and excavation was commenced. A huge rock was found, and several earth doctors lost their heads.

The final place chosen was seventeen miles from Seoul. There the little finger will be allowed to rest.

The following information will be found useful in making estimates:

The great Fair at St. Louis will open April 30th, 1904, and close November 30, 1904, and will no doubt attract a larger aggregate number than ever visited any previous World's Fair. The U. S. and governments of the various States are devoting twenty millions of dollars to the erection of handsome buildings, and filling them with exhibits, while foreign countries are represented to the number of forty seven.

The Democratic National Convention will be held in St. Louis July 6th, which will doubtless draw a larger number of visitors to the Fair on July 4th than would otherwise attend.

The Fourth of July attendance at Chicago was 283,273; Omaha, 38,618, Buffalo, 71,024.

Cut out carefully along this line and mail to us promptly.

I estimate, the number of paid admissions to the ST. LOUIS FAIR July 4th will be:

Moral Tone Needed.

DIED.

Henrietta Darling, aged 88, died at the home of Mrs. Catherine Henning on Friday. The funeral was held from the late home on Saturday.

The death of Ida M., wife of Noah V. Tibbetts, occurred in Washington, D. C., on May 14. Burial was made at Brooklin, Me.

Mrs. Julia Fay Merry, aged 75, widow of the late Enoch Conger, died on Sunday at her home in New York city from bronchial pneumonia. The deceased was a resident of Phoenix all of her life until within the past few years. She was the daughter of the late Samuel Merry of Phoenix and her body was brought to that village for interment. Miss Gertrude Conger of this city attended the funeral.

Belle M., wife of Mr. L. E. Davis, died at her home in West Fourth street on Thursday after a brief illness. The funeral was held from her late home on Sunday, the Rev. G. R. Foster officiating. Besides her husband she is survived by one daughter, Mrs. F. L. VanBuskirk of Fulton; three sisters, Mrs. C. M. Adams of this city, Mrs. Fannie Salisbury and Mrs. Libbie Allen of Pulaski; one brother, Edward Stacy, and also one grandson, William Van Buskirk of Fulton.

Marietta Morse, aged 80 years, passed to rest at the home of her son, Mr. James W. Morse, on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, from the effects of a stroke of apoplexy which she sustained on Thursday morning early. The deceased was born in Fulton in 1824, her parents being David Van Buren and Eunice French Van Buren, and she resided in this city all her life with the exception of about fifteen years which she spent in Brooklyn with her son. When she was about twenty years of age she was united in marriage with William H. Morse and to the couple seven children were born, three of whom died in infancy, and another daughter, Etta, died eighteen years ago.

Mrs. Morse was a woman of staunch principle and was highly respected by all who knew her, and her acquaintance was an extensive one throughout this vicinity. Her husband died when thirty-seven years of age and she was left to face the world alone when her eldest son was only 12. She was a conscientious mother and brought up her children to be useful and respected citizens, and her latter years have been made comfortable and happy by the son and daughters for whom she had done so much.

The funeral services were held from her late home on Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, the Rev. W. L. Sawtelle officiating. The many beautiful floral tributes with which the casket was surrounded attested to the loving regard in which she was held. Mrs. Sawtelle played softly as the casket was being conveyed from the home to the hearse in which it was taken to its last resting place in Riverside cemetery, Oswego. The pall bearers were Messrs. James W. Morse of Fulton, G. Wales Briggs of Minetto, William J. Morse of Brooklyn and Joel R. Baker of Oswego; son, grandsons and son-in-law of the deceased. Besides the son, Mr. James W. Morse of this city, two daughters, Mrs. Florence M. Baker of Oswego and Mrs. Eunice E. Briggs of East Minetto, survive to mourn with a host of friends the loss of a kind and loyal parent and friend.

Resolutions of Respect.

At the last regular convention of Pathfinder Lodge No. 373, K. of P., the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, It has pleased God, in His infinite wisdom, to remove from our midst our esteemed brother, Marcus S. Hungerford; and while we sincerely deplore his demise, we bow in humble submission to the will of One "who doeth all things well;" therefore, be it

Resolved, That we hereby wish to express our gratitude for having enjoyed the privilege of association with our deceased brother in both lodge and social circles. His memory will ever be held sacred by us; and be it further

Resolved, That we extend to the grief-stricken relatives and friends of our deceased brother our deepest sympathy, knowing that however great our sorrow, they suffer the greater burden of anguish. Be it further

Resolved, That the charter of our lodge be draped in mourning for thirty days, and that a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes and presented to the members of the family of the deceased, and also published in each of our city papers.

Crandall's Big Tent Show.

Milt Crandall is doing a large business at his pavillion theatre in First street. Theatre parties are nightly arranged and the performances give entire satisfaction to all who attend. They are clean and wholesome and no one need fear to permit children to attend. There will be a matinee on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock for the especial benefit of the children. Admission 10 cents.

Among the delightful specialties introduced at each performance are The Crandall's in their character sketch. The Simpson's in their daring aerial act and skillful knife manipulations. Miss Lulu Crandall, the clever song and dance artist. The Welches, Irish comedians and dancers. George I. Foster, black-faced comedian and monologist. James O'Neil, eccentric buck and wing dancer. Lew Marotis, king of the high wire. George D. Lambson, with illustrated songs.

Prof. George Wilson's celebrated band and orchestra is present at each performance and discourses music.

Doors open Saturday afternoon at 2,30 o'clock. The evening performance commences at 8,15 o'clock during the remainder of this week. Admission 10 and 20 cents.

Commencement and Class Night.

On June 23, in Stephen's Opera House, will occur the graduating exercises of the senior class. Contrary to the past custom of presenting a play on this evening, the class and their friends will be given a treat in hearing Dr. Andrew V. V. Raymond of Union College, Schenectady. Dr. Raymond is president of Union College and is a charming speaker. He will make the address to the graduating class.

Class night will take place June 22, and on this evening the seniors will present a play in the opera house. The play is a three-act comedy and abounds in simple good humor from first to last. It is an English production and was presented at Cornell University two years ago with great success. The fun centers around Mr. Dobbinson, who has a great antipathy for soldiers. The members of the senior class, who have been chosen to assume the various parts, are taking their lines with wonderful aptitude for amateurs, and the play promises to be a great success.

The Prize Speaking contest, which will take place on Monday evening, May 30, in Stephens Opera House promises to be one of the closest and best in the history of the school. The pupils are receiving daily drill, and much interest has already been expressed in the outcome because of the unusual evenness of ability among the speakers. The selections were made this year by the faculty, and the pupils chosen to represent the school are the ones who, in the judgment of the teachers have shown the most ability in a forensic line during the rhetoricals. Gold and silver medals will be presented to the winners this year by the members of the Board of Education. The speakers will be the Misses Hunter, Murphy, Dominick, Johnston, and the Messrs Scudder, Hull, Benedict and Dutton.

THE WIZARD OF OZ.

"The Wizard of Oz," the new and enormously successful extravaganza which will be seen at the Richardson theatre, Oswego, on Thursday, May 19, is described as a skillful fusion of the most attractive elements of comic opera extravaganza, pantomime and up-to-date musical comedy. The play opens on a Kansas prairie, showing the yokels at work in the hay fields adjoining an old homestead. The rumble of a distant storm is heard, and in full view of the audience a realistic cyclone descends upon the Kansas farm, carrying away the house with the heroine, little Dorothy, inside of it. Then by means of a marvelous mechanical effect, the cyclone is disclosed to the audience in all its fury and potency, as it whirls the old house over villages and prairies, over steeples, roof-tops and towering trees, until the storm subsides, and the house descends in a mysterious region known as the "Land of the Munchkins," which is only another name for fairyland. The third scene shows the fringe of the forest at sunset, and the fourth scene discloses another beautiful product of the artist in craft, a field of poppies in full bloom. The poppies by the way are impersonated by lithesome and comely girls in strikingly novel costumes. At the invocation of the good fairy queen, Jack Frost sends his snow fairies to nip the flowers in the bud, so that little Dorothy may escape from the deadly odor and reach the land of Oz, where she is provided with transportation back to Kansas in the airship of the wonderful "Wizard of Oz."

The third act transpires in the throne room of the Queen of Dreamland, and this is said to excel any stage picture ever shown in a modern spectacle.

As many may surmise from this brief outline of the story of "The Wizard of Oz" the new extravaganza is a most delightful and stimulating entertainment of a spicy but wholesome kind. Three score of pretty girls and a dozen excellent comedians and pantomimists are sure to make "The Wizard of Oz" one of the most appetizing treats of the dramatic season.

Music as an Aid to Ideas.

At evening parties a man's shyness is mitigated by music. In my own experience, when some stray man and I have stood together speechless, no sooner did the piano break into our appalling silence than ideas seemed to inundate us. The dumb man spoke as if by magic, and I, who hitherto had nothing to say, couldn't talk fast enough.—Mrs. John Lane in Fortnightly Review.

The following information will be found useful in making estimates:

The great Fair at St. Louis will open April 30th, 1904, and close November 30, 1904, and will no doubt attract a larger aggregate number than ever visited any previous World's Fair. The U. S. and governments of the various States are devoting twenty millions of dollars to the erection of handsome buildings, and filling them with exhibits, while foreign countries are represented to the number of forty-seven.

The Democratic National Convention will be held in St. Louis July 6th, which will doubtless draw a larger number of visitors to the Fair on July 4th than would otherwise attend.

The Fourth of July attendance at Chicago was 283,273; Omaha, 38,618, Buffalo, 71,024.

Cut out carefully along this line and mail to us promptly.

WORLD'S FAIR POET.

Edmund Clarence Stedman, Author of the Exposition Hymn.

Edmund Clarence Stedman, the famous poet and critic, who wrote the hymn sung at the opening ceremonies of the Louisiana Purchase exposition at St. Louis, though past threescore and ten, is erect and lithe, his eyes sparkling with health and his wit as ready as ever.

In his early youth Mr. Stedman gave promise of becoming one of America's foremost scholars. Fate decreed, however, that he cast his life in Wall street, and he became a banker and broker, thus delaying somewhat the hope of his early youth. Notwithstanding Mr. Stedman's busy life in Wall street he found time for literary work.

Aside from his own books of poetry, Mr. Stedman has given us "A Victorian Anthology," 1895, and "An American Anthology," 1900, volumes which required the most active research and which demonstrated his untiring devotion to study. His critical works include "Victorian Poets," "Poets of America" and "The Nature and Elements of Poetry," the latter written in 1892. His latest work, "The History of Wall Street," is one for which he was peculiarly fitted.

Mr. Stedman is a native of Connecticut, was educated at Yale and after leaving college was for a time on the New York Tribune. Later he joined the editorial staff of the New York World and went to the front as its war correspondent, gaining reputation for his reports of the battle of Bull Run and other incidents of the first two years of the civil conflict. In 1864 he entered Wall street and for over thirty years remained a member of the New York Stock Exchange.

WOMEN AND POWER.

Experience Teaches That They Make Good Use of the Ballot.

The citizens of Bowling Green, Ky., are agitating the question of pure water. The committee in charge of the matter has received the following communication from Joseph B. Rider, an authority on filtration, water purification and sewage:

"I am glad to hear of your city that another municipality is about to be added to the list of those forced to consider that all important public question, pure water, through the energy of her prominent women. The city of Philadelphia, through the New Century Woman's club, in 1895 was forced to take action in this matter. In fact, I am sorry to confess that it is the energy of the women in many places where I have been identified with public questions that stirred the men with the votes to action."

Mr. Rider's testimony confirms that of the states where women are endowed with the ballot. This testimony is to the effect that wherever women concern themselves with affairs of government their aim is always the public good.

As Ellis Meredith, a Colorado woman, said at the last national suffrage convention, when most men go into politics their aim is to get as much as possible out of it, but woman's aim is to put as much as possible into it. She puts into it her knowledge of sanitary science, her interest in the public health, her love for beautiful and healthful surroundings, and, above all, her love for children and home. It is owing to woman's direct influence on politics that Colorado is ahead of all her sister states in laws that concern the welfare of the child. Two-thirds of woman's political work has been for the children.

As for pure water and all other things relating to cleanliness and health, the most conservative woman ought to feel that those are within her sphere. They concern her as housekeeper, a home maker and a mother, and it is her duty to interest herself in them, whether she has the ballot or not. They are public questions, it is true, but they concern the home far more than the question of "What shall I have for dinner?" or "How many tucks shall I put in baby's new gown?"

FARM AND GARDEN

FARM DRAINAGE.

Line and Gauge Method of Grading a Ditch From a Survey.

In some regions drainage conventions have recently been held, and everywhere there seems to be a large and growing demand for information on the subject. Farmers' bulletin No. 187 meets this want by discussing the best methods of draining wet lands and the cost of such drainage. On the useful point of grading a ditch from a survey advice is as follows:

The line and gauge method, although open to some objection, is more easily understood by workmen of all classes than any other. It consists in setting a line or fine wire directly over the grade stakes at a given distance above them and parallel to the bottom of the proposed ditch. Some convenient distance above the bottom of the ditch is chosen, as, for instance, four, five or six feet, and a light line is set parallel to the required bottom (F). When the line is first drawn temporary stays may be placed under it to prevent sagging. A gauge rod (A), with a light arm (B) placed upon it at right angles at the constant height for which the line is set, is the implement by which the work is tested. To determine the height at which the line should be set above each stake (as C and D) subtract the depth of the ditch at that point from the length of the gauge or the height of the line above the specified grade. The remainder is the distance above the grade stake at which the line should be set. As the bottom is graded it should be tested by holding the gauge in a vertical position with the foot resting upon the floor (F) of the ditch. When the lower edge of the arm (B) touches the line the ditch is at grade at that point. A small level fastened upon the arm (B) will aid the workman greatly in holding the gauge rod in a vertical position.

Begin at the lower end to excavate the ditch. No grade line need be set up until all excavation except the bottom has been done; then set the gauge line and take out the bottom or last spading to the proper depth as nearly as may be judged, working backward and taking care not to dig too deep. When a length of four feet or thereabout has been excavated use the cleaning scoop to clean out the crumbs and to dress the bottom. While doing this the workman should stand on the bench, one spading above the bottom, and grade the trench by pulling the cleaning scoop toward him. Test the finished ditch with the gauge and if not deep enough dress the bottom with the cleaner until it is correct. If the ditch is intended for a tile larger than eight inches the grading is done with a round pointed shovel, the workman walking on the finished bottom.

After the bottom of the ditch has been prepared the tiles should be laid from the outlet up grade. Sizes up to eight inches may be conveniently laid with a tile hook, the workman standing on the bank of the ditch.

It has supplanted discomfort with ease—it has banished the impossible and exaggerated figure produced by the old corset idea. It removes the strain of lacing from the sensitive parts of the body and throws all pressure upon the hips and the strong back muscles, supporting the stomach within the corset and not forcing it below the garment. The Erect Form is made in more models than ever before. There are forty distinct styles of this popular make, each meant for a distinct type of woman. Dealers in all sized towns and cities the land over, sell the Erect Form. Prices range upward from $1.

REPUBLICAN COUNTY CONVENTION.

The date for the Republican County Convention has been announced. It will be held in Pulaski, on Tuesday, July 19. Oswego county Republicans are working as a unit in the interests of the whole party. Factional discords have become harmonized and the party will present unbroken ranks to our political antagonists next November and roll up an unprecedented majority for President Roosevelt and the entire ticket.

Ex-District Attorney Bartlett has announced his withdrawal from the race for the county judgship, which leaves the Hon. Merrick S. Stowell, the present incumbent, a clear field for renomination. He will without doubt become the unanimous choice of the convention to succeed himself, which will be a well-merited tribute from the party he has served so faithfully in whatever position he has been called upon to fill. He also enjoys an enviable reputation for probity of character and sterling worth as a magistrate. His record is above reproach.

The genial Thomas Moore will undoubtedly receive the unanimous nomination of the convention to succeed himself as county treasurer. Supervisor W. D. Streeter of Richland has withdrawn from the contest, which removes the only serious opposition to Mr. Moore's renomination.

The date for the district convention has not yet been determined.

Oswego County has no reason for desiring a change of administration in either county, State or nation. She has never been so prosperous as during the past four years, as the deposits in the savings banks will attest. Labor has been in demand and at a good rate of compensation. Farm products have brought splendid prices, and the wheels of the manufacturies have not ceased. It is a pleasure to review the records of the past years under President Roosevelt and Governor Odell and to note the commercial prosperity the country has attained under Republican regime.

THERE is a wide-spread opinion that the government of the United States is very expensive because Congress appropriated about one billion dollars at its two sessions. The Department of Commerce and Labor has been looking into the matter and finds as follows: The money per capita of the population necessary to be raised for the Government is in the United States, $7 97: in Germany, $9.45; in Spain, $10.09; in France, $17.84; in Great Britain, $21 39; in New Zealand, $38.38.

THE late Herbert Spencer caused his autobiography to be set up in type, corrected the proofs, and to guard against loss he had a few copies printed. The book is a delineation of the author from his own point of view. This isn't a bad idea. It should be imitated in America. Think how a book by Howells entitled "What I think of myself," or a work by William Jennings Bryan called "Peeps into my own soul," would sell on the railway trains!

RECENTLY a man in New York was found on the door steps of the Russell Sage mansion praying for the wealthy and venerable banker. He was immediately considered to be insane. He will understand hereafter that prayers for millionaires should always be offered in the churches. Besides there comes a time, according to some good folks when a man is past praying for. Mr. and Mrs. Sage are good and respectable people, and when Mr. Sage dies he will leave everything.

THE milk question is looming up at a fearful rate. In Boston the authorities will not allow milk to be sold above fifty degrees of temperature. Milk wagons must have a refrigerating establishment, and even these have to be inspected. The object of the low temperature is to prevent the multiplication of bacteria. Any milk containing more than 500,000 of these individuals in six-one-hundredths of a cubic [illegible] liable to condemation. Milk [illegible] less than 8,000,000 bacteria to the [illegible] inch is wholesome enough to [illegible]. There is nothing like science [illegible].

Mr. Willis S. Nelson has offered the Library trustees sites on the corner of Fourth and Fay streets, corner of Third and Pratt streets, corner of Park and Pratt and corner of Third and Division streets, on which to erect the Carnagie library building. While either site is desirable as far as size etc. is concerned, none of those thus far offered are as centrally located as the Library patrons would desire. The public spiritedness of those who have offered to donate sites, is greatly commended and admired. The Library trustees are grateful for the offers and have them all under advisement.

SCHLOSS CLOTHING

THAT'S the kind we handle. It is the "kind that helps you on in the world" and is ever "considerate of your pocket-book."

"Clothes don't make the man, but good clothes have secured many a good position," said a railroad president recently. "If you have $25 and want a job, it is better to spend $20 for clothes, $4 for shoes and the rest for a shave and a hair cut and a clean collar, and walk to the place, than to go with the money in the pockets of a dingy suit."

The above argument is all right, but you need not pay as much as $20 for clothes that will give you a prosperous appearance, when you can come here and walk off with a snappy suit like that shown in the picture

AT SO LITTLE A PRICE AS.... $12

We have other styles at other prices, all possessing the same characteristic of honest quality which Schloss Bros. & Co., inject into all of their clothing.

NO MORE STATE TAX

Again the Revenues From Indirect Sources Meet All Appropriations.

And a Balance of Six Millions Will Remain In the Treasury.

Freedom from direct state taxation was again assured when Governor Odell at the conclusion of work on the thirty day bills signed the state tax rate bill imposing the nominal state tax of thirteen one-hundredths of a mill, the tax required by the constitution. A surplus of $6,000,000 will be on hand at the end of the fiscal year.

Thus in 1902, 1903 and 1904 Governor Odell and a Republican legislature have by an economical administration of the state's affairs and by modifications and additions to the state's indirect taxes virtually abolished direct state taxation. Nor has the administration been a niggardly one. Generous appropriations have been made to worthy objects. In a memorandum on the state tax rate bill the governor points out that there has been an actual increase of the appropriations this year over those of last year. He states that the total appropriations made by the legislature were $28,296,523.82 and that the total approved of by him was $26,041,200.33 and that he disallowed $2,255,323.49. The legislature of 1903 appropriated $23,587,947.77, which was allowed by the governor. The present year, therefore, the governor authorizes an increase of appropriations over those of 1903 amounting to $2,453,252.23.

Additional Expenses.

In his memorandum he explains that this apparent increase was due to granting $900,000 additional for good roads, $75,000 additional for grade crossings, $368,000 additional for common schools, an appropriation of $250,000 for the purchase of Adirondack lands and $350,000 for rebates for the excise department. Moreover, $432,000 was granted to pay bills of the prison department, whose adoption was necessary owing to the failure of the passage of an appropriation act for the prisons in 1903. Then the governor also expressed his approval of an act of the legislature appropriating $250,000 for the establishment of a college of agriculture at Cornell university. The national guard, the supreme court and the lunacy commission required $844,000 additional. The governor expresses his judgment in his memorandum on the state tax rate bill that the expenditures made have given greater efficiency, better discipline and more satisfactory results in every department of the state.

And he states that after all the appropriations are paid there will remain in the state treasury $6,000,000. He declares that this will make certain, with the same care which has been exercised by the legislature of the past three years, a continuance of a policy of relying upon indirect revenues for the ordinary expenses of the government.

He believes that this record is of itself worthy of the commendation of the people of the state. No interest, in his judgment, has been neglected, nor has any right been disturbed. With this record of the legislature, he says, "I am sure that the individual members deserve, and they undoubtedly will receive, the approval of the people of the state."

Among the bills of importance signed by the governor within the past thirty days was one which will give authority to district attorneys to prosecute much more successfully than at present the persons who have gambling establishments. This bill provides that no person shall be excused from attending and testifying before any court for a violation of any of the provisions of the act in regard to gambling. The act is to take effect on Sept. 1, and it is believed that it will give the district attorneys of the state sufficient authority to close all the gambling houses within the state.

For Good Roads.

The governor further signed a bill of Assemblyman Burnett's of Ontario county appropriating $1,500,000 for good roads. This is an increase, as already stated, of $900,000 over the appropriation of 1903, and it is believed that through the use of this money a large increase in the number of roads to be constructed will be brought about. The counties of the state will appropriate a similar amount of $1,500,000 for the improvement of roads, and consequently fully $3,000,000 will be dispensed the present year by state and local authorities in the improvement of the roads of the state.

Among the other measures which became laws during the thirty day period were the act to create a state agricultural college, to increase the efficiency of the agricultural experiment stations, appropriating money for the state fair, appropriating $60,000 to promote sugar beet culture and increasing the price of license of automobiles from $1 to $2.

THE APPROPRIATIONS.

Outlay Made by Congress Justified by the Needs of the Country.

The following table, compiled from official sources, shows the appropriations made by congress at the recent session:

Bills.	For year 1904-05.
Agriculture	$5,902,040
Army	77,070,301
Diplomatic and consular	2,020,101
District of Columbia	11,021,740
Fortification	7,518,192
Indian	9,447,961
Legislative, executive, judicial	28,556,913
Military academy	975,567
Navy	98,006,141
Pension	138,360,700
Postoffice	172,574,999
River and harbor	3,000,000
Sundry civil	57,846,911
Miscellaneous	1,000,000
Deficiencies	26,801,844
Permanent, interest, etc.	141,471,820
Total	$781,574,630

If we eliminate the postal appropriation from the calculation we find that total appropriations for 1905 are $608,999,631 as against $423,273,630 in 1897, an increase of $185,726,001, of which $54,000,000 is due to the larger army, $67,000,000 to the constantly growing navy, $22,500,000 to increased interest payments and only about $42,000,000 to all other causes.

The Republican party stands ready to justify these expenditures. Within the last few years we have freed Cuba, acquired Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippines, suppressing a general insurrection in those islands and bringing the blessings of peace to millions of people; we have increased our army with the increase in our territorial domain; we have built up a magnificent navy; we have introduced free rural delivery, which accounts for the great increase in postal appropriations, and large sums of money have been expended in promoting agriculture, in fortifying our coasts, in rendering our consular and diplomatic service more efficient, in constructing public buildings and in improving our rivers and harbors, and all this has been done without oppressing the people. Then, too, it is to be remembered that during the four fiscal years 1900-03, under the administrations of McKinley and Roosevelt, $212,790,240 of public money has been applied to the sinking fund, whereas during the four years of the second Cleveland administration the amount so applied was only $13,400,048.

The Democrats will be sure to cry out against the large appropriations by Republican congresses, but this will be only for partisan effect. If put into power they would not dare reduce the army any faster than the Republicans have been reducing it, they would not stop naval construction or sell the vessels now in the navy, they would not cut off pensions or abolish rural free delivery, and they would not give up the Philippines.

This is a big country. It has expanded greatly in all directions, and a vast amount of money is required to pay its running expenses, but in spite of the appropriations, which seem large, the expenditures per capita are vastly smaller in the United States than in any other large country in the world—$7.97 for each man, woman and child in the country as against $21.39 in the United Kingdom and $17.84 in France.—Rochester Post-Express.

PLAIN WORDS WANTED.

Democrats Are Demanding That Judge Parker Speak of 1896.

Notwithstanding the letter which Judge Parker once wrote to Elliot Danforth on the subject of his vote in 1896, the question of whether the chief judge was a Bryan man or not is bothering the two kinds of Democrats throughout the country.

Did Judge Parker vote for Bryan and the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1? If so, why?

A considerable class of Democrats take the view expressed by Representative Watson of Indiana, who said of the judge's silence:

> "How does he stand on 16 to 1? It is said he voted for it. If so, did he believe in it? If he did, he ought not to be president. If he did it without believing in it, he ought not to be president."

Democrats in New York state say they will appeal for support for Judge Parker here with the argument that his judicial duties took him out of the field of active politics. In other states they will claim party regularity for him. They do not say just what their ground will be at St. Louis, when Democrats from all states will gather under one roof.

DEFEAT FOR DEMOCRATS.

Editor Walker Thinks Hill Has Ruined Parker's Chances.

John Brisben Walker, editor of the Cosmopolitan and a Democrat, is not in favor of Judge Parker as the candidate of his party for president. He thinks David B. Hill and those he has associated with him in the management of the campaign are a guarantee of defeat if the judge is nominated. In an address delivered in Cooper Union, New York city, he said:

"With the Democratic party given over into the hands of Belmont and Mr. Morgan's attorney, Francis Lynde Stetson, and Mr. Hill and Mr. McCarren, who stands for all that is most corrupt in New York politics when it comes to the polls, the defeat will be so crushing that no combination of smart politicians will ever think it worth their while to gain possession of the machine of the Democratic party in the hope that they might capture power by a deception of the voters. The example will be unique and its lesson definite."

FARMERS NOT IN IT.

Mr. Hill Selects Wall Street to Back His Presidential Candidate.

"No Farmers Need Apply" Is the Notice Served on Up State Democrats.

Democrats from the up state counties are said to be displeased at the result of ex-Senator Hill's reorganization of his party machinery. Notice has been served on them pretty plainly, they think, that New York city, with Wall street as the center, will conduct this campaign. No interference from up the state is wanted, seems to them to be Mr. Hill's motto.

August Belmont, the Rothschilds' agent and Wall street magnate; Cord Meyer, the sugar trust representative; James T. Woodward, who was one of the bond syndicate when Mr. Cleveland was president the second time, and P. H. McCarren, who votes with the minority in the state senate winters and attends the race tracks the rest of the year; William F. Sheehan, who represents a string of corporations, are the men on whom Hill relies.

"No country politicians are wanted," was the watchword at Albany when the Democratic state committee met. Frank Campbell of Bath, who had been chairman for some years, had to give way to Cord Meyer, the millionaire sugar trust magnate whose last activity in politics was in 1893, when he was one of Maynard's associates on the ticket that the people slaughtered. Mr. Haven of Syracuse, who expected to be chairman, was dumped by Mr. Hill as so much unnecessary rubbish.

Mr. Meyer and Mr. Belmont, it is reported in New York, have undertaken to raise a campaign fund of $5,000,000.

McCarren Will Spend It.

Senator McCarren will leave the race tracks long enough to act as Hill's manager and will have the spending of this great sum. He is Hill's chairman of the state executive committee. He took the Kings county organization away from Murphy, gave it to Hill, and his reward is the chairmanship. Murphy and the Tammanyites generally regard McCarren's act as one of rank treachery, but it suited Hill, and it had to go. Murphy is now fighting desperately to undo McCarren and extend the rule of the wigwam over all of Brooklyn.

Hugh J. Grant, who has become a millionaire and can help with the funds, and W. S. Rodie, one of the managers of the Manhattan club, and Mr. Sheehan were made members of the executive committee. This left but three places, and Hill selected Frederick Cook of Rochester, George Hall, a millionaire from Ogdensburg, and John J. Kennedy for the places.

The Democrats have been making "the trusts" the issue. The entire proceedings in this state thus far, the platform, the choice of electors, the selection of managers, all take from them any show of sincerity in all this talk.

The campaign is a trust managed concern pure and simple thus far. If Parker be selected as the candidate the issue will be Wall street interests against Roosevelt. Hill has done his best to make the issue "Wall street against the cornfields."

CLEVELAND BOND SALES.

Do the People Want This Sort of Financiering Again?

Ex-President Cleveland has recently called the attention of the country to the bond sales made by him during his second administration, thus reviving a topic which Democrats who hope the country may be again given into their hands would like to see buried.

The question is to be presented to the people this year if they desire to intrust their affairs again to the party which only eight years ago made such a spectacle of government.

Under the Cleveland administration this government was compelled to sell $262,315,400 in bonds in a time of peace. The issues were:

February, 1894, at 5 per cent	$50,000,000
November, 1894, at 5 per cent	50,000,000
February, 1895, at 4 per cent	62,315,400
January, 1896, at 4 per cent	100,000,000

The interest on this amount of bonds is $114,926,160 for ten years, or nearly $11,500,000 per annum.

If these bonds had been issued on the same terms as those authorized by a Republican congress to raise revenues to conduct the war with Spain, the saving would have been worth while. These bore interest at 3 per cent. The interest on the four issues named at this rate would have been $7,809,462 annually, or a saving of $8,623,154 a year, or $36,231,540 in ten years.

The 3 per cents under Republican control of the country were in great demand. The 4 and 5 per cents under Democratic control might have been in better demand than they were had not the Washington authorities adopted dark lantern methods with Wall Street speculators before the public knew what was going on.

FUNNY BRITISH SOLONS.

Queer but Not Cogent Reasons Advanced Against Woman Suffrage.

Human nature is much alike all over the world. The debate just held in the British parliament on woman suffrage was marked by all the old arguments which have become "chestnuts" in the United States. It was enlivened, however, by some points that would seem new to us.

Mr. Labouchere, in opposing equal rights for women, asked: "Why was the grille kept in front of the ladies' gallery? Because the sight of so much beauty would disturb the minds of the members." And he argued that susceptible members will still more upset if ladies occupied seats on the floor of the house. No American legislature has yet found it necessary to put a grated screen before the ladies' gallery for fear that the sight of its occupants would be too much for the legislators' nerves.

Mr. Labouchere also said that it had taken millions of years to develop men from monkeys and asked, "Are we to give women votes in the hope that in some millions of years they will develop into intelligent voters?"

Another member claimed that the cruelty of women who wore birds' plumage and sealskins proved them unfit to vote. Mr. William Redmond asked how about pigeon shooting and similar sports?

In general, the opponents appealed to sentiment and indulged in prophecy, while the advocates of equal rights based their arguments on facts. They quoted the practical good results of equal suffrage in Australia and New Zealand and pointed out that none of the lurid predictions about women neglecting their homes and babies had been fulfilled. They set forth the hard conditions and starvation wages from which working women in England suffer and called attention to the large petitions and deputations from women wage earners in behalf of the ballot.

The overwhelming vote—182 in favor of full parliamentary suffrage for women and only 68 against—seemed to show that most of the members were not much alarmed by the direful prophecies of the conservatives.

This is the fourth time that the house of commons has recorded itself in favor of full suffrage for women by growing majorities. Last time the majority was 71. This time it is 114. Thus far the house of lords has always defeated the bill.

Ladies and Children

who can not stand the shocking strain of laxative syrups and cathartic pills are especially fond of Little Early Risers. All persons who find it necessary to take a liver medicine should try these easy pills, and compare the agreeably pleasant and strengthening effect with the nauseating and weakening conditions following the use of other remedies. Little Early Risers cure biliousness, constipation, sick headache, jaundice, malaria and liver troubles. Sold by H. C. Giesler.

Weak Hearts

Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.

Mr. D. Kauble, of Nevada, O., says: I had stomach trouble and was in a bad state as I had heart trouble with it. I took Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for about four months and it cured me.

FLAMINGOES.

There Are Several Species of These Radiant Tropical Birds.

There are about seven species of flamingoes inhabiting the tropical parts of both hemispheres, three of which are in America, frequenting the Bahamas, Florida and Cuba. In height the bird averages about five feet, and if its curved neck were stretched to its full length it would tower above the head of an ordinary man. Flamingoes breed in May and June. At this period their bright colored plumage is faded. It assumes its most radiant hues in winter. When first hatched, the young have a straight bill, which after a time develops into one of bent shape. Their first plumage is grayish white and passes through various tints of pink, rose, carmine or vermilion to the full scarlet of the adult, which reaches its deepest shade on the wings. Several years are necessary to perfect the final gaudy plumage.

The eggs are white, showing a blue tinge when scraped under the surface. They are long, oval and have a thick shell, equaling in size that of the common goose. The flesh is not palatable to the taste, being extremely oily. They feed upon both animal and vegetable matter from the ooze and soft bottoms of the shallow waters and lagoons selected by them both as a feeding ground and nesting place. When flying, their long legs are stretched out behind and the neck becomes straight. They have a peculiar voice and a sort of one syllable outcry, which they utter as an alarm signal the moment they are approached or believe themselves to be in danger. On account of their keen eyed and wary nature it is almost impossible to get within close range of them. They walk with slow and cautious tread.

A Cure For Piles.

"I had a bad case of piles," says G. F. Carter, of Atlanta, Ga., "and consulted a physician who advised me to try a box of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. I purchased a box and was entirely cured. It is splendid for piles, giving relief instantly, and I heartly recommend it to all sufferers. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is unequalled for its healing qualities. Eczema and other skin diseases, also sores, cuts, burns and wounds of every kind are quickly cured by it. Sold by H. C. Giesler.

A Frank Comment.

Housekeepers will appreciate this little story of Dean Stanley: During a visit to America, not long before his death, he was invited to dine with a certain college president in a southern town. Early in the meal the dean inquired of his hostess: "Mrs. G——, would it be impertinent to ask what is this gumbo soup?" "Perhaps I can best answer," was the amused reply, "by telling you Lady A——'s comment on the dish when she dined with us once on a time. She leaned across the table and called to her husband: 'You would better try the soup. It's not nearly so nasty as it looks!'" "Ah!" said the dean, smiling, "that was exactly like Lady A——. She is a cousin of mine!"—Harper's Bazar.

Solving the Problems of the Day.

All that may be said as to the shortcomings of women, it still must be acknowledged that they are better prepared to exercise the suffrage than any class which has been admitted to the electorate. It has been said that our government is founded upon the broad principle that the most effective government for mankind is not that which the wisest and best would select, but that which the average of mankind would select. Logically, then, to secure the most satisfactory results woman must form part of this average. Legislation and administration will thus represent two points of view, the man's and the woman's—the state and the home—each absolutely dependent on the other. There must be strong cooperation, not alone among men, but also between men and women, to meet successfully the problems of the day, which in their final analysis are all political, and it is this co-operation which the women of the nation offer to the government.—Ida Husted Harper.

True Heart Disease is a Rare Thing

The cause of your palpitation is probably, pressure arising from gas in the stomach—that is, gastric indigestion. A few doses of Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. David Kennedy's new medicine, will cleanse away the foul accumulations and the heart will run quietly and keep good time. Chinese Business Methods.

Business among the Chinese, according to a Russian traveler from Manchuria, is on a co-operative basis. There are neither proprietors nor employees, but all who work in an establishment are partners.

From time to time small allowances are doled out to them—barely enough to live on—but at the end of the year all the profits are divided.

The Chinese merchants are so honest that among all the ten branches of the Russo-Chinese bank located in China there has been no record since their establishment of a single protested note.

Rheumatic Pains Relieved.

The prompt relief from the severe pains of sciatica and rheumatism which is afforded by Chamberlain's Pain Balm, is alone worth many times its cost. Mr. Willard C. Vail, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., writes: "I am troubled with rheumatism and neuralgia of the nerves and Chamberlain's Pain Balm gives relief quicker than any liniment I have ever used." For sale by H. C. Giesler.

A QUEER COACH ROAD.

Passengers Pay Their Fare and Work Their Way as Well.

In the old days of canal voyaging captains of boats were not infrequently asked to give a wayfarer a lift. The man was asked if he was willing to work his passage. If he said "Yes" he was put to work driving the horses. In Europe, it seems, a similar custom is practiced on paying coach passengers.

In the Pyrenees there is a coach road between two villages, one on each side of a mountain 16,000 feet high. After the coach has proceeded a little distance and reached the steep part of the ascent the conductor begs the passengers to get out so as to ease the horses. They are even requested a push behind and help the poor animals to drag the huge vehicle uphill.

When at last the summit is reached the traveler, wiping from his forehead drops of sweat as big as kidney beans, congratulates himself on the breezy ride down the steep slopes of the descent which awaits him.

There is where he makes a mistake, for the conductor, with a sweet smile, begs the gentlemen to be kind enough to hang on to the coach behind and act the part of a Westinghouse air brake or else the horses may be injured.

In this manner the terminus of the line is reached, the passengers having pushed the coach all the way up one side of the mountain and held it back all the way down the other.

In spite of this there is a rush for places on the coach daily, as there has been for half a century.—Spare Moments.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its best work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

An Open Letter.

From the Chapin, S. C., News: Early in the Spring my wife and I were taken with diarrhoea and so severe were the pains that we called a physician who prescribed for us, but his medicines failed to give any relief. A friend who had a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy on hand gave each of us a dose and we at once felt the effects. I procured a bottle and before using the entire contents we were entirely cured. It is a wonderful remedy and should be found in every household. H. C. Bailey, editor. This remedy is for sale by H.C. Giesler.

London Built on Sponges.

One could surely find no worse ground to build upon than a bed of sponges such as we use for the bath. And yet London has for its subsoil only sponges, although we call them flints. Once they grew as sponges do now in salt water shallows, and they are found in layers petrified among the chalk of southern England. The Thames valley chalk has been melted like so much sugar and carried away with the running waters, but the flints have been left behind, and on these the whole city of London has found its excellent foundations.

BONE FOOD

Soft and crooked bones mean bad feeding. Call the disease rickets if you want to. The growing child must eat the right food for growth. Bones must have bone food, blood must have blood food and so on through the list.

Scott's Emulsion is the right treatment for soft bones in children. Little doses every day give the stiffness and shape that healthy bones should have.

Bow legs become straighter, loose joints grow stronger and firmness comes to the soft heads.

Wrong food caused the trouble. Right food will cure it.

In thousands of cases Scott's Emulsion has proven to be the right food for soft bones in childhood.

Nearly Sad.

A newspaper in a small country town not far from New York employs a reporter whose knowledge of English idioms is somewhat uncertain. He was assigned recently to report the sudden death of an important local citizen, and after describing the circumstances leading up to it he referred to the sadness of the bereavement sustained by the family. "The widow," he concluded, "is almost grief stricken."—Harper's Weekly.

DIED.

Again the angel of death has entered a Fulton home and claimed a cherished wife and mother. Not as a destroyer did it come, but to bring rest and peace to the body which had been tortured for a year by pain which medical skill could not conquor; as a beautiful benediction upon a life which was only granted three-score years; but these years had been so filled with unselfish devotion to home, church and friends as to have fully rounded out and completed the Master's work which was allotted to her.

Louisa Ellen Palmer was born in Jefferson County 60 years ago last September, but at an early age she removed with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Palmer to Brewerton, Onondaga County, where she resided until after she was united in marriage with Mr. A. J. Snow, on May 5, 1868, the Rev. T. B. Shepard officiating. She received her education in the common schools in Onondaga County and at Falley Seminary, and prior to her marriage she successfully taught several terms of school in her home county. Many men and women of position and influence in Syracuse at present were her students, and they love to recall the school days and their teacher's zeal, enthusiasm and thoroughness.

To Mr. and Mrs. Snow four children were born, one of whom died several years ago. The surviving children are Attorney Robert Morris of Syracuse, Mary Louise, who is teaching in the High school at Boonville, N. Y., and Edwin Palmer, who is in school in this city. An only sister, Mrs. J. R Loomis of Brooklyn, also survives. The deceased united with the Baptist church in North Syracuse nearly forty years ago, and she has been one of the most loyal and conscientious workers in the Baptist church in this city since her residence here. She was at one time president of the Society of Kings' Daughters and was one of its most active members always. She had been an officer in the Ladies' Aid Society, and at the time of her death was treasurer of the home missionary society of the church. The deceased was also a member of the Current Events club, although ill health had prevented her attendance at the meetings.

Organic heart trouble which caused her death just before sunset on Sunday evening, had prevented her from taking an active part in church and social duties for two years past, but her interest never failed, and counsel and advice was ever ungrudgingly given her former co-workers when they went to her.

The largely attended funeral services were held from the late home this Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, the Rev. Nelson Reynolds, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Vincent, were the officiating clergymen. A vocal solo was rendered by Miss Georgetta Foster and an appropriate selection was sung by the Baptist choir. The pall bearers were the Messrs. H. S. Gardner, C. W. Streeter, John Morton, A. L. Warner, Fred E. Sayer and Arthur G. Gilbert. Interment was made in the family plot at Mt. Adnah.

The deepest sympathy of this community is extended to the bereaved husband, children and sister. The lovely personality of the deceased made it a privilege to have known her, and companionship with her was a blessing of inestimable worth.

Mrs. Henry Armstrong, aged 66, died at her home at Lewis' Corners on Monday.

The remains of Mrs. Mary Jones, mother of Mrs. Andrus Morse, were removed from Mt. Adnah vault on Monday and taken to Belleville, Ont. for interment.

Mrs. Eleanor Veeder, aged 96, died at her home in Schenectady on Saturday after an illness of five days. The deceased was the mother of Mrs. M. J. Gilmour and was quite well known in this city,

Sarah, wife of Michael Ward died at her home, corner Sixth and Ontario streets, Sunday evening, at the age of 82. The funeral services were held from the Catholic church this Wednesday morning at 9:30 o'clock. Interment was made in St. Mary's.

Caroline C., widow of the late John McCarthy, aged 70, died at her home in West Fifth street on Monday. The funeral services will be held from the Catholic church on Thursday morning at 9:30 o'clock, the Rev. P. J. Kearney officiating.

On Saturday in Auburn occurred the death of Mrs. M. Parker Andelfinger, aged 70. The funeral services were held from her late home on Monday and the remains were brought to this city for interment in Mt. Adnah. The deceased is survived by her daughter, Mrs. Albert Bolk of Rochester and two sisters, Mrs. L. Bouvington and Mrs. M. A. Carey, both of this city.

William H. Chauncey, aged 50, died at his home in New York city on Thursday, after a brief illness with pneumonia. The deceased was a native of Oswego and was at one time superintendent of a western division of the R. W. & O., R. R. The remains were taken to Oswego for interment in the family lot in Riverside cemetery. The deceased was a brother of Mr. G. G. Chauncey of this city.

Lyman Patterson, aged 60, died in the Hospital of the Good Shepard in Syracuse on Wednesday night after a comparatively brief period of suffering with cancer on his face. The remains were brought to this city and the funeral services were held from the First M. E. church on Friday afternoon, the Rev. John Richards officiating. The deceased is survived by a daughter Mrs. Provost of Hackensack, N. J., and a son, Mr. Frederick Patterson of Jersey City, N. J. Interment was made in Mt. Adnah.

Our residents will learn with regret of the death of the Rev. Andrew W. Cross which occurred at his home in Riverside, Cal., on Friday last. While pastor of the Universalist church in this city, Mr. Cross made a host of friends who will hold his memory in tender esteem. He was gifted with an unusually active mind and this coupled with a frail physique, made him an easy prey to consumption from which he died. He went to California about three years ago after a battle against disease in this climate, but while his life was lengthened by the change, a cure could not be effected. The funeral was held on Sunday. Much sympathy is expressed for the widow by whom he is survived.

City Hospital.

President Bacon of the Hospital Association wishes the Times to state that the item published on Sunday in an out-of-town paper relative to the organizing of the medical and surgical staff for the hospital, was entirely incorrect, as no official action in regard to the appointments has been taken, and the price for rooms and ward service has not yet been decided upon. A meeting will be held on Thursday evening at which plans may be perfected.

The Women's Auxiliary to the association is most desirous that every woman in Fulton who is at all interested in the hospital, should become an active member of the association. The Knights of Pythias have kindly offered the use of their club rooms to the auxiliary and the offer has been gratefully accepted and the meetings which will be held on the first Thursday in each month at 2 o'clock, will be held in the rooms. The only requisite for membership is the signing of the constitution and the payment of yearly dues of 25 cents. All ladies are earnestly requested to meet in the rooms next week Thursday with thimbles and needles as there is considerable sewing to be done. Especially are societies requested to join the auxiliary and aid by their presence and labor, the ladies who are already members.

Old linen is greatly needed at once and contributions will be gratefully received by the association. The parcels may be left at [illegible]

Chevalier Wiegand Seriously Ill.

A dispatch from Oswego states that Chevalier Auguste Wiegand, the organist at St Paul's church, was taken suddenly ill on Saturday night. Dr. Sheridan, who attended him, advised him not to play the organ on Sunday but he insisted upon doing so, and rendered the full programme. Shortly afterwards his condition became serious and a consultation of physicians was called.

Drs. Sheridan, Mansfield and Dwyer decided that he had appendicitis and an operation was performed.

He was to have given a recital at the St. Louis Exposition on May 24, but his illness has necessitated the postponement of that engagement.

On Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock the members of the post and kindred organizations will assemble in Stephens Opera House and after the impressive ritual is invoked, Colonel Cunningham of Glens Falls will deliver the oration.

The order of march will be as follows: From Post rooms to Opera house, to First street, to Oneida street, to Third street, to Buffalo street, to Broadway, to cemetery. HERE IT IS,
Here is the Offer,
Good to both tenants and owners.

If you live in a rented house, and wish to use gas, we will do all necessary piping, from the street main to the range, FREE. Furthermore, should you move, we will again pipe to your range FREE. Knowing this, you need not hesitate about buying a range.

If you own the house in which you live, you too, of course, are entitled to free piping.

FREE PIPING means a saving of about $20.00, and a range at wholesale price means a further saving of at least $7.00. Considering this, and also the fact that gas is the cheapest, the quickest and in every way the best fuel for cooking and baking, it would seem wise, seem good business, to give the matter attention NOW, while the free piping offer is still open.

When setting a range we put on a safety shut-off, which renders it impossible for children to interfere with the gas.

Ranges connected up and ready to use $10.50, $11.50, $12.50, $13.75 and $20.00.

TERMS: Easy payments or cash.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its best work. The Orange Tree.

The orange tree is regarded as a prince among trees and the emblem of genius. A peculiarity of this tree is that it bears fruit and flower at the same time. Its leaves are evergreen, and as it grows older it grows in beauty and fruitfulness, its blossom filling the air with its fragrance. It is indeed a fit emblem of marriage promise and hopes. The orange tree is considered typical of love because, though its fruit is golden and its flavor and scent delicious, its rind is bitter, and, as every one knows who has experienced it, Cupid's dart causes pain. The orange is emblematic of gratitude as well as of genius and love.

The following information will be found useful in making estimates:

The great Fair at St. Louis will open April 30th, 1904, and close November 30, 1904, and will no doubt attract a larger aggregate number than ever visited any previous World's Fair. The U. S. and governments of the various States are devoting twenty millions of dollars to the erection of handsome buildings, and filling them with exhibits, while foreign countries are represented to the number of forty-seven.

The Democratic National Convention will be held in St. Louis July 6th, which will doubtless draw a larger number of visitors to the Fair on July 4th than would otherwise attend.

The Fourth of July attendance at Chicago was [illegible], Omaha, 98,618, Buffalo, 71,034.

Cut out carefully along this line and mail to us promptly.

I estimate, the number of paid admissions to the ST. LOUIS FAIR July 4th will be:

PAYING TELLER'S LAPSE.

He and Several Others Failed to Note an Absurd Error.

Banks are notoriously careful about scrutinizing the signatures to checks on which they pay out money, yet, as the following incident well illustrates, it is possible for even the most careful and experienced of paying tellers to make mistakes. The incident is the more remarkable because it reveals a most curious error on the part of a prominent business man as well as an astonishing lapse in the case of a usually accurate and scrupulously exact bank official.

Among the depositors at one of the largest banks in the city is an old and prominent firm which may be called for the purposes of this relation, Aloysius Jenkins & Co. All checks issued by the firm are signed in person by Aloysius Jenkins, its head, so that his handwriting and signature are thoroughly familiar to the bank officers at whose bank he has deposited for twenty years or more.

During the first week of this month Mr. Jenkins got notice from the bank that a check signed for $1,800 in his handwriting, but signed Aloysius Smith & Co., had been paid by the bank during the previous month and the sum paid out charged against his account. Aloysius Jenkins was perfectly certain that he had never made such a foolish mistake as that. He sent over for the check. It needed only a glance to show him that he had written it and the signature really was Aloysius Smith & Co. He called up the people to whom the check was payable and whose indorsement was on its back. They had not noticed the mistake at all. It had passed through the hands of their cashier and of other employees and had been by them sent to the bank, where it had been credited to their account without question, passing the sharp eyes of the paying teller and only being discovered by accident nearly thirty days afterward.

Six or more experienced and expert business men had let that absurd mistake get by without detecting it. It was almost beyond belief. The only more ridiculous thing about it all was the fact that he had missigned his own firm name. By referring to his letter book for the day the check was dated he discovered that he had been busy just then in closing up an important deal with a man named Smith. That was the only possible explanation for his slip. He has had the canceled check framed, and it now hangs in his office as a reminder that "to err is human" even in the best trained circles.—Chicago Tribune.

Two of a Kind.

Mrs. A. Cerbity—You have accepted Henry! Why, you know very well I don't approve of him. Her Daughter—That's all right, mother. Neither does he approve of you!

A WISE EDUCATOR.

He Recognizes the Value of Woman's Co-operation In the State.

Edwin G. Cooley, superintendent of the public schools in Chicago, proposes to organize the pupils into a miniature republic and teach them by actual experience their duties as citizens. The national representatives will be elected from the grammar schools and the national senators from the high schools. State and city governments will be formed in the same way. The Australian ballot system will be used in elections and the machinery of the national government copied in every detail.

Young women not only will be allowed to vote, but will be eligible to election as senators, congressmen and aldermen. In fact, the little government will be founded upon the principles of co-education and equal suffrage.

If this plan is carried out it will supply the missing element in our public school work. Education given by the state should fit the child to take his place in the state as a citizen and to perform the duties of citizenship. The growing corruption of politics shows that so far our public schools have failed in these all important particulars.

Think what it would be to have Professor Cooley's idea carried out in all our public schools. Think of the uplift politics would receive if every graduate from the grammar school and the high school understood the sacredness of the ballot and the necessity of using it for the public good. The boys accustomed to seeing girls voting and holding office in the mimic state would not be likely to develop into men opposed to equal rights. The girl accustomed to think of herself as a citizen would never develop into a remonstrant, nor would she placidly accept the legal conditions that class her with idiots, lunatics, criminals and minors. One can hardly overestimate the good that would result from such training in citizenship, and Professor Cooley's experiment will be watched with interest, especially by those who believe that women are citizens and that they should have the same political rights that men citizens have.

"I'd give him a piece of my mind," said her mother.

"Just a little sample of married life," suggested the father.—Cleveland Leader.

THE IGNORANT VOTE.

How to Eliminate It From Our Body Politic.

The only plausible argument I have ever heard against the extension of the suffrage of women is that it would increase the ignorant vote, as well as add to the intelligent vote. Yet the best way to eliminate ignorance in politics is to bestow political responsibility. Many women who today take little interest in municipal or national government would at once interest themselves in public affairs and would give more time to the study of important questions which concern the welfare of the community and fewer hours to gossip, frills and bridge whist.

Besides, the ignorant vote is not such a menace to the good government in our country as is the rich, corrupt vote. Many intelligent voters block all measures for reform and give large sums of money for bribery and corruption because of selfish, sordid personal interests.

Many of our so called ignorant women are sufficiently intelligent to vote for their own interests, and the interests of the mother of a family are not always identical with the interests of the father. For instance, many poor, ignorant women would be glad to help abolish the large number of saloons where such a large percentage of their husbands' and sons' wages goes.

Former Governor Adams of Colorado, who recently traveled to Washington in order to give his valuable testimony in behalf of woman suffrage, said in the address he gave at the national suffrage convention that during the ten years in which women had exercised the privilege of the ballot in his state their vote had been overwhelmingly on the side of good government. The woman's vote is known to be a conscientious vote. The depraved women, he said, took no interest in the elections and had to be driven to the polls by the police.—Maude Nathan, President Consumers' League, in New York Herald.

A SPLENDID WORK.

What Woman Suffrage Has Done In the Australian Commonwealth.

A lady who lives and votes and has her being in Australia, where her sex has full suffrage, lately visited America and gave some addresses. In a speech in Boston she said, "We have found it is better to fence the precipice at the top than to wait at the bottom with an ambulance." So far as working real reforms, municipal and otherwise, the woman who cannot vote can now only wait at the bottom of the precipice with an ambulance, no matter how capable and public spirited she is. All the world lets her take care of the sick and poor. But if she had a vote she could do much to prevent sickness, crime and poverty. Meantime here are some of the things the ballot has done for the feminine sex in Australia: It has established a new department of government—the children's council—which sees that in all court cases children get justice and kindness and a fair chance. It has abolished child labor altogether. In the factories the sanitary conditions have been greatly improved and all the employees get a Saturday half holiday. In the postoffice department, where women clerks received $300 a year before they had a vote, they now get $550. Before women voted women teachers in the public schools got less pay than men for the same work, while now the salaries are the same to both for the like grade of work. Since women have had the ballot the men of Australia have discovered that the world is for woman, too, and that women are somebody as well as themselves. Meantime, while in monarchical Australia women have all their rights as human beings, in the so called free republic of the United States women still wait with an ambulance at the bottom of the precipice everywhere except in four states.

Faculty of Imitation In Animals.

Some animals have wonderful powers of imitation. Dogs brought up in the company of cats have been known to acquire the trick of licking the paws and then washing the face. When a cat has been taught to sit up for food her kittens have been known to imitate her action. Darwin tells of a cat that was in the habit of putting her paw into the mouth of a narrow milk pitcher every time she got the chance and then licking the cream off her paw. Her kitten soon learned the same trick. A lady tells of a rabbit that she keeps in a cage with a monkey and says that Bunnie has caught many of the monkey's ways. It is said that starving pigeons that have been brought up on grain will not eat peas to save their lives, but that if pea eating pigeons are put with them they follow their example and eat peas.—Detroit News-Tribune.

Washington Could Run.

"As to running," said Parson Weems in his book on George Washington, "the swift footed Achilles could scarcely have matched his speed. 'Egad, he ran wonderfully!' said my amiable and aged friend, John Fitzhugh, Esq., who knew him well. 'We had nobody hereabouts who could come near him. There was young Langhorn Dade of Westmoreland, a confounded, clean made, tight young fellow and a mighty swift runner, too; but, then, he was no match for George. Langy, indeed, did not like to give up and would brag that sometimes he had brought George to a tie. But I believe he was mistaken, for I have seen them run together many a time, and George always beat him easy enough.'"

THIS is the day of the natural waisted woman. The W. B. Erect Form has changed the American figure. It has supplanted discomfort with ease—it has banished the impossible and exaggerated figure produced by the old corset idea. It removes the strain of lacing from the sensitive parts of the body and throws all pressure upon the hips and the strong back muscles, supporting the stomach within the corset and not forcing it below the garment. The Erect Form is made in more models than ever before. There are forty distinct styles of this popular make, each meant for a distinct type of woman. Dealers in all sized towns and cities the land over, sell the Erect Form. Prices range upward from $1.

It may not be generally understood that the reason Mr. John Hunter resigned his membership on the Board of Education where he so ably labored for the very best interests of our schools for a year, was because when he removed from Buffalo to Highland street, he moved from the fifth ward and Dr. Marsh was appointed from that ward to fill the vacancy.

Special attention has been given to preparing appropriate millinery for this season of the year. We invite the ladies to inspect our stock of dress hats, shirt-waist hats and children's sailors.

Truant Officer Samuel Green has just returned from New York city. He committed John Bowley to the truant school at White Plains last week. This makes the tenth boy to have been sent to this school from Fulton since April 25, 1898; three of whom have been twice sent there, but the result has always been beneficial and now that the new law is to the effect that a boy may be kept in the school for two years if best, it will be even more beneficial. Prior to this time a boy could only be sent to the school until the end of the school year. While away, Mr. Green also visited the House of Refuge for Women at Hudson. This institution will hereafter be known as the State Training School for Girls, and no girls over 16 will be taken. The older women who are at present in the House are to be dismissed as soon as their time expires. The State Industrial school at Rochester and the House of Refuge for Boys at Randalls Island are also to be tranformed into institutions for boys under 16. These inovations will prove of very great benifit to the State and the question of dealing with truants and young crimicals is fast becoming simplified by thoughtful, earnest men.

SCHLOSS CLOTHING

THAT'S the kind we handle. It is the "kind that helps you on in the world" and is ever "considerate of your pocket-book."

"Clothes don't make the man, but good clothes have secured many a good position," said a railroad president recently. "If you have $25 and want a job, it is better to spend $20 for clothes, $4 for shoes and the rest for a shave and a hair cut and a clean collar, and walk to the place, than to go with the money in the pockets of a dingy suit."

The above argument is all right, but you need not pay as much as $20 for clothes that will give you a prosperous appearance, when you can come here and walk off with a snappy suit like that shown in the picture

OPPOSED TO ARMOR.

SENATOR HALE, WHO SAYS BATTLESHIPS ARE OBSOLETE.

Thinks Sea Fights in the Far East Prove His Contention—Naval Experts Hold Different Views—Admiral Makaroff's Theory.

That the modern battleship is not likely to become obsolete in the near future seems to be the preponderance of expert naval opinion the world over notwithstanding the recent sensational remarks of Senator Hale of Maine regarding its usefulness.

Basing his opinion on the recent disasters at Port Arthur, Senator Hale, who is chairman of the senate naval affairs committee, practically said that the battleship has outlived its usefulness and that Uncle Sam had made a bad bargain in spending large sums on this class of ships. Naval authorities, however, take issue with Mr. Hale's conclusions, which they regard as hardly warranted by events in the far east. They maintain that so long as other nations build battleships this country must do the same if it would keep its navy in condition to meet a foreign foe on the sea. They believe that when the time comes, if it ever does, for the abandonment of this type of warship it will have to be abandoned by all nations simultaneously, giving place to some much more powerful form of naval weapon.

Probably the only great naval man of modern times irreconcilably opposed to battleships and heavily armored cruisers was Vice Admiral Makaroff, who by the manner of his death helped to prove the truth of his pet theory. He would not regard battleships in any other light than as targets for torpedoes. "What good are those swollen worms? Their bodies are large, but they cannot move, and a few ants will destroy them."

According to a Russian naval authority these words were used by Makaroff in combating the scheme to build the Retvizan, the Gromovoi, the Borodino and other huge vessels at the time of Russia's great naval expansion a few years ago. He wanted the money to be spent for light cruisers, destroyers and such craft. His chief opponent was Admiral Alexeieff, who was a firm believer in the battleship.

They were the most powerful and influential of the Russian admirals, and their fight over this question agitated

SENATOR EUGENE HALE.

Russian naval circles for years. Eventually Alexeieff won, for he was supported by nearly all the other naval experts, while Makaroff's views were regarded as revolutionary by his own profession. Almost his only disciple was Admiral Skrydloff, who has just succeeded him in command of the eastern fleet. The battleships were built, and it was on one of these despised ships that Makaroff lost his life. When he first assumed command at Port Arthur he carried out his theory by hoisting his flag on small unarmored vessels like the Askold and Novik. If he had continued that policy he would probably be alive today.

Naval experts generally say that battleships are absolutely necessary for conducting effective warfare. It is only when they are accompanied by armored ships that the lighter classes of vessels in a fleet are useful. A fleet of torpedo boats, cruisers, submarines and all such craft, without the protection of the armored vessels, would be effective only temporarily, say the experts, and could be easily routed and destroyed by a few big battleships.

Senator Eugene Hale is a native of the Pine Tree State, received an academic education and was admitted to the bar in 1857. He began practice at Ellsworth, Me., and that city has since been his home. He went to Washington in 1869 as a member of the Forty-first congress and was four times reelected. After an interim of two years he was elected to the senate to succeed Hannibal Hamlin, taking his seat March 4, 1881. Since then he has been regularly returned. He was twice asked to take cabinet portfolios, once by General Grant and again by President Hayes, but each time declined the honor.

Only four members of the two houses of congress antedate Senator Hale in service in the national councils—Allison, Stewart and Cullom of the senate, and Ketcham in the house; but his total service exceeds in years that of all of these but Allison. Senator Hoar of Massachusetts entered congress simultaneously with Hale and has two years the advantage of the Maine statesman in length of service in the two houses. John H. Ketcham of New York is the only individual who is a member of the present house who was also a member of that body in 1869. Senator Hale is sixty-eight years old.

ALL THE STATES AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Many Beautiful Pavilions and Pretentious Buildings Show Forth the Enterprise of American Commonwealths.

A beautiful city has grown up among the trees on the World's Fair grounds at St. Louis. It has nothing to do with the immense exhibit palaces, but is a thing apart. The houses in this new city are of various styles of architecture. Some are palatial in size and appearance, while others look merely cozy and inviting. Never before have so many notable and historic buildings been constructed in one group. This new city might be called the City of the States, for the houses included in it are the state buildings at the Fair.

The city is not compact, but somewhat straggling, as befits the picturesqueness of the view. Yet there is nothing suggestive of a Stringtown-on-the-Pike about this city, for the grounds surrounding each of the houses are beautified with gardens typical of the state represented.

All the states are to be represented at the World's Fair. This means a great deal, a shining triumph for the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, and furnishes another illustration of the fact that this Exposition's completeness is the marvel of the age.

Fifty-one states, territories and possessions of the United States have taken the steps necessary to participate in the World's Fair on an important scale. But two states were still outside the fold at the last report, and in each of these was a well defined movement in favor of being represented at the Fair with buildings and exhibits. New Hampshire, the old home state, and Delaware are the states referred to. In New Hampshire a fund for participation is being raised privately by patriotic citizens, so that in the event of legislative inaction this commonwealth may be represented.

The states and territories are expending over $7,000,000 in their efforts to show off to best advantage at the Exposition. This is a million and a third more than was expended at the Chicago exposition by the states. In addition to this, large cities in many states will have municipal exhibits, the funds for which are not included in these figures. The municipal exhibit idea is entirely novel. From a number of the states there will be prominent county exhibits provided by special appropriation of county funds.

This City of the States presents a picture of surpassing beauty. Nature has done much to aid in the creation of the picture. Never before has any exposition been able to grant such advantageous sites for state buildings. The buildings are situated on a plateau about seventy-five feet higher than the level ground to the north upon which stand the main exhibit palaces. There are hills and ravines here and there, enabling the landscapists to lay out a most delightful pattern of roads and terraces and lawns.

The smallest of the state buildings is that of Arizona, which stands near the southeastern entrance to the grounds. One of the largest is that of Missouri, from the dome of which it is said that perhaps the very finest view of the Exposition may be enjoyed. This building is a palace in the Italian renaissance architecture, built at a cost of $105,000. Near by is the reproduction of the Cabildo at New Orleans, in which the Louisiana Purchase transfer ceremonies took place—Louisiana's state building. Ohio has a clubhouse of highly ornate design, in the architecture of the French renaissance. Illinois is prominent with a most pretentious structure, with wide verandas and a commanding cupola.

A description of each of the state buildings, with any detail, would more than fill a newspaper page. It is only possible here to hint at some of the interesting structures. California, for instance, has reproduced in exact size the famous old La Rabida Mission. Connecticut presents a replica of the Sigourney residence at Hartford, home of the poetess Lydia Huntley Sigourney in her time. This building is said to be the finest specimen of purely colonial architecture now standing. The New Kentucky Home, from the Blue Grass State, is a handsome clubhouse that would make some of the mansions along Fifth avenue, New York city, look insignificant. Beauvoir, the quaint old house which Jefferson Davis owned and occupied for many years, is reproduced by Mississippi. Its wide verandas or galleries give it a most inviting appearance. Washington's headquarters at Morristown, N. J., are reproduced by New Jersey. Virginia contributes Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson.

The state of Washington contributes a structure of unique design. It is called the Wigwam, five stories high, built of wood from Washington forests. The building is octagonal, with gigantic diagonal timbers rising from the ground and meeting in an apex ninety feet in the air, above which is built an observatory, from which a splendid view of the Exposition may be had. An elevator will carry visitors to the observatory.

New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Arkansas, Colorado, West Virginia, Indiana, Wisconsin, Texas and many other states are represented by buildings which cannot fail to arouse admiration. The Texas building is in the shape of a five pointed star, an appropriate idea for the big Lone Star State. Iowa has a magnificent mansion, with classic porticoes and a central tower containing an observatory chamber. Kansas, Indian Territory and Oklahoma each uphold the growing reputation of the southwest for enterprise and fertility of resources.

LET THE WOMEN STOOP.

Their "Mixing In Politics" Will Surely Lead to Much Good.

Mayor Rose of Milwaukee, Wis., is reported to have recently said of the Woman's Republican club of this city, "I felt like telling them they had better be at home raising babies than mixing in the mire of politics."

Whenever women express a desire to take a hand in politics there is great consternation among the brethren, and especially the politicians; great bogies are flourished before them with such scare heads as, "When Lovely Woman Stoops to Politics," "Women In the Dirty Pool of Politics," "Women In the Mire of Politics," etc., and yet these same men seem to think women should be content to be governed by laws emerging from so foul a source. In the case of women it is always "stooping to politics."

If it is true that politics has become so corrupt as to warrant its being called by these vile names, is it not high time that something was being done to drag it out of this slough of corruption, and who would be more likely to accomplish the task than the women of this country who stand for honesty and morality to the greatest extent of any class?

Politics is but a reflection of the character of the majority having these things in control, and as men constitute over 95 per cent of our criminals and less than one-third of our church members what can you expect but corruption in politics when only men look after it? What we need is a higher average of morality at the ballot box to elect men of greater moral worth.

Women are in a vast majority in nearly all organizations for the uplifting of humanity, and as each class of voters elect men to office who will represent their own interests to the greatest extent it is but reasonable to suppose that women, being more interested in the home and the moral and philanthropic side of life, would see to it that these things were not neglected.

The continual emphasis that is being placed upon "stooping to politics" and its general acceptance by the people reveals a dangerous lack of appreciation regarding the honor and dignity of government, and must result in grave danger to our republic unless something can be done to arouse public conscience.

ELNORA MONROE BABCOCK.

Organized Labor For Equal Rights.

I am in entire sympathy with the movement for the enfranchisement of women and to accord to womankind the legal, natural and dignified position of equality which by every human impulse and conception she is entitled to occupy.

The American Federation of Labor, representing the organized labor movement of the wage earners of our country, stands committed to the principle of securing equal pay and equal consideration of women to men. We not only declare for this, but bear burdens and make sacrifices for their achievement, conscious that they make for the advantage and benefit of all.

The application of the equality of rights in the economic and political affairs of our country and our states will raise the conception of our common duty and redound to the lasting benefit of humanity.—Samuel Gompers, President American Federation of Labor.

Messrs. Ely Bros.:—I have used your Cream Balm in my family for nine years and it has become my family doctor for colds in the head. I use it freely on my children. It is a Godsend to children.

Yours respectfully, J. KIMBALL.

Messrs. Ely Bros:—I suffered greatly with catarrh and tried different remedies without effect. After using one bottle of your Cream Balm I found relief and I cannot praise too highly such a remedy.

INCONSISTENCY'S SELF.

How Opponents of Woman Suffrage Defeat Their Own Arguments.

If I were asked who are the most inconsistent of all inconsistent men and women I would, without a moment's hesitation, answer, "The opponents of woman suffrage."

Think of it! They proclaim that man and woman have different natures, and yet maintain that man can represent woman better than woman can represent herself; they admit that woman possesses intelligence and mental endowments equal to man, and yet maintain that she lacks business and political sense; they protest that virtue is the most essential qualification of the citizen voter, and yet maintain that woman, who possesses this qualification in the highest degree, should be excluded from the polls; they admit to the ballot box the worst elements of society, and yet maintain that the best elements should be excluded from it; they believe that nature established the home, and yet maintain that a legislative enactment giving the ballot to woman will tear it down; they concede that woman is the best sculptor of human character, the grandest teacher of the citizen voter, and yet maintain that the product wrought is everything, the artist nothing—the pupil a king, the teacher a slave; they assert that all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed, and yet maintain that governments should be established and laws enacted with the consent of less than one-half of the people; they declare that taxation of man without representation is tyranny, but that taxation of woman without representation is a blessing; they trust the negro, the Chinaman, the Irishman, the German, the Hottentot and the south sea islander, if these choose to come to our shores, but they refuse to trust their own wives and mothers.—A Believer in Woman Suffrage.

Berlin Through English Spectacles.

An Englishman writes of Berlin: "It is the only modern city I know of that has managed to escape looking artificial. The labor of building greater Berlin has been most dexterously hidden. There is very little of the deadly uniformity, the Euclidian lines, the prosaic precision, one notices in New York. Berlin is something considerably better than a mere chessboard of brick and stone and mortar. The streets have a curved and enticing spaciousless; they are shaded with avenues of trees, faultlessly asphalted and clean with a cleanliness surpassing that of Paris. The architecture is rather too florid for English tastes, but for all that decidedly effective, and a drive from Unter den Linden to Charlottenburg will take one past a finer succession of houses than either London or New York can show."

Ladies and Children

who can not stand the shocking strain of laxative syrups and cathartic pills are especially fond of Little Early Risers. All persons who find it necessary to take a liver medicine should try these easy pills, and compare the agreeably pleasant and strengthening effect with the nauseating and weakening conditions following the use of other remedies. Little Early Risers cure biliousness, constipation, sick headache, jaundice, malaria and liver troubles. Sold by H. C. Giesler.

Weak Hearts

Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.

Mr. D. Kauble, of Nevada, O., says: I had stomach trouble and was in a bad state as I had heart trouble with it. I took Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for about four months and it cured me.

WHY WASTE ENERGY?

Woman's Rights Are Most Easily Secured by Giving Her the Ballot.

It has always been claimed by the opponents of woman suffrage that women could secure all the rights they desired or needed through their influence without the aid of the ballot. That these rights could be secured with one-quarter the outlay of time, money and effort if backed by the ballot is clearly shown by the ease with which they are secured where women have full suffrage. Mrs. Watson Lister of Melbourne, Australia, who is visiting in this country, is most enthusiastic over the results of woman suffrage in her country. She says that parliament now consults them on all bills bearing upon the interests of women. The author of the new divorce bill asked all the women's organizations to come together and hear him read it and to make criticisms and suggestions. Such a thing was never thought of before women had the ballot, although they were affected by such measures then the same as now. When a naturalization bill was pending, one clause of which deprived Australian women of citizenship if they married aliens, a few women went to the prime minister and protested, and that clause was altered immediately. When we held meetings, said Mrs. Lister, to advocate public measures that women wanted, we used to have to go out into the highways and hedges and compel the members of parliament to come in; now the difficulty is to keep them out. The chivalry which they used to tell us would be destroyed should women enter the political field has, on the contrary, been greatly increased. On the platform at one of our meetings the secretary happened to drop her pencil, and I saw the premier and several members of parliament scrambling to pick it up. A woman is never allowed to stand in a street car in Australia.

A Cure For Piles.

"I had a bad case of piles," says G. F. Carter, of Atlanta, Ga., "and consulted a physician who advised me to try a box of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. I purchased a box and was entirely cured. It is splendid for piles, giving relief instantly, and I heartly recommend it to all sufferers. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is unequalled for its healing qualities. Eczema and other skin diseases, also sores, cuts, burns and wounds of every kind are quickly cured by it. Sold by H. C. Giesler.

LITTLE THOUGHTS.

Disappointment is not a sufficient reason for discouragement.

Be satisfied with yourself if you will, but do not be self satisfied.

All things come to those who leave off waiting and go after them.

The claims to wisdom of all owls and most men rest upon their looks.

Good qualities, like good steel knives, grow dull of edge unless they are used.

Many a man who is offered a chance of a lifetime for a mere song cannot sing.

Your grip on success depends largely on the other things you are willing to let go.

When a man sets popularity before his eyes, he is likely to let principle out of his heart.

If we had no failings ourselves, we should not take so much pleasure in finding out those of others.

Good Secret to Know.

A man went to a nose and throat specialist the other day to have his cold cured. As he was paying well for the first treatment he said, "How long does it take you to cure a cold?"

"Three weeks," said the specialist.

"And how long would it take me to get well if I didn't come to you?" asked the alarmed patient.

"Twenty-one days," said the specialist.

And it wasn't until the patient was half way home that he suddenly stopped and wondered whether he ought to laugh or get angry. He finally decided that perhaps the secret he had learned was worth the price he had paid for it. It's a good secret to know.—Saturday Evening Post.

True Heart Disease is a Rare Thing

The cause of your palpitation is probably pressure arising from gas in the stomach—that is, gastric indigestion. A few doses of Cal-cura Solvent Dr. David Kennedy's new medicine, will cleanse away the foul accumulations and the heart will run quietly and keep good time. Write to the Cal-cura Company, Rondout, N. Y., for free sample bottle.

Business and Pleasure.

"So you want to change the door so it will swing the other way, eh?" said the carpenter. "Don't it work all right?"

"Yes, it works all right," grinned the dentist, "but I want it changed so I can have the word 'Pull' lettered on it. See?"—Indianapolis Sun.

Rheumatic Pains Relieved.

The prompt relief from the severe pains of sciatica and rheumatism which is afforded by Chamberlain's Pain Balm, is alone worth many times its cost. Mr. Willard C. Vail, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., writes: "I am troubled with rheumatism and neuralgia of the nerves and Chamberlain's Pain Balm gives relief quicker than any liniment I have ever used." For sale by H. C. Giesler.

Mad as a Hatter.

The phrase "mad as a hatter" has no reference to that respectable artist who designs the crowning article of civilized male attire, but relates back to the Anglo-Saxon word "atter" (an adder, or viper). "Mad" was formerly used as a synonym for violent or venomous and is still used in that sense in some parts of England as well as in this country. The phrase, therefore, strictly means as "venomous as a viper," the old form, "mad as an atter," having been corrupted to "mad as a hatter." "In that direction," the cat said, waving its right paw round, "lives a hatter, and in that direction," waving the other paw, "lives a March hare. Visit either you like. They're both mad."

A Remarkable Schoolroom.

One of the most remarkable schoolrooms in the world is surely that of La Petite Roquette, the Paris prison for juvenile offenders. The system of this prison is that of solitary confinement, the whole building being so constructed that each of the detached cells is overlooked by a warder stationed on a small observation tower. The schoolroom consists of 200 cells in the form of an amphitheater, from each of which the teacher, and the teacher only, can be seen. Each of the youthful offenders takes his place in silence, the first in the farthermost cell and the others in rotation. The closing of one of these cell doors opens that of the next cell. The voice of the teacher is the only sound to be heard in the building. Religious services are conducted in the same way, each of the inmates being able to see the officiating clergyman, and him alone.

One of the greatest blessings a modest man can wish for is a good, reliable set of bowels. If you are not the happy possessor of such an outfit you can greatly improve the efficiency of those you have by the judicious use of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They are pleasant to take and agreeable in effect. For sale by H. C. Giesler.

Sick headache results from a disordered stomach and is quickly cured by Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. For sale by H. C. Giesler.

Perils of "Self Doctoring."

Large numbers of people in prosperous circumstances die as sexagenarians from maladies which are evidences of degeneration and of premature senility, while many who pass this period go on to enter upon an eighth or ninth decade of life. The former class comprise those who have lived without restraint of their appetites and who have sought to allay some of the consequences by self medication, while the latter class comprise those who have lived reasonably and who, if annoyed by imperfect digestion, have sought relief by abandoning the errors from which it sprang.—London Lancet.

An Open Letter.

From the Chapin, S. C., News: Early in the Spring my wife and I were taken with diarrhoea and so severe were the pains that we called a physician who prescribed for us, but his medicines failed to give any relief. A friend who had a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrheea Remedy on hand gave each of us a dose and we at once felt the effects. I procured a bottle and before using the entire contents we were entirely cured. It is a wonderful remedy and should be found in every household. H. C. Bailey, editor. This remedy is for sale by H.C. Giesler.

Catching Kites In India.

In India, where those large birds, the kites, are common and fearless, boys amuse themselves by catching them in a way that is almost ridiculous in its simplicity. A line is stretched tightly a little way above the ground between two posts. Beneath it is laid a bait. The kite stoops and seizes the bait, but when he rises from the earth hits the back of his neck against the string. This makes him throw up his wings, with the result that some of the quills get over the line, and he is kept a suspended and struggling captive until the boys run up and release him.

An Elephant's Toothache.

I have in my possession an elephant's tooth, partially decayed. The animal belonged to my father, who was in the East Indian civil service at Moradabad, and as the tooth caused the animal so much pain that it interfered with its eating my father, with the assistance of the mahout's son sitting on the elephant's head and telling him to be quiet, extracted the tooth by means of hammer, iron bar and rope. The grateful animal used to like to have his gums dressed with tow and gin for days after the operation. As this happened before 1842, no anaesthetic could have been used.—London Field.

This remedy keeps the cough loose, lessens the severity and frequency of the coughing spells and counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. For sale by H. C. Giesler.

LIVER TROUBLE CURED.

Cal-cura Solvent, Dr. Kennedy's NEW Medicine, Drove the Disease Out of Mr. Larsen's System.

A proprietary medicine that is not without honor in the city where it is made, must be a good thing. No chance for deception there, where everybody knows all about the men who make it. In Rondout, City of Kingston, N. Y., where Dr. David Kennedy lived and practiced for so many years, his new medicine is highly regarded and many wonderful cures have been wrought by it. There is Mr. Christopher Larsen, the leading painter and decorator of that city, who says:

"I have not had a sick day since I was cured of kidney and liver trouble, and painter's colic, by Dr. Kennedy's new medicine called Cal-cura Solvent. It drove the disease out of my system, so it never came back. Nothing like Cal-cura Solvent to purify the blood." $1.00; all druggists.

A petition for the probate of the will of Martha Gillespie, deceased, of Volney, was filed in Surrogates Court Friday by her son, William W. Gillespie. In addition to her son she left two daughters, Mrs. Alice Whitaker of Volney and Mrs. Helen Ferris, of Big Rapids, Mich. To the daughters she bequeathed the entire estate and named her son in her will as its executor. Mrs. Gillespie's will was drawn Oct 4th, 1890.

Whereas, The Republican electors assembled in caucus, being keenly appreciative of the distinguished services rendered the County, State and nation by the leaders of the Republican party—in national affairs by our President, Theodore Roosevelt; in Congress by the Hon. Charles L Knapp; in State affairs by Governor Odell, Collector N. N. Stranahan and Excise Commissioner P. W. Cullinan; in the Senate by the Hon. Francis H. Gates, and in the First and Second Assembly Districts of this County by the Hon. T. D. Lewis and Hon. Frederick G. Whitney—we do hereby affirm the principles of the grand old party which has made our beloved nation great and respected throughout the civilized world, and

Whereas, Being desirous of of continuing in office the standard-bearers of the party who have contributed so largely to the present era of prosperity, it is hereby

Resolved, That the renominaton of the Hon. T. D. Lewis for Member of Assembly from this district meets with the heartly commendation of the electors, as he has fulfilled the duties of his office in a most conscientious and able manner, and his loyalty to the interests of his constituents and party justly entitles him to the preferment; and be it further

Resolved, That we are keenly appreciative of the extraordinary fitness and distinguished services rendered by the Hon. Merrick Stowell as County Judge. His ability for the exalted position he holds has been emphatically exemplified during the term of office now about to expire, and as Republicans, we unanimously endorse his candidacy for renomination and re-election to an office in which, by the general tenor of his actions, he has deservedly won the confidence and esteem of his fellow-citizens, regardless of party, and be it further

"THOSE HORRIBLE BELLS—UGH!"

Sir Henry Irving.

Oh! that bell! that HORRIBLE bell!
Awaking our conscience from sweet repose,
Ever reminding us we are of those Whose final resting place, sad to tell,
Will be in a place that rhymes with—well

We do not object to the engine bell,
The factory whistle or other noise;
We can even stand the racket of boys;
But the summons to church, it grates—and, well,
Constantly puts us in mind of ——

The old church bell! That AWFUL bell
Grinds our nerves as nothing else can,
E'en a fishman's horn or an old tin-pan.
We're for silence (on Sunday) as deep as a well,
So we will not be constantly thinking of ——

The terrible, HORRIBLE, old church bell!
We think it an outrage that even a minute
The Sunday folks are allowed to be "in it"
We're about to retire to some shady dell
Where there's nothing to always remind us of ——

The terrible, NERVE-RACKING old church bell!
Disturbing the peace of each Sunday morn
'Till C—— and I wish we'd never been born.
Our houses we both had better sell
Than be eternally reminded of ——.

MARRIED.

Last Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Hewitt in Oneida street, occurred the marriage of their eldest daughter, Helen Louise, and Mr. Leon Charles Abbott. The groom's father, the Rev. C. H. Abbott, was the officiating clergyman. Only the immediate families were present at the ceremony. Directly after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Abbott went to their future home, the Abbott homestead on the west river road, where they are now "at home', to their friends. The young couple have a host of friends in this vicinity who are extending hearty congratulations, in which the Times joins.

PRIZE SPEAKING CONTEST.

Excellent Program Presented by High School Students.

Stephens' Opera House was filled to the limit on Monday evening for the annual prize-speaking contest. More than the usual amount of interest had been manifested in the occasion, Owing to the popularity of the contestants and their nearly equal ability. The stage and surrounding columns had been decorated with flags and bunting, while fragrant flowers occupied either side of the stage. The Webb orchestra furnished the music, which added greatly to the enjoyment of the occasion.

Prior to the commencement of the program, Prof Fairgrieve announced that the prizes would consist of gold and silver medals presented by the Board of Education to the successful contestants; that they would be awarded at the close of the program, but would not be presented until commencement night, June 23. The judges selected were Dr. Mace of Syracuse University, the Rev. Charles Temple of Walton and Prof. J. S. Fox of the Phoenix High School.

It must have been exceedingly difficult for the judges to choose b tween so much of merit as was presented in the different numbers, but their verdict resulted as follows:

LADIES.

First Prize—Miss Alice Murphy.
Second Prize—Miss Florence Hunter

GENTLEMEN.

First Prize—Mr. Harry Scudder.
Second Prize—Mr. Bruce Dutton.

The other numbers on the program, each worthy of especial mention, were by the Misses Mabel Dominick and Gertrude Johnston, and Messrs. Gilbert Benedict and Robert Hull. Miss Jennie Wooley, the High School elocution teacher, had done conscientious work in drilling the speakers and more firmly entrenched herself in the affections of the patrons of the school.

Robert Johnson Drowned.

While swimming in the canal at the foot of Pratt street with several companions on Thursday evening, Robert Johnson, aged 14, was taken with cramps and instantly sank to the bottom. Coroner Cusack was summoned and after grappling for the body for about an hour, Undertaker Lynch succeeded in securing it. The deceased is survived by one sister, Mrs. William Dewey, of Oneida street, and his father, who resides in Auburn.

The Sea of Space.

The human mind cannot comprehend what is meant by the four little words in the expression "the sea of space." If the volume of "space" included within our solar system—which is perhaps but a single train of planets among hundreds of millions of a similar kind —were occupied by one single globe 5,600,000,000 miles in diameter it would be but as a feather in the marvelous spread of "vacancy" surrounding it. In fact, it has been calculated that in the space occupied by our solar system 2,700,000,000,000,000 globes the size of our earth could revolve, each at a distance of 500,000 miles from the other.

For a Hundred Years.

For a hundred years or more Witch Hazel has been recognized as a superior remedy, but it remained for E. C. DeWitt & Co. of Chicago, to discover how to combine the virtues of Witch Hazel with other antiseptics, in the form of a salve. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is the best salve in the world for sores, cuts, burns, bruises and piles. The high standing of this salve has given rise to counterfeits and the public is advised to look for the name "DeWitt" on the package, and accept no other. Sold by H. C. Giesler.

MARY FRANCIS TYLER TUCKER

EDITOR TIMES: The following poem is from the pen of Mary Francis Tyler Tucker, widow of Dr. Tucker, formerly well known in Oswego County. Mrs. Tucker's ability as a poet was recognized in Fulton about fifty years ago; she afterwards enjoyed a more than local reputation. I knew her well, and without doubt many of your readers will join with me in regretting her demise, which occurred at Niellsville, Wis., Jan. 15, 1902. Her son Frank and daughter Grace reside at that place.

THE NEED.

Before my feeble, faltering feet,
The nets of sin are spread;
And surging storms of sorrow beat
On my unsheltered head.
I grieve when other hearts rejoice,
I fall where others stand;
I need—I need a warning voice!
I need a guiding hand!

I know the right, I see the wrong,
And yet, alas! alas!
The resolutions cherished long,
Perish like summer grass.
Too oft I make the foolish choice,
And miss the good I planned,
For oh, I need a warning voice!
I need a guiding hand!

But though the skies are black above,
Though earth is rent below,
And the devoted ones I love
Into the silence go:
Yet shall I journeying rejoice,
Through clouds and shifting sand,
If I but hear the Father's voice!
And feel his guiding hand!

The Sign "SS."

The letters "ss." are to be found at the beginning of acknowledgments and other legal documents, but not one in a dozen can tell you what that cabalistic "ss." is for. The abbreviation is a contraction of the Latin word "scilicet," which is also a contraction, having originally been written as "scire licate," neither of which, you will note, has more than one "s." The word entire or in its abbreviated state is equivalent to the old English "to wit," still widely used, the design of both being simply to call particular attention to what follows.

FOR BLUE AND GRAY.

General King's Scheme of a Grand Peace Encampment.

General Horatio C. King of New York city, who has just been elected president of the Society of the Army of the Potomac, proposes a reunion of the blue and the gray under the auspices of that society and of the Grand Army of the Republic. The recent convention of the Society of the Army of the Potomac appointed a committee to appear before the next general encampment of the Grand Army and confer upon the wisdom of holding a peace convention of the blue and the gray. The idea of such a gathering is received with considerable enthusiasm by some of the veterans of the Union army, while others oppose it. Their main criticism of the plan is that it might involve the display of the Confederate flag and thus arouse animosities which are now generally buried and which will remain so if no occasion is given for resurrecting them. They fear that such a peace convention as proposed might defeat the very object for which it would be held. On the other hand, those who sympathize with the plan of General King hold that much good would come from such a gathering of the men who fought each other forty years ago.

General King is one of the best known of the veterans of the civil war and is in much demand at meetings of old soldiers, as he is well versed in the history of the war and is gifted as author and speaker. He has always been active in keeping up the memories that pertain to the struggle for the preservation of the Union. He was born in Portland, Me., in 1837 and graduated from Dickinson college, Pennsylvania, in 1858. He was admitted to the bar in New York in 1861 and the next year entered the Union army, leaving it in 1865 with the brevet of colonel. He has also received the medal of honor which congress grants on account of deeds of conspicuous heroism and is a member of the Medal of Honor legion. General King has been successful as lawyer, journalist and lecturer and has talent also as a musical composer. He was associate editor of the New York Star and publisher at one time of the Christian Union, later called the Outlook. He also published the Christian at Work. He is the author of various historical works.

AN ATHLETIC QUEEN.

Wilhelmina of Holland and Her Consort, Prince Henry.

Queen Wilhelmina of Holland believes that exercise is the best medicine. She went to Italy recently to improve her health and distinguished herself by making an ascent of Vesuvius. On one occasion, it being the birthday of her husband, Prince Henry of the Netherlands, she gave her court an outing to a popular resort and, accompanied only by her husband and mother-in-law, took an excursion on the bay of Naples in a rowboat, landing at evening for tea and later taking a long excursion on foot.

It has been said recently that the relations between the queen and her con sort are more cordial and affectionate than the public has often been led to believe. The prince has recently been promoted to the rank of vice admiral of the Dutch navy and lieutenant general of the army. There are but two vice admirals in the navy and but three lieutenant generals, these being the highest grades in the respective services.

THE BANANA.

Fruit That Ripens on the Plant Is Not Suitable For Food.

There is a vast amount of ignorance prevailing among intelligent people of the north concerning the growth, production and marketing of bananas. Many people imagine that the natives in tropical climes step out of their huts in the early morning and pluck and eat bananas from the plant, the same as they would oranges and other fruits. Bananas ripened on the plant are not suitable for food and would be much the same as the pith which is found in the northern cornstalk or elder. Bananas sold in the United States, even after traveling 3,000 miles in a green state, are every bit as good as bananas ripened under a tropical sun. This is probably true of no other export fruit.

The plant of which bananas is the fruit is not a tree, nor is it a bush or vine. It is simply a gigantic plant, growing to a height of from fifteen to twenty feet. About eighteen feet from the ground the leaves, ofttimes eight feet long, come out in a short cluster, from the center of which springs a bunch of bananas. These do not grow with the bananas pointing upward naturally, and if the stem grew straight they would hang exactly as seen in the fruit stores and grocers' windows. This, however, is not the case. The stem bends under the weight of the fruit, and this brings it into directly the opposite direction, with the large end of the stalk up and the fringes pointing toward the sun.

A word of explanation concerning some banana terms. Each banana is called a "finger," and each of these little clusters of fingers surrounding a stalk is called a "hand." The quality and value of each bunch depend on the number of hands it has. Some may wonder how the fruit is cut from the top of a plant fifteen feet from the ground. The native laborers cut the stalk part way up its height. The weight of the fruit causes the stalk to slowly bend over until the bunch of bananas first nicely reaches the ground; then the bunch is cut off with the ever ready machete and carried to the river or railroad for shipment. The plant at the same time is cut close to the ground. The banana is a very prolific producer of itself, and at every cleaning of the land it is necessary to cut down many of the young plants, or "suckers," as they are termed, in order that they may not become overcrowded up to a certain limit. The fewer suckers on a g. 'en area the larger the fruit they will produce.—Chicago Chronicle.

When He Gets It.

Visitor—Does mamma give you anything for being a good boy? Tommy—No, mum; she gives it to me when I ain't.

The Snake and the Eagle.

The American consul at Guayaquil, Ecuador, tells a good story about the difficulties he has had to keep a monkey on the consulate premises because of the depredations of the boa constrictors, and these agile little pets must keep a constant lookout for them. If Jocko drops into a doze he is likely to "wake up dead."

On the occcasion with which the story deals a monkey's life was saved by the picture of the American eagle. The consulate sign all over the world is a fine reproduction of the king of birds in full color and with outspread wings. A new sign had just been received and was waiting on a chair inside the room. A big boa constrictor chased the house monkey across the yard and through the open window. Jocko was making a good race, but a losing one. He was in the corner, quaking with fear and very near death's door, when his pursuer confronted the picture of the eagle in its menacing attitude. A snake fears eagles even more than it craves monkeys, and that particular reptile turned tail and went out of the window as quickly as if the devil was after it. That monkey was a smart monkey, and now whenever it wants to take a nap it goes to roost over the picture of the eagle.—Mexican Herald.

Why the House Fell Down.

An English traveler on his way from Morocco tells of a curious experience he had while making a trip by camel inland from Mogador.

"We had built a hut of wattle branches to shelter us from the wind. In the middle of the night I dreamed that I was shooting rabbits in the bracken of Essex and suddenly awoke to find myself covered with vegetable matter. Every one has experienced the curious feeling of hopeless bewilderment which comes over a man when he wakes in the dark among strange surroundings. I found that one of our camels had literally eaten us out of house and home, for he had broken his tether in the night, walked over and devoured the wattled branches of our hut to such an extent that the sides and roof collapsed upon our sleeping forms."

The Eye of a Giraffe.

Giraffes are the most difficult of all animals to take by surprise. No matter from what direction you may approach the giraffe is sure to discover you. It has been called the original "rubberneck." It is not generally known that nature, because of the height of its eyes from the ground, has supplied it with a talent peculiarly its own for making observations. As a matter of fact, a giraffe can see in all directions at the same time without moving its head. The eyes are large and prominent and so placed at the side of the head that, bulging out as they do, they are capable of seeing

THIS is the day of the natural waisted woman. The W. B. Erect Form has changed the American figure. It has supplanted discomfort with ease—it has banished the impossible and exaggerated figure produced by the old corset idea. It removes the strain of lacing from the sensitive parts of the body and throws all pressure upon the hips and the strong back muscles, supporting the stomach within the corset and not forcing it below the garment. The Erect Form is made in more models than ever before. There are forty distinct styles of this popular make, each meant for a distinct type of woman. Dealers in all sized towns and cities the land over, sell the Erect Form. Prices range upward from $1.

THE total number of delegates in the Republican convention at Chicago will be 982—two of them from the island of Porto Rico.

THE Republican party is rich enough in men who are fit to be President not to be obliged to force the nomination for Vice-President on a man who does not want it.

WHATEVER may be said of Colonel Bryan, it cannot be denied that he is a lingual artist. He keeps still some of the time and he always puts in his talk where it will do the most damage.

SENATOR BEVERIDGE will make one speech in Wisconsin during the campaign. Wisconsin doesn't need many speeches to keep it in the Republican column. The Senator is choice of his words and never speaks unless he has something to say.

A NUMBER of people very well known socially in New York have been subpoenaed to appear before Mr. Justice Jerome and tell what they know about Canfield's celebrated gambling place. Meanwhile Mr. Canfield has sold out and gone to Europe.

THE Democratic National platform will probably declare that the Philippine Islands ought to be free and to be endowed with self-government ultimately. Will Governor Boutwell or Colonel Bryan or Gamaliel Bradford or General Miles tell us what "Ultimately" means?

AT last the case of Postmaster Van-Cott of New York has been reached in the investigation of post office irregularities and the President has ordered that official to dismiss his son from the service and to refund the salary which he paid a relative who did nothing to earn it.

A CRANK with a loaded revolver was recently found in John D. Rockefeller's bible class in New York. He did not get a chance to use his weapon and was handed over to the police. Mr. Rockfeller kept cool when the discovery was made. He said it was hard to understand why the wicked so often live at ease and prosper, while the righteous suffer. It is a puzzle. Perhaps they have neglected to buy stock in the Standard Oil concern.

IT is a little early yet for the people to visit the St. Louis exhibition, since the farmers are still engaged in seeding; but later on the grand rush will begin. The fair really opened a month too soon, and thus far about $15.000 per day have been paid for admissions. But it may yet be a grand success, and save Uncle Sam the necessity of taking charge of the gates and putting the receipts into the pockets of those striped trousers.

THE 1,400 delegates attending the Young Men's Christian Association Convention at Buffalo, were delighted to receive a letter from the President, in which he commended them for not confining themselves to talking, but for trying to realize in some degree on this earth the ideals of christianity.

AUGUST 8 is the day set for the opening of the land to settlement in the Rosebud Indian Reservation in South Dakota. For the first three months the uniform price of the land will be $4 per acre. The drawings for choice of lots will begin at Chamberlain on July 28. In this manner 400,000 acres are to be disposed of. This is continuing the Republican policy of providing homesteads for actual settlers.

THERE is no truth in the insinuation which has been made that Mr. Ware, the Commissioner of Pensions, is anxious to resign his position on account of the extra work and criticisms as a result of the celebrated executive order number 78, granting pensions to Civil War soldiers over 62 years of age. It has long been known that the Commissioner never wanted the position; that he consented to take it only to oblige the President who threatened to "draft" him if he declined to "volunteer." Mr. Ware is well satisfied with the manner in which the office has been conducted under his administration, but he is nevertheless anxious to get back to his paper and law practice in Kansas.

LAST year scientific circles were agitated over mosquitoes, and some of the government entymologists incubated much literature regarding their destruction and the assertion that they innoculate human beings with fever germs. The mosquito still thrives and manages to get in his work. There has recently arrived in New Orleans, from Cuba, a consignment of 600 live mosquitoes en route to St. Louis. They are for the purpose of demonstrating the transmission of yellow fever germs. They are kept in a cage and fed on sugar and water. Their eggs are hatched in a short time and the species is kept in existence in this way, since the youngest take the place of those which die. It is assumed that microbes are bequeathed.

"It was Summertime in Dixie Land."

At present the biggest "song hit" in this country, was written by Edwin Kendall, and is being sung nightly in the principal theatres and music halls throughout this country. It is such a great "hit" that the predictions are fair that a million copies of this song will be sold during 1904.

Upon receipt of 25 cents in postage stamps, a copy of this beautiful song will be mailed to any address in the United States by the Theatrical Music Supply Company, No. 46 West 28th Street, New York.

ART EXHIBIT.

The Proceeds to Purchase Pictures for the Schools.

The City Hall has been secured for the week, June 6 to 10, for an exhibit of the best drawings, sketches, designs for monograms, initial letters, book covers, wall paper, examples of card board construction, paper folding, clay modelling, etc., made by the scholars of the public schools during this school year.

Miss Parmenter, supervisor of drawings, is busily engaged selecting and mounting the best work of about 1,000 scholars from the different grades in all the schools, and it is believed that this exhibit will excel the one given a year ago.

Mr. W. H. Patterson has offered two prizes of $2.50 in gold each, for the best collection of drawings submitted by two students in any grade. Arrangements have also been completed for securing about 200 Braun-Clement carbons which are the finest imported carbon pictures. They will prove a strong attraction to all lovers of art.

The Braun-Clement collection is composed almost exclusively of copies of famous paintings, with a few architectural subjects, and they are all framed in oak. Orders will be taken for duplicates, and the firm of Earl Thompson & Co, Syracuse, which is interested with Miss Parmenter in securing this exhibit for Fulton, will allow a discount to the school on all pictures sold, thus insuring an additional source of income. Our residents who are at all interested in the schools, in art or in the advancement of the students in the schools, are urged to liberally patronize the exhibit. The splendid work the children are doing will long be a revelation to many. The admission price has been put so low that all may go, even the children, not only once, but many times. Purchase your tickets of the children, as the money received in any room will be used to purchase pictures or statuary for that room and the room securing the most money will be given an additional picture. The east side scholars will be compelled to work or the palm will be given to a west side school, as the scholars are anxious to win the additional picture.

The exhibit will be opened to the public on Monday evening, June 6, at 7 o'clock and on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, on the following hours: 10 to 12 a. m.; 2 to 6 p. m.; and 7 to 10 p. m.

An admission fee of 10 cents for adults and 5 cents for children will be charged. Ice cream and cake will be served.

Reception and Silver Shower.

The reception and silver shower given by the Daughters of the American Revolution to about one hundred invited guests at the home of Regent, Mrs. James Vincent on Friday afternoon, was a most enjoyable, informal event. The house had been prettily decorated with tulips, jonquils, lilacs, lillies of the valley and forgetmenots, and silk flags were every where in abundance. Among the number were several Betsey Ross flags with the original 13 stars arranged in a circle upon the blue background. Over the arch way which divided the two parlors were portraits of George and Martha Washington surrounded with flags. The guests were met at the door by Harry Highriter in full dress suit, directed where to go. Miss Mary Webb presided over the silver tray upon which the silver for the new clock for the hospital was placed. The guests were cordially greeted by Regent, Mrs. Vincent, and vice regents, Mrs. T. D. Lewis and Mrs. George C. Webb; in fact each Daughter seemed to feel inspired to make most welcome all who called during the hours between 3 and 5, and to see that nothing was lacking to make the gathering pleasurable.

A short program consisting of the singing of America by all present, a reading—A romance of the Revolution — by Miss Shirley Vincent a vocal solo by Mrs. Thomas Hunter with Mrs. J. H. Howe as accompanist, and a reading, An old sweetheart of mine, by Miss Mollie Cavanaugh was very pleasing, after which social intercourse was indulged in. A punch bowl presided over by the Misses Helen Highriter and Gertrude Whitaker furnished refreshing drink during the afternoon.

Mrs. Fred Barlow, and the Misses Helen Osborne, Adelaide Schenck, Shirley Vincent, Georgetta Foster and Marguerite Case officiated in the tastily decorated dining room and served most delicious refreshments. Among thd out of town guests present were Mrs. L. W. Mott, the recently appointed Regent of the Oswego Chapter D. A. R. Mrs. N. M. Rich, president of Syracuse Chapter, Children of the American Revolution and Mrs. Albert Mowry of Oswego.

The members of Kayendatsyona Chapter wore their new badges for the first time on Friday and they were exceedingly pretty and appropriate.

About $25 was received toward the Hospital clock.

Memorial Day Exercises.

The Memorial sermon preached by the Rev. John Richards in the First M. E. church on Sunday evening, was a very able effort and was listened to with wrapt attention by the G. A. R., S. of V., Ladies' Aid Society and Columbia Circle, as well as a large concourse of other patriotic citizens. The music too, was especially appropriate to the occasion.

Mrs. James Vincent represented the D. A R. and in a brief, comprehensive address stated that the Daughters would join with the other patriotic orders in observing Decoration Day, and invited all who were interested to aid them in doing honor to the memory of Revolutionary heroes.

Memorial Day was most unpropitious and the gathering of people from nearby sections was not as large as usual. Stephen's Opera house was comfortably filled to listen to the address by Col. Cunningham of Seneca Falls. Music was rendered by the male quar ette and by the Presbyterian choir. At the conclusion of the ceremonies the Veterans accompanied by the S. of V., and the Order of American Mechanics proceeded to the cemetery where they covered with flowers each lowly green mound which concealed the remains of a once comrade in arms.

Dinner was served to the G. A. R. members and the S. of V., in G. A. R. hall upon their return from the cemetery, by Columbia Circle and the Ladies' Aid society.

APPRECIATION EXPRESSED.

Post Schenck, G. A. R., desires to publicly thank the citizens of Fulton and vicinity for their many kindnesses and courtesies on Memorial Day, and for the abundance of beautiful flowers.

We wish to especially mention the scholars of the various schools, and also the Ladies' Aid society which presented a beautiful wreath for the cemetery lot.

is but another name for

SCHLOSS CLOTHING

THAT'S the kind we handle. It is the "kind that helps you on in the world" and is ever "considerate of your pocket-book."

"Clothes don't make the man, but good clothes have secured many a good position," said a railroad president recently. "If you have $25 and want a job, it is better to spend $20 for clothes, $4 for shoes and the rest for a shave and a hair cut and a clean collar, and walk to the place, than to go with the money in the pockets of a dingy suit."

The above argument is all right, but you need not pay as much as $20 for clothes that will give you a prosperous appearance, when you can come here and walk off with a snappy suit like that shown in the picture

People Talked About

During his association with the late President McKinley as his private secretary, and also while occupying the same position for a time under President Roosevelt, Secretary George B. Cortelyou gained a knowledge of political affairs and party leaders which will stand him in good stead now that he is to be chairman of the Republican national committee and manager of Mr. Roosevelt's campaign for re-election. The position of private secretary to a president is one requiring no ordinary ability. A president of the United States is a very busy man, and he cannot meet the numerous demands on his time and energy unless a great deal of the burden is lifted from his shoulders by a secretary who is capable at a pinch of discharging the duties of president himself. George Bruce Cortelyou is that kind of a man. He showed such ability as private secretary that Mr. Roosevelt took him into his cabinet as first secretary of the department of commerce and labor. A year and a half of work in that office demonstrated that he had such fine powers of organization and executive work that it was decided to ask Mr. Cortelyou to act as chairman of the Republican national committee, a position held by the late Senator Hanna. Secretary Cortelyou is not quite forty-two years old, and less than ten years ago he was working as a shorthand reporter, being stenographer at that time to President Cleveland.

The Hon. William F. Powell, United States minister to the republic of Haiti and Santo Domingo, recently gave the people of the latter island some good advice. Ill health compelled Minister Powell to relinquish his duties as representative of the United States among the Dominicans, and on leaving them he told Provisional President Morales that the people of this country had much interest in Santo Domingo, desired to see the island prosperous and free from domestic strife and that no thoughts of annexation were entertained either by the people or the government of the leading republic of the hemisphere. Mr. Powell has been popular with the Dominican people, and much regret was expressed at his departure. He endeavored in his relations with the people to impress on them the fact that the United States firmly upholds the Monroe doctrine, that it will not consent to any territory on this continent passing under the control of a foreign power, but that a solemn duty rested on all republics to keep their obligations to foreign creditors, to respect concessions made to foreigners and to administer the resources of the country and further its prosperity. Mr. Powell, who remains minister to Haiti, is succeeded as minister to Santo Domingo by Thomas C. Dawson of Iowa.

W. F. POWELL.

Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana probably knows more about Russia than any other lawmaker in America. He has spent considerable time in the land of the czar and is the author of a very successful book, "The Russian Advance." Senator Beveridge was a logger in early youth and at sixteen was boss of a logging camp. It is said that to this day he is an expert logger. An amusing incident occurred during the last congressional campaign in Indiana. Senator Beveridge spoke at a certain town and was driving across country to make a train for the next appointment. At a point where the road crossed the railroad track the senator found some men trying to load heavy logs on a flat car. He told the driver to stop, and after watching the work for a moment he said to the man in charge:

"You have those skids and chains fixed wrong, and you are chocking that log wrong too. If you do things this way some of you will get hurt badly."

Resenting the interference of a stranger, the man replied:

"What do you know about it?"

"I will show you," said Senator Beveridge, getting out of his buggy. He then adjusted things properly, showing where the men were putting themselves in danger by a wrong method.

They watched rather sheepishly, but, finding the stranger in the right, promptly acknowledged it and thanked him as he climbed back in his buggy. Thereupon the local politician who was driving the senator told the logmen who it was to whom they were talking.

"Well, I'll be jiggered!" said the foreman, or words to that effect. "That settles it. I am for Albert J. Beveridge from this time on."

The Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks, who recently assumed the rectorate of St. Bartholomew's church, New York, is a man who takes an optimistic view of things. He does not believe, as so many clergymen appear to do, that this is an irreligious era or that the Christian church is less strong than in years gone by. Perhaps his cheerful views may be due somewhat to the fact that his own ministry has been very successful. During the twenty-five years he was rector of Emmanuel church, Boston, the number of communicants increased from 210 to 1,300. On the completion of his quarter century of service last autumn his congregation presented him with a gift of $20,000 as a recognition of his faithful work for that long period. Such acts tend to make a minister of the gospel feel that interest in the church is not dying out. Dr. Parks is a hard worker and made his church of great benefit to both poor and rich in Boston. He is a broad minded man. Speaking of tendencies in the Episcopal church, he says: "I believe that a larger proportion of the people attend church than was the case a quarter of a century ago. The Episcopal church has advanced in twenty-five years both in the number of its communicants and in the breadth of its thought."

M. Pelletan, French minister of marine, has a queer strike on his hands. It is a strike of bosses rather than of men, of captains rather than of crews. Minister Pelletan has pursued the policy of favoring the men, reducing their hours of labor in the naval arsenals, increasing their rations and in controversies between the men and their superiors usually deciding in favor of the man holding the lower rank. The effect of this seems to have been to undermine the discipline which is necessary on shipboard. The men in the naval arsenals having obtained shorter hours, those in the merchant marine, which in France is closely associated with the navy, also demanded them and insisted they should be observed, no matter what the condition of wind or wave. Next the men began to blacklist officers whose punishments were considered too harsh and to refuse to put a ship to sea which had such an officer on board. The result was the officers of various ships got together and resolved to strike—that is, to refuse to sail their ships unless assured that they would be supported in enforcing discipline. How M. Pelletan will deal with this unusual situation is a problem of the future.

Charles S. Deneen, the brilliant Chicago lawyer who recently demonstrated that his ambition was to secure the Republican nomination for governor in Illinois, has won his success at the bar largely because of his ability as a trial lawyer. He is very apt at repartee and exceedingly persuasive in an address to a jury. Mr. Deneen was born forty-one years ago in southern Illinois. He belongs to a pioneer family, and his father was in the Union army during much of his babyhood. He graduated in 1882 from McKendree college, Illinois, and in 1885 from the law department of the institution. Since that time he has practiced law in Chicago, and his firm enjoys a large practice in real estate litigation. He has represented his district in the Illinois general assembly. Politics is a recreation to him, but he has been active in the affairs of the Republican party in his state, and his influence in party management has in general been on the side of clean politics. His home is at Englewood, in the suburbs of Chicago, and he has a wife and several children.

Fleming D. Cheshire, who was recently sent as consul general of the United States to Mukden, Manchuria, went to that remote part of the world just in time to get into the thick of the fighting between the Russian and Japanese armies. The Japanese have been driving the Russians back upon Mukden, and the stand the latter are expected to make there will cause the city to be a center of interest the world over. As the representative of the United States the position of Mr. Cheshire will be important in case any American citizens suffer from the warlike conditions in that part of the world. Mr. Cheshire has had an experience of thirty years in the diplomatic consular service in China and is a thorough Chinese scholar. He was an attache of the legation at Peking for twenty years and acted in the capacity of Chinese secretary to Mr. Rockhill, of the United States state department, when that gentleman visited China as peace commissioner during the Boxer troubles. The United States is fortunate in having a consul of Mr. Cheshire's experience in the Manchurian territory at this critical time.

OPERATED ON THE KAISER.

Dr. Schmidt, Who Took Growth From Emperor's Throat.

Professor Dr. William Schmidt of Frankfurt-am-Main, who performed the operation on the throat of Emperor William of Germany, is the most eminent laryngologist in the German empire.

When the emperor began to be troubled with hoarseness last fall, his physicians, after examining his throat at once urged the necessity of calling in a throat specialist, and Professor Schmidt was sent for. He informed his majesty that there was a growth on the left vocal cord which must at once be removed.

Preparations were immediately made, under the seal of secrecy, to perform the operation, and Professor Schmidt was in the new palace at Potsdam for several days without even the servants being aware of his presence.

During the operation only the kaiser's physicians were present, the empress remaining in an adjoining room. The kaiser, it has since been learned, preserved the utmost coolness throughout the proceedings, and during the actual operation sat, as Professor Schmidt said afterward, like a wax model. No anaesthetics were administered, and after a local application of cocaine the operator excised the growth with a special spoon shaped scissors made to catch what they cut off. The growth was pronounced by Professor Orth to be an absolutely benignant polypus, and not cancer, which the emperor feared. The other physicians connected with the case were Dr. von Leuthold and Dr. Ilberg.

Professor Orth, who made the microscopical examination of the excised polypus, is the successor of Professor Virchow in the chair of anatomy at the Berlin university and is acknowledged to be one of the greatest authorities in the world on anatomical pathology.

Voting In the Commons.

In the British house of commons, as soon as the question to be decided is put from the chair, a clerk at the table sets in motion a huge sand glass, familiarly known to members as the "egg boiler," probably because it takes three minutes to run out. As the last sand runs through the glass the sergeant-at-arms instantly locks the massive oak doors of the chamber and only those members who have succeeded in getting through the doorway can vote.

How He Evaded the Suicide Law.

Lord Chief Justice Hankford of England, who lived in a former century, notwithstanding his high position became so tired of life that he determined to shuffle off this mortal coil. But he feared to commit suicide, because at the time a verdict of felo de se followed as a matter of course and the body of the suicide was buried at four crossroads, with a stake thrust through it. Further, he had to avert the consequences to his relatives of forfeiture of his goods, which was also one of the penalties for self destruction. He adopted a novel expedient. Several of his deer having been stolen, he gave orders to his keepers to shoot any person they met in or near the park at night who did not immediately stand when challenged. Then on a dark night he threw himself in the path of the keepers and, not answering the challenge, was shot dead on the spot. The stump of an old oak under which he fell still marks the scene of the tragedy and goes to this day by the name of Hankford's oak.

New York's Harbor Eagles.

Above the pier—close to it and together, as if for comfort—huddled a cluster of tugs, those curious, powerful, persistent little steam craft that ply back and forth and up and down, saucily and busily important, their rows of fenders trailing in the water, their black smoke bannering out behind. Often I had watched them nosing in and out among the heavier craft, nudging a great ocean liner into midstream and singly or together pushing or pulling some huge helpless bulk, as an ant or as two might seize and trundle a great dead bumblebee. Their power and their impudence had filled me with wonder. Viewing them now in repose, I was impressed by the fact, hitherto unconsidered, that upon almost every pilot house was a golden eagle with extended wings—a symbol of power and swiftness—and it was borne in upon me that the tug in truth is the harbor eagle, with all other craft for its prey.—Scribner's.

Trees and Rainfall.

Some persons ask if trees affect rainfall. That question is one on which foresters differ, but the large majority are satisfied they do induce rainfall. Vonmulere, Schenck and many others are emphatic in the claim that forests induce rainfall. It is certain they retain humidity to a great extent, and that alone would affect the rainfall; but the point on which all agree is the value of forests for the conservation of water, preventing floods or drought, distributing the water evenly the whole year. It is a matter of history in foreign countries that when forests have been destroyed the rainfall has been greatly lessened and more spasmodic.—T. P. Lukens in Maxwell's Talisman.

Plenty of Trials.

Sillicus—Life is full of trials. Cynicus—Yes, but there are not half enough convictions.—Philadelphia Record.

Weak Hearts

Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.

Mr. D. Kauble, of Nevada, O., says: I had stomach trouble and was in a bad state as I had heart trouble with it. I took Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for about four months and it cured me.

Kodol Digests What You Eat and relieves the stomach of all nervous strain and the heart of all pressure.

PEASANT WOMEN IN JAPAN.

They Not Only Do the Housework, but Plow the Fields.

The sewing in the kimono consists of one small and one long stitch, a species of artistic basting. There is reason in this, for whenever the kimono is washed it is ripped to pieces. This is perhaps why the Japanese, who bathe daily, wear such dirty clothes, while the Chinese, who bathe sometimes, wear such clean clothes. The kimono strips are dabbed up and down without soap, scrubbed with a brush and are ironed by drying them carefully on boards. One of the sights of a town are these boards, with their strips of silk leaning against the sides of the houses.

The peasant women not only do the housework, but out of door work as well. Like the coolies, they wear trousers and stand knee deep in the slush of the rice paddies, guide the water buffaloes at the plow or bind up the straw to dry on the trees. This is the Japanese idea of a haystack and makes the trees look as if they were wearing skirts.

One of the novel sights is the old women mowers, clipping the lawns with scissors as neatly as a lawn mower and stopping now and then to gossip over their tea. Both in China and Japan the tending of silkworms is not only done by women, but is regarded as an elegant duty. In China each year the empress inaugurates it ceremonially, as the emperor does the spring plowing. In each country the other important industry—the tea growing—is largely in the hands of women.

Two Strange Ailments.

Aphasia, or the loss of memory or comprehension of speech, is a queer complaint. A man who had forgotten his sister's name always referred to her as "that other woman." A person apparently otherwise in perfect health will substitute the name of one article for another totally different in the most ludicrous way.

Amusia is a form of aphasia which prevents the patient from remembering music. One amusiac, unconscious of the oddity, sang the "Marseillaise" throughout to the syllables "tan, tan, tan." On the other hand, another aphasiac, also a Frenchman, could speak but a single word, but could sing the "Marseillaise" correctly.

Thrown From a Wagon.

Mr. George K Babcock was thrown from his wagon and severely bruised. He applied Chamberlain's Pain Balm freely and says it is the best liniment he ever used. Mr. Babcock is a well known citizen of North Plain, Conn. There is nothing equal to Pain Balm for sprains and bruises. It will effect a cure in one third the time required by any other treatment. Dress of South African Tribes.

Fashions among the native tribes of South Africa are thus described by a recent writer: "During one season the people are all wearing safety pins as earrings; the next season no one will look at them, for pins are 'out' and buttons are 'in.' In one tribe blue spotted cotton handkerchiefs are all the rage, but fifty miles away no one will look at such things—they want cotton shirts. The only universal ornament, perhaps, consists in beadwork. Some tribes, such as the Fingoes and Zulus, take to beadwork more than others; the one thing they are all consistent in is a strangely good taste for color combination. They never indulge in a combination of gaudy colors, never affect an inharmonious color scheme, thus bearing out Ruskin's statement that bad taste in color does not arise in people who are left to themselves and nature." Hairdressing is a prodigious business among them. The process is assisted by a liberal use of red clay, and as the perfected work of art is expected to last a month the head is permitted to rest on the nape of the neck only when the owner sleeps.

His Hope.

Barber—Will you have anything on your face when I have finished, sir? Victim—I don't know, but I hope you'll leave my nose at least.

An Alarm Clock for 25c.

If you want to get up early and feel good all day take a Little Early Riser or two at bed time. These famous little pills relax the nerves, give quiet rest and refreshing sleep, with a gentle movement of the bowels about breakfast time. W. H. Howell, Houston, Tex., says "Early Risers are the best pill made for constipation, sick headache, billiousness, etc." Sold by H. C. Giesler.

Curious Bread Law.

There is a curious provision in the British bread acts of 1822 and 1836, which are still in force, to the effect that "every person who shall make for sale or sell or expose for sale any bread made wholly or partially of peas or beans or potatoes or of any sort of corn or grain other than wheat shall cause all such bread to be marked with a large Roman 'M.'" It would thus appear that the baker who chooses to put potatoes in his bread could escape the charge of adulteration by marking the loaf with this letter in the manner described.

GAVE HIM A START.

The Way Mark Twain Helped a Young Doctor to Win Fame.

"A certain prominent New York physician owes his start to Mark Twain," said a New York magazine editor, "and I saw him get it. It was many years ago, and the then young physician had just hung out his shingle. Mr. Clemens knew him quite well, and so did I, and we both believed that he had the real stuff in him, but the people hadn't learned of him yet, and his office was empty. One day Mark was in my place talking when a banker of social and financial prominence came in. Incidentally he mentioned the fact that his physician had died the night before with heart disease and he needed his services that very minute. Mark at once suggested that he give our friend a trial.

"'What kind of a man is he?' inquired the banker.

"'None better, I should say,' responded Mr. Clemens. 'He has never lost a patient.'

"'That sounds good enough. Give me his address, and I'll go to see him.'

"When he had left the office, I looked at Mr. Clemens inquiringly.

"'Oh, that's all right,' he said with a sly smile. 'I said he had never lost a patient.'

"'He never had one to lose, did he?' I asked reprovingly.

"'Of course not, but it wasn't necessary to say that.'

"As it turned out, the humorist was right, because the young fellow handled the banker's case with success and it was the kind of an introduction he needed."—Reader.

Crown of an Irish King.

One of the most highly prized relics in the British museum, that great storehouse of wonders and curiosities both natural and artificial, is the crown formerly used by the Irish kings in the coronation exercises which made them monarchs of the Emerald Isle. Strictly speaking, there were two of these Irish crowns, the one in question being that used by the MacMurroughs, a family who were anciently kings of Leinster. This regal relic, all that remains of the old Irish monarchy, is a plain gold band, rising to a kind of peak or point in front. It dates back to the middle of the tenth century.

Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets Better than a Doctor's Prescription.

Mr. J. W. Turner, of Truhart, Va., says that Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets have done him more good than anything he could get from the doctor. If any physician in this country was able to compound a medicine that would produce such gratifying results in cases of stomach troubles, biliousness or constipation, his whole time would be used in preparing this one medicine. For sale by H. C. Giesler.

For sick headache take Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and a quick cure is certain. For sale by H. C. Giesler.

The Only Thing He Lacks.

Almost every man honestly believes that if, in addition to his own ability, he could have the brass of his rival, no earthly position would be too high for him to reach.—Chicago Record-Herald.

No Competition.

The uniform success of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in the relief and cure of bowel complaints both in children and adults has brought it into almost universal use, so that it is practically without a rival, and as everyone who has used it knows, is without an equal. For sale by H. C. Giesler.

An Exquisite Bible.

The most beautiful volume in the Congressional library at Washington is a Bible which was translated on parchment by a monk in the sixteenth century. The general lettering is in the German text, each letter is perfect, and there is not a scratch or blot from lid to lid. Each chapter begins with a large illuminated letter, in which is drawn the figure of a saint, some incident in whose life the chapter tells. The book is in a perfect state of preservation.

When Animals Faint.

The little gray dog tumbled headlong into the area, and the maid who happened to be standing there closed the gate. When the dog saw she was safe from her two legged pursuers she toppled over in a dead faint. At any rate, the maid insisted that she fainted. The boarders, who crowded out into the area to help bring the little animal to, derided the assertion, but the doctor that finally joined the group said there was nothing preposterous about it.

"Of course she fainted," he said. "Lots of animals faint. Cats and dogs and even more stolid animals keel over in moments of fear and exhaustion. In the case of horses the prostration is generally attributed to sunstroke, but quite often they are knocked out by a plain, everyday faint instead of atmospherical excesses. Fowls faint too, and the birds of the air. In fact, it is hard to find any living creature that doesn't topple over in crucial circumstances. If the lioness of the jungle were up on etiquette she would be just as much justified in carrying a camphor bottle as the finest lady in the land."—New York Press.

Triumphs of Modern Surgery.

Wonderful things are done for the human body by surgery. Organs are taken out and scraped and polished and put back, or they may be removed entirely; bones are spliced; pipes take the place of diseased sections of veins; antiseptic dressings are applied to wounds, bruises, burns and like injuries before inflammation sets in, which causes them to heal without maturation and in one-third the time required by the old treatment. Chamberlain's Pain Balm acts on this same principle. It is an antiseptic and when applied to such injuries, causes them to heal very quickly. It also allays the pain and soreness. Keep a bottle of Pain Balm in your home and it will save you time and money, not to mention the inconvenience and suffering which such injuries entail. For sale by H. C. Giesler.

The Wild Boar of India.

General Sir Montague Gerard of the British army in his book of reminiscences has much to say about hunting. During his twenty years' residence in India he killed nearly 200 tigers, some of them dreaded man eaters, while his bags of other wild animals would be difficult to number. Terrible as is the tiger, the wild boar is even more savage and dangerous to attack. His tusks frequently grow to nine or ten inches in length and are as sharp as a razor. Tigers have a special dread of him, and in their encounters, which sometimes happen, he nearly always comes out victor. In pig sticking, which is always done with a spear on horseback, there is constant danger of his disemboweling horses, in which case the rider often suffers also. General Gerard had many narrow escapes.

Sued by His Doctor.

"A doctor here has sued me for $12.50, which I claimed was excessive for a case of cholera morbus," says R White, of Coachella, Cal. "At the trial he praised his medical skill and medicine. I asked him if it was not Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy he used as I had good reason to believe it was, and he would not say under oath that it was not." No doctor could use a better remedy than this in a case of cholera morbus, it never fails. Sold by H. C. Giesler.

Foliage and Colors.

The colorings of variegated foliage plants cannot be intensified by the use of colored glass. A curious Belgian horticulturist, after a long series of experiments, concludes that brilliant light favors high coloration of foliage. Trees and shrubs with golden leaves, when poorly illuminated—that is, through either blue or green glass—became green or in some cases blanched. In no case did the colored glass have a beneficial effect, most plants after a month's exposure putting forth smaller leaves, less vivid in coloring. In some cases a very apparent stunting of the plant's growth was observable.

Why Popcorn Pops.

Why does popcorn pop? The department of agriculture answers the question, which was propounded to it by a small boy. Popcorn pops by reason of the volatilization of the oil contained in the kernel by heat. Field corn does not pop because the outer portion of the kernel is more porous, permitting the escape of the oil as it volatizes, while in the case of popcorn a great pressure is developed in the kernel by the confined oil and the kernel is suddenly exploded and turned wrong side out.—Boston Herald.

Blood as a Tree Fertilizer.

For several seasons a very ancient walnut, with long, gaunt boughs, carrying much dead wood, had been struggling to live, but each year manifested signs that its life was fast disappearing. The keeper in front of whose house the tree stood took to slinging the carcass of each deer he killed over one of its boughs for dressing. During the process all the blood dripped on the ground and was absorbed. The following spring this tree put forth an astonishing crop of leaves, and in less than three seasons it was making new wood and showing all the vigor which had characterized it thirty years before. Its renewed youth was entirely attributable to the fertilizing properties of the blood with which it had been so liberally dressed.—Country Gentleman.

The Mississippi.

Generally speaking, the slope of rivers flowing into the Mississippi from the east is, on the average, about three inches per mile. Those entering it from the west have an average descent of about six inches per mile. The average descent per mile of the Missouri after it leaves the mountains is reckoned about a foot; the Des Moines, from its source to its conjunction with the Mississippi about 7.3 inches. The entire length of the Ohio shows a fall of even five inches. The Mississippi, from the mouth of the Ohio to the gulf, has a fall of about two and one half inches.

LORD STRATHCONA.

Energy and Generosity of the Famous Canadian Financier.

It makes rather a novel situation when a railroad magnate gives a person who is suing his road for damages the money to prosecute the suit. Yet that was what happened in the case of a poor woman who was suing the Canadian Pacific railroad, a leading factor in which is the eminent Canadian financier and statesman, Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal. A humble employee of the railroad had been killed, and his widow, who was left with a large family of children, brought suit against the road and won. The road appealed, and again the poor widow won. It was decided by the big corporation to carry the suit up to the highest courts in England. The widow had no money to maintain the contest longer. Her lawyer did not want to be beaten on it, and he wanted the poor woman to get justice, so he got up a subscription list to raise the money required, heading it with a substantial sum himself. Lord Strathcona heard about the circumstances of the case. His sympathy was aroused. "How much will it take to carry the suit to England?" he inquired. "Twelve hundred dollars, of which $500 is already subscribed," was the reply. "Then put me down for the balance," said the lord high commissioner. "That woman should have the money, and you get it for her if you can." And thus the generous railroad magnate helped to beat his own road.

LORD STRATHCONA AND MOUNT ROYAL.

But Lord Strathcona is as shrewd as he is generous, and his enterprise in the promotion of railroad projects has been of great benefit to the industrial development of the Dominion of Canada. It was as the last resident governor of the Hudson Bay company that Lord Strathcona rendered his first important services to the British and Canadian governments. His association with the Indians during this period enabled him to succeed in the suppression of the first Riel rebellion in the Red River settlements in 1869-70. In 1897 he was elevated to the peerage as Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal.

GIRLISH SUMMER FROCK.

WHITE NET DRESS FOR A GIRL.

to don one of sweet sixteen's summer creations, and all the world will be aware of the painful fact.

The illustration pictures a charming example of a girlish white net dress carried out in a modified 1830 effect. The skirt is fitted around the waist and hips with corded shirrings to form a yoke. The graceful fullness then falls to the knee, where it meets a deep, tucked flounce finished with a corded heading. The blouse bodice has a yoke of lace, around which is a tucked bertha of the net. The transparent sleeves are also tucked and fit into deep lace cuffs. A high girdle of white satin and chou of the same material finish this pretty costume.

Perjury as a Fine Art.

In India, according to an Englishman who lived there many years, the more educated class reduce perjury to a fine art. If a case is to come before the court they are not content with coaching their witnesses beforehand, but they take them to the very spot where the deed was committed and go through all the incidents of the assault or tragedy to be sworn to, so that the various subpoenaed witnesses are little likely to be caught by any cross examination, no matter how severe it may be. He cites an instance of the methods of the ordinary Hindoo lawyer. A British officer had made a number of purchases of a Parsee merchant, who charged him such unreasonable prices that he refused to pay the bill. The merchant brought suit, and the officer consulted a lawyer, who agreed to take the case and win it if he were not interfered with. This was promised. When the trial came off, the defense promptly acknowledged the purchase of the articles at the prices named, but produced half a dozen witnesses who swore that they had seen the bill paid.

PAINT WISDOM

It is poor economy to save a few cents on the price of the paint and then go to the expense and trouble of renewing it every year or two. The cost of applying it is just the same whether it lasts one year or five years.

ROGERS PAINT

may cost you a little more a gallon, but once put on you can depend upon it to last five years at least — it is guaranteed to do so — in most cases it will last ten years.

Again, Rogers Paint will cover more surface gallon for gallon than other paints, so that fewer gallons are required to do the same work. The difference in cost is easily made up by its greater spreading qualities. (Practical painters will appreciate this fact.)

ROGERS PAINT is made by the DETROIT WHITE LEAD WORKS in the finest paint and varnish plant in the world, and is proof against both rain and sun. It contains only the best of materials, carefully combined in those proportions which fifty years experience has shown to give the best results.

When you use Rogers Paint the element of chance is left out. You get the best paint that it is possible to manufacture with satisfaction guaranteed.

PUBLIC LIBRARY BUILDING—WHY NOT IN THE PARK?

The question of a site for our Public Library building is a matter of supreme importance and one which requires careful consideration. The Carnegie proposition is yet operative, but time is fleeting, and there is probably some limit to the patience of the donor, who has now waited for nearly two years for the citizens of Fulton to meet the necessary conditions of acceptance, viz.: to provide a site for the $15,000 building.

Mr. E. R. Redhead, as president of the Library Association, has been diligent in his quest and two locations are now being considered. An option has been secured on the Thayer property, corner of Cayuga and Third streets, and an excellent offer has been received from a syndicate which proposes to purchase the vacant lot on the northwest corner of First street and Broadway, divide the property into suitable building lots, one of which will be donated to the Public Library. This is not only an alluring offer but its acceptance would make it possible to improve resident property in that section of our city. The location, too, is good.

But after giving all such propositions the consideration they deserve, the question is asked, why should not our Public Library building be erected in the park? Could a more desirable location be obtained elsewhere in the city? A clear title to the property could be secured, and the ground surrounding embellished with flowers and plants—a necessary adjunct to such an establishment. The location is certainly ideal, and while it may be argued that there is little enough room now in our park for a suitable breathing place, yet the sacrifice, we believe, would be willingly made by our citizens, and a superb building could be erected with the amount donated for that purpose by Mr. Carnegie. No effort can be made to obtain the generous appropriation until a site has been secured, and title to the property must be such as to satisfy Mr. Carnegie's business representative that the building will be absolutely free from any entanglement immediate or remote.

Art Exhibit.

The Art Exhibit now in progress in the City Hall, is attracting the attention of all Fulton. There are over 1,000 pictures, copied boxes, examples of paper folding, etc, all done by students in the different schools, tastefully arranged by Miss Helen C. Parmenter and several of the grade teachers, and the display is a marvel and a delight to all lovers of the schools. The students show much talent and under the inspiring tutorship of Miss Parmenter, the best in their talent is being developed. Time is too brief to give a detailed account of the exhibit and forbids especial mention of any particular piece of work. The Braun-Clement carbons are well worth the inspecting and many orders for copies are being given by our residents. The exhibit will be open during the remainder of the week at the hours 10 to 12 a. m., 2 to 6 p. m., and 7 to 10 p. m. Cream and cake will be served during these hours.

New Street Planned.

The Board of Public Works has authorized the City Engineer to survey and furnish plans for the opening of a street between First and Second streets just south of the Episcopal church. The opening will probably be made on property belonging to Mr. Willis Nelson as it seems the most feasible plan. It will perhaps mean the doing away with the Episcopal parsonage in First street and two tenement houses in Second street, but as the property is least valuable to its owner of any in that vicinity, it will be the plan to be carried out. As soon as the Engineer completes his plans, steps will be taken by the city to secure the right of way.

Assault Charged.

During the festivities attendant upon the marriage of Mr. P. J. Tryon and Miss Lea Whiting on Wednesday evening, a crowd of uninvited guests appeared at the home and became exceedingly boistrous and annoying. When the racket became unbearable Fred Whiting, brother of the bride, attempted to quell the disturbance and it is alleged that he struck Frank Root over the head with a stick, rendering him unconscious. Whiting was arrested the following day on a charge of assault and brought before Judge Wilson. He asked for a jury trial and the case was called for this Wednesday. Attorney W. S. Hillick has been retained by the defendant and Attorney F. G. Spencer by the plaintiff.

PRIZE ESSAY.

Judges Award Miss Newell Prize for Paper on "Equal Political Rights" — Second Prize Given Miss Bishop. Contestants Complimented on Excellence of Papers Submitted.

Several months ago, it will be recalled, the Political Equality Club of this city offered a prize, "Motley's Rise of the Dutch Republic," to the High School student who should write the best essay on Equal Political Rights. The essays, four in number, were submitted last week, and they have been carefully read by the judges, with the result that the prize was awarded to Miss Maude B. Newell of No. 209 West Third street. The essay to which the judges refer in their report, and to whom they personally give a prize, is Miss Lena Bishop of No. 605 Ontario street.

To the Fulton Political Equality Club.

The undersigned, to whom as judges were submitted the essays written by members of the senior class of the Fulton High School in competition for the prize offered by your club for the best essay on the subject, "Equal Political Rights," respectfully report:

That we have unanimously awarded the prize offered by your club, "The Rise of the Dutch Republic," to the writer of the annexed essay:

That the essay written under the nom de plume, "Une Eleve a l'Ecole," in our opinion so closely competes with the essay to which your prize is awarded, and is so meritorious, particularly because of its strong and cogent argument, that we feel it is worthy of recognition in the nature of a prize. We therefore beg leave to donate a copy of "Brave Little Holland," to be given by your club as a prize to the writer of this essay.

The standard of excellence of all the essays submitted is so high, as to their argument and their literary merit both, that we feel we should not omit to say that they are a credit to their respective writers and a tribute to the work of the English department of our High School.

Respectfully submitted,

ELLEN R. LASHER,
ELIZABETH McCULLY,
HERBERT J. WILSON,
Judges.

EQUAL POLITICAL RIGHTS.

The woman's suffrage movement is one of the world-wide movements for equal human rights. It began by asking for women better work, higher education, better laws, and a voice in deciding these laws. During the years since this claim was first made, almost everything asked for has been secured, except the right to vote.

In each case the request has been a reasonable one. At the time machinery superceded the spinning wheel, only a few ill-paid occupations were open to women. The dressmaker earned a mere pittance of thirty-three cents a day; a tailoress, who went from house to house, received fifty cents a day; the school-teacher earned a dollar a week, and "boarded round." These were the only resources by which women could earn money. Thus these became over-crowded. It became necessary to open other positions which had hitherto been available only to men. This attempt was met with bitter opposition. Unions were formed with the pledge that they would work for no one who employed a woman. But in spite of jeers and threats, necessity forced her into these new occupations. She learned that whatever was fit to be done at all might be done with propriety by any one who could do it well.

The attempt for higher education was met in the same way. Women were told that their present opportunities were "good enough for women;" if they wanted to know anything, ask their husbands at home. But they were not instructed what to do if the husbands did not know. The capacity for education, however, forced a way. Oberlin College opened its doors to men and women, white and black. To-day women stand in the front rank of our scholars.

The demand for kinder laws was enforced by the exhibition of the laws themselves. The old law was shown to be disgraceful in its treatment of woman. She had no rights whatever; she could own nothing she earned; she had no right to her own children; all her personal property was given to her husband; she could not make a contract nor a will. Her husband might correct her or restrain her of all her liberty. If, under all this, she lost her temper, he had the legal right to take her and have her publicly soused in the river to sweeten her temper.

Many excellent men united with women in an effort to better the laws. But the majority of men and women opposed all change. To the plea that the law ought not to deprive a married woman of all property, a woman answered that she would not give herself to anyone to whom she would not give her property. The men objected that if the husband had to support the family, he should have the wife's money. After years of lecturing, pleading, holding conventions and writing, the laws were modified. The gains made thus far, though resisted strongly at first, are gladly accepted by women, and men acknowledge the justice of them.

The plea for the remaining step in the same direction—the right to vote—rests upon the clearest grounds of equity and good sense. It is only right that those who obey the laws should have a voice in making them. It is only right that those who pay taxes should have a voice as to the way in which their money shall be spent. Women are becoming individuals; their point of vision, added to that of men's, promises a better perspective in public affairs.

Our danger in the Republic is not from a general, but a class ballot. If all were obliged to vote, good would over-balance evil. Women are always conservative. General Grant's motto, "Let us have peace," is for their interest. Arbitrations instead of strikes and wars would be the outcome of their experience and observation. Women are for home protection every time. The corner-stone of the State is the hearth-stone. The self-registered opinion upon questions of common good will strengthen, ennoble and dignify public opinion as expressed in the ballot-box.

The objections against this right of women are only the ones which have been used for every other advance of women, namely: that it would break up the family; that most women do not want it; that the home would be neglected. Those who have heard these same arguments against better occupations for women, against better education, pay no attention to them when hurled against equal political rights for women.

A few years ago women could not vote anywhere. To-day they have school suffrage in twenty-two States, full suffrage in Wyoming and Colorado, municipal suffrage in Kansas and municipal suffrage for single women and widows in England, Scotland, Canada and most of the British provinces. The common sense of the world is steadily working on the side of woman. All previous changes for the better in woman's education and rights have contributed to pave the way for this.

"Let us then be up and doing
With a heart for any fate;
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait."

500 COOL CUSTOMERS

There are now more than 500 users of gas in Fulton, each one of whom is delighted with her range; nothing surprising about this, considering that gas is the quickest, the cleanest and the cheapest of all fuels for cooking and baking. Then, too, there is the delightfully cool kitchen—something that certainly counts for a great deal during the exhausting Summer season.

WHY NOT KEEP COOL?

... JACK.

The following ... taken from the ... of the Holiday Magazine, ... in New York, has a peculiar ... for the people of this city, in... as the article refers to the son ... and Mrs W. G. Bennett, who ... visiting in New York at the time ... mentioned:

"One of the editors got on a car a few days ago late in the afternoon. A jolly roly-poly little boy who was kneeling on a seat looking out of the window politely gave the editor his seat, moving very close up to the lady he was with. It was growing dark, and the boy was apparently tired with a day's shopping with his mother and aunt, and it was very hard to keep still during the long ride. Some grown people are nervous, and restless children make them have headaches, but this editor likes any kind of a child. After a few minutes, when the little boy had squirmed and bounced and wiggled a good deal, the editor said, right in his ear (for he had wiggled very near):

"I wonder what your name is."

Two bright eyes above two rosy cheeks flashed over his shoulder.

"Arthur," he said, showing lovely white teeth in a tired little smile.

"Oh," said the editor, "I thought it must be Mister Jumping Jack."

I wish you could have heard his laugh then; it was more than jolly—he forgot he was tired and he forgot to wiggle—he saw the joke and he enjoyed its being about him.

"How old are you?" asked the editor.

"I'm six," said Arthur, "and I have three pockets in my coat."

"Dear me," said the editor, "and I haven't any. Couldn't you spare me one?"

Arthur looked puzzled; he didn't see how he could give it without a pair of scissors. "It would be just a hole if I did, and I'd lose the pennies I earned," he said troubled.

"Pennies? How did you earn them?" asked the editor.

"I sang a song for Uncle John and said a piece for Aunt Cora and did an errand for mama," said Arthur.

"That is fine," said the editor. "I wonder if you have ever seen the Holiday Magazine?" He shook his head. "If you will tell me where you live," added the editor, "I will send you one through the mail."

Arthur was delighted. "Send it to Fulton, please," he said. My name is Arthur Turner Bennett, 506 Buffalo street."

The editor wrote this down while Arthur was quiet for a minute. "New York is a long distance from home, isn't it?"

I'd like to be in California—that's where grandpa has gone," said Arthur. "Say, did you say you would send two of those?"

"Do you want two?" asked the editor, laughing.

"Why you see," explained Arthur, slowly, "I thought, perhaps, you said you would send two, and I have a little brother. Could you send it to him? His name is Bert Malcolm Bennett."

"Indeed I will send you each one," said the editor, "and I know you will both like it."

Then, as the the editor rose to get out, Arthur shook hands like a little gentleman.

"Thank you very much. You'll surely send them, won't you?" he added anxiously.

"Indeed I shall not forget," said the editor. "Goodbye."

The editor did not forget. I wonder how Mr. Jumping Jack and little brother Bert enjoyed receiving the magazines!

He Worked the Aurora Borealis.

George Bartlett Prescott was one of the pioneers of the science of electricity in America. He began the study of electricity in 1846, when he was sixteen. With Edison, he owned all the patents in the quadruplex system both in this country and in Great Britain. He introduced the duplex system in 1876 and the quadruplex two years later. Prescott made certain that the aurora borealis was an electrical display, and while in the Boston office on one occasion he disconnected the batteries and operated the wires with the atmospheric electricity.

The following information will be found useful in making estimates:

The great Fair at St. Louis will open April 30th, 1904, and close November 30, 1904, and will no doubt attract a larger aggregate number than ever visited any previous World's Fair. The U. S. and governments of the various States are devoting twenty millions of dollars to the erection of handsome buildings, and filling them with exhibits, while foreign countries are represented to the number of forty-seven.

The Democratic National Convention will be held in St. Louis July 6th, which will doubtless draw a larger number of visitors to the Fair on July 4th than would otherwise attend.

The Fourth of July attendance at Chicago was 283,273, Omaha, 38,618, Buffalo, 71,024.

Cut out carefully along this line and mail to us promptly.

Prohibition Convention.

The County and First and Second Assembly district conventions were held on the Fair grounds on Friday. There were about two hundred delegates present from the different towns and cities in the county. A campaign fund of $632 was raised and the leaders in the party are delighted with the amount. Dinner was served on the grounds at noon by the W. C. T. U.

Delegates were elected to the State convention which will be held in Oswego on June 14, and they were instructed for Alden W. Young of that city for Lieutenant Governor. The Senatorial convention will also be held in Oswego on June 15, and delegates were selected to it. Frank Woodbury of Orwell was nominated for Member of Assembly from the Second district, and Judson F. Stevenson of Hannibal from the First.

The following county nominations were made: County judge, C. E Pitts of Oswego; special surrogate, S. M. Baker, New Haven; coroner, Dr. Hayes of Altmar; county treasurer, A. P. Bradt of this city.

The convention adopted the following platform: Prohibition of the liquor traffic, equal suffrage, protection from trade conspiracies, honesty and economy in goverment.

Opium Smoking in China.

It is generally understood that a large percentage of the Chinese are addicted to the use of opium. This is a misconception. The belief that the Chinese of rank and culture use the drug is due to the prominence given to the cultivation of the plant and the manufacture of opium in the Celestial empire. As a matter of fact, a native who uses opium is looked upon by his superiors as we discuss and classify our drunkards.

The idea that a pill will produce an exhilarating effect on the beginner is also erroneous. One must be accustomed to the use of the drug to get the pleasant effect. The first pipe to an American produces nausea. Two or three will make him sick. If he can stand eight or nine of these "pills" he is apt to dream, but the awakening is always an unpleasant reality.

ED. PINAUD'S

EAU DE QUININE

HAIR TONIC

A Positive Dandruff Cure!

is the only Hair Tonic I have in my shop. It's the best! I have used one hundred other sorts on a thousand different heads, but never with the wonderful results that Ed. Pinaud's Eau de Quinine has given. At first sight you would think it to my advantage to use a cheap tonic, but when I tell you that one bottle of Ed. Pinaud's Eau de Quinine goes as far as three bottles of any other preparation, you can see that after all this is the best value I can get for the money.

For women, men and children. It cleanses the roots—feeds the cells and strengthens the hair—holds its color and gives a beautiful gloss.

THE Chicago Republican convention promises to be a regular love feast. Up to date, out of 926 Republican delegates chosen, 814 have been instructed to vote for the President.

IT is a remarkable fact that Southern boys carry off all the highest honors at West Point this year. The States at the head of the list are Mississippi, Tennessee and North Carolina. Evidently the cadets appointed from the Southern States have a full appreciation of the advantages which West Point offers.

NEW ENGLAND is preparing to go into the third battle of Bull Run with almost as many soldiers as she did in the first. The state of Connecticut expects to send 2,500 men. There is a rumor that in Virginia the farmers wish to have their hen houses and crops insured.

IT has been openly and repeatedly stated by the Democrats that the Parker boom is simply a club with which to knock in the head the Hearst boom. Now there is a Tammany boom of McClellan to be used as a club to kill the Parker boom. When Willie comes marching home, mother, and the field of battle is surveyed, it will resemble Donnybrook Fair—all clubs and broken heads.

THE dulness of the speculative market in New York City can be imagined when it is known that no less than 2,500 clerks enployed in Wall street have been discharged. The people for the present refuse to buy stocks. The business of getting rich quick, of exploiting trusts and watering stock, has been so badly overdone that a reaction has set in, the result of a loss of confidence. After all, honesty, and make haste slowly, win in the long run.

FEW people realize how much agriculturists lose annually from the depredations of insect pests. It is estimated by government officials that the cotton-boll weevil destroyed last year $15,000,000 worth of cotton. The potato beetle cuts off $10,000,000 yearly from the potato crop. The cotton worm has caused a loss of $30,000,000 in one year. And in some years the Rocky Mountain locust has eaten up crops to the amount of $155,000,000. Fortunately the President takes a deep interest in the Department of Agriculture which has on hand the great task of devising ways and means to destroy these pests. All political parties agree that Secretary Wilson should be well seconded in his efforts to help the farmers.

In speaking of Miss Florence Lura Distin's number on the program at the Commencement soiree held in Crouse college, Syracuse University, on Monday evening, the Post Standard says, "A very exacting number was the Beethoven concerto in E flat, two movements of which were played by Miss Florence Distin of Fulton with orchestra accompaniment. Miss Distin's execution and reading of the concerto were remarkable. Prof. Frey conducted." The Herald says, "The adagio and rondo from Beethoven's concerto in E flat were given by Miss Florence Lura Distin with orchestra accompaniment, under the leadership of Prof. Frey. Miss Distin's interpretation of this masterwork was characterized by technical ability, intellectuality and strength. She is bold and liberal rather than subtle, and in the control of the dynamics shows a broad sweep to the uttermost limits of sound."
